Gun, Pot Charges In Boat Raid

Drug agents looking for marijuana boarded a 107-foot converted subchaser anchored off Tiburon last night and found an arsenal of weapons, arresting six young persons aboard.

Lt. James C. Schwedhelm of the Marin Drug Abuse Bureau said narcotics agents suspected the boat was being used to haul marijuana when it appeared first in Sausalito about three weeks ago. It later was moved to the mouth of Tiburon Harbor.

"A bunch of kids on a subchaser" seemed odd to the officers, Schwedhelm said, and undercover agents who soon made friends with the boat's occupants arranged for a sale of marijuana.

An agent who went aboard the board, named the Makaira, thought he saw a machine gun aboard and a search warrant was obtained to look for illegal weapons.

ARRIVING AT SHIP

Just before dark yesterday, eight federal, state and Marin agents in a borrowed speedboat arrived at the gray ship, which is out of Los Angeles, and were told, "we've been expecting you."

Although the agents found only a small quantity of marijuana, they said "there were guns everywhere." Handguns in holsters hung from all the bunks of the ship, Schwedhelm said, and the agents rounded up about 40 revolvers and pistols and about 10 rifles, many of them loaded. A large quantity of ammunition was also found.

The agents believed the guns had been taken in trade for marijuana, which the agents think the boat's occupants were importing from Mexico.

The suspected machine gun turned out to be a rifle resembling one, he said. Also seized was an army sniper scope. All guns will be checked to determine if they are stolen, Schwedhelm said.

One man arrested in a car ashore had two loaded guns under the seat, Schwedhelm said. He was identified as Jerald Noel McDonald, 30, of no known address.

OTHER BOOKINGS

Others booked into Marin County Jail were Robert Allen Drake, 19, who gave his address as Michigan; Joan Heath Edwards, 21, who said she is from Australia; George William Lawson, 28; Vicki Jo Hartzell, 19, and James Lee Harris, 25, all of no permanent address.

Bail had not been set this morning and the arrested persons were to appear in Marin Municipal Court later today. Drake and Harris were booked on suspicion of selling marijuana, Miss Edwards on suspicion of offering to sell it and the others on suspicion of possessing it. McDonald was also accused of having a tear gas weapon.

BOATLOAD OF GUNS — A narcotics agent examines the arsenal taken in a narcotics agent raid on the converted subchaser Makaira, anchored off Tiburon. Some 40 pistols and 10 rifles, along with ammunition, telescopic sights and a U.S. Army sniperscope, were confiscated.

DECISION BY SATURDAY

Dr. Peck Still Undecided About Mental Health Post

Dr. Harris B. Peck said yesterday he still has not made up his mind on whether to take the job of director of Marin's Community Mental Health Center but added he would announce a decision by Saturday.

The New York psychiatrist's continued insistence that he remains interested in the post followed by one day Supervisor John F. McInnis's statement that the job may no longer be open to the doctor.

Peck, meeting informally yesterday with two local mental health leaders, continued to leave suspended the question of whether he would accept the center's top slot.

He first told Trude Baum and Rae S. Taub of the Marin Association of Mental Health he was "leaning away" from acceptance because the job did not include teaching functions and his wife was still reluctant to move from Southern California. Peck, 55, is teaching at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical School.

Later he asked the two mental health leaders what his chances were "of gaining a substantial degree of public confidence and support to launch an effective program" should the $30,000 a year job be accepted.

Peck was told "the psychoanalytic group in the county would give you immediate acceptance," while the community at-large would take a "show-me" attitude.

McInnis, informed Tuesday by County Administrator Alan Bruce that Peck had failed to accept the position within the agreed-upon time period, said, "As far as the doctor is concerned, the case is done with — finished."

Peck was the near-unanimous choice of the Marin Hospital District board and the county supervisors June 29 for the position held by Dr. Donald P. Wilson, who has resigned. Peck was given 10 days to accept the offer.

"I never refused the job as some reports have indicated," the doctor said yesterday. "I was told Monday by Bruce and Bolinger (hospital administrator Ray K. Bolinger) that they were starting to recruit again for the job."

He quoted Bruce as saying, "We will get back some of the people who wanted the position."

Bolinger, reached following yesterday's meeting, said should Peck accept the original offer, he would still face "reconsideration" by the supervisors and hospital district board.

Bolinger said he did not know whether the "reconsideration" would involve only Peck or include the other 18 applicants.

He said the screening committee which had unanimously recommended Peck would meet tomorrow at noon no matter what Peck's decision. He refused to discuss action planned at that meeting.

Peck spent about an hour yesterday afternoon answering questions about his impression of the county's mental health program.

He said he had only a fragmentary view of the situation in Marin's program, which has pitted supporters of the psychoanalytic concept against those supporting behavior therapy.

He said his impressions came from "biased" telephone callers, adding that he had been refused a meeting with the "community" by Bruce and Bolinger until he accepted the position.

Bolinger later said public forums would have been set had Peck accepted the position. None was set beforehand because the doctor had had ample opportunity to discuss the situation with the two boards and the screening committee, Bolinger said.

Christopher Denies Poll Influence

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher testified today an accusation that his organization paid $16,000 to influence a public opinion poll hurt his unsuccessful 1966 campaign for governor.

Christopher, who ran second behind Gov. Ronald Reagan in the Republican primary, was on the stand in pollister Mervin Field's $4 million libel suit against William Penn Patrick.

Patrick, a San Rafael cosmetics manufacturer who finished fourth, charged during the campaign the Christopher organization "bought" Field's California Poll for $16,000.

Christopher, former board chairman of Christopher Dairies, said he felt Patrick's charge was "just a reckless statement made in the heat of the campaign."

But he testified it had hurt his campaign against Reagan because "my own personal integrity had been impugned."

Christopher's testimony centered around a newspaper report that he and Reagan agreed in the summer of 1965 that whoever was the weakest candidate against incumbent Democrat Edmund G. Brown in early 1966 would withdraw and support the other Republican.

Christopher testified he met twice with GOP leaders in Los Angeles and left understanding that whichever candidate had the strongest support in Janu-

I-J Employee's Wound Fatal; New Charges

Allan Daly Loses Battle To Survive

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Independent-Journal employee Allan Wesley Daly died at 8:10 a.m. today at San Francisco General Hospital.

The 30-year-old systems design engineer in the I-J's production department died of complications arising from a gunshot wound in the abdomen suffered when shot at close range by one of two young men who burst into his home on Independence Day.

His doctor, F. William Blaisdell, had called it "a matter of incredible luck" that Daly was not dead on arrival at the hospital.

Frank Thurber, of San Bruno 45-year-old member of a union affiliated with the union striking the I-J, will be charged with murder in the case, homicide Lt. Charles Ellis said today.

He said the grand jury would hear the case July 27.

ARRESTED AGAIN

Thurber, who was arrested July 6 along with two San Bruno teen-agers, had been free on bail since Friday, but Ellis said he was rearrested in San Bruno today. He was booked into city prison at 10:30 a.m.

The youths, Larry G. Rutherford, 16, and Richard A. Wamsley, 17, are being held in juvenile hall. They are scheduled to appear before Juvenile Court Judge Francis Mayer July 29 on suspicion of robbery and attempted murder, but Ellis said they also would be charged with murder.

Daly was shot at his San Francisco home by two men who entered, slugged Daly with a metal pipe and shot him while his wife was searching the kitchen for money the men had asked for, police said. The gunmen took $5 which was recovered outside the house by police.

PRIOR ATTACKS

Prior to the shooting, Daly's home had been attacked twice by firebombers and the tires of his car slashed on another occasion.

Four days after the shooting, a firebomb was thrown into the home of two nonstriking printers in Petaluma.

I-J general manager, Norwin Yoffie, said, "It is not possible for me to express my sense of loss and my horror at the mindless act that resulted in his death."

Officials of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, which struck the I-J Jan. 7, have denied any connection with the shooting. Union secretary G. M. Bachich said today of Daly's death, "All I can say is that we're sorry that he passed away. Any human being would be sorry that a man died."

HEART STOPS

The hospital said Daly died after his heart stopped and was restarted by a surgical team several times last night. He had suffered liver failure and lung problems yesterday, according to a hospital spokesman.

He also may have contracted pulmonary pneumonia, the hospital said.

Collegians Split On Why Campuses Boil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The President's Commission on Student Unrest, in its initial look at dissent, has been given almost as may reasons for the problem as it had witnesses: boredom, the Vietnam War, racial prejudice, hypocrisy and the Nixon administration.

Almost the only agreement came from two student leaders, one black and one white, who predicted at Wednesday's opening hearing the commission's report would end up on the shelf along with the recent reports from similar commissions.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said campus violence could not be separated from the Indochina War, and suggested it was no coincidence shooting deaths of four Kent State University students came "hard on the heels of our invasion of Cambodia."

Charles F. Palmer, 23, president of the National Student Association which organized student strikes after the Cambodian incursion, disagreed Cambodia was the catalyst. Despite Nixon administration attempts to bill the 1969-70 academic year as a "quiet year," Palmer said, there were more disorders than ever and they began long before Cambodia.

Palmer said the real cause of student unrest stemmed more from the refusal of college administrators to give students a say in their affairs and to stop treating them like children.

Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, president of San Francisco State College, tended to agree, but his solution was to let the "bored" bright student troublemakers out of their college "playpens" to spend two or three years working in the "real world" so they would appreciate a college education.

This drew fire from several commission members, and under questioning, Mill Valley resident Hayakawa amended his statement to exclude Negro student dissenters who he conceded had legitimate demands for more of the "fruits of our society."

Hayakawa suggested compulsory military or civilian service to the nation from all young

UAW Takes 1970 Demand List To Ford

DETROIT (UPI)—The United Auto Workers today took the second step in the 1970 labor contract negotiations by presenting Ford Motor Co. with a package of demands that would cost the "Big Three" auto builders $3 billion over three years.

Leonard Woodcock, the new UAW president, made the presentation to Malcolm Denis, a Ford vice president in charge of the labor negotiations.

The UAW, the nation's second largest union, represents 166,000 Ford workers, including 13,000 in Canada who also will be covered by the new pact.

Woodcock presented an identical list of demands to General Motors Corp. Wednesday, and he plans to move on to Chrysler Corp. Friday.

National Emergency In Britain

LONDON (UPI)—The British government today proclaimed a state of national emergency to deal with a nationwide dockworkers strike that brought the first national ports shutdown in 44 years.

The proclamation was signed by Queen Elizabeth II at a special session of the Privy Council a few minutes after she returned from a visit to Canada.

The state of emergency was announced in a message from the Queen to the House of Commons, read to it by the speaker, Dr. Horace King.

The message said: "Her majesty has deemed it proper by proclamation dated July 16 and made in pursuance of the emergency powers act of 1920 to declare that a state of emergency exists."

More than 200 ships already had been stranded by the strike in this nation which depends upon its exports to live and which imports most of its food. Under the emergency decree troops can handle the longshoremen's work.

The Queen's message said, "If it appears to the Queen that there have occurred or are about to occur events of such a nature as to be calculated, by interfering with supply and distribution of food, water, fuel or light, or with means of locomotion to deprive the community or any substantial proportion of the community of the essentials of life, Her Majesty may by proclamation declare that a state of emergency exists."

This was the first declaration

Marin Shakespeare Festival Opening Set

Curtain time for the opening night presentation of "The Tempest" — first of four season productions—is 8 p.m. tomorrow and Saturday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

The theater, situated amid 26 acres of forest, has a pool separating the terraced seating from the acoustically engineered stage.

A fund-raising "Feast to Good Will," featuring Elizabethan dining, dancing under the stars and dinner entertainment, will be held from 5 to 11 p.m. Saturday at the San Rafael Elks Club, 1312 Mission Avenue, to help finance the productions.

Other performances of "The Tempest," directed by John Olon Scrimgeour, will be held July 26, August 6, 7, 15, 23, 27 and 28 and September 5, 13, 17, and 25. A special performance will be held August 9 at 2 p.m. at Stern Grove, San Francisco.

"Taming of the Shrew," directed by Dan Caldwell, opens July 24, and "Henry V," directed by Mark Bramhall, opens July 31.

In addition to the three Shakespearean plays, this year's festival will include "Brigadoon," a musical about a Scottish village that appears only one day each 100 years. "Brigadoon," directed by J. D. Nichols and Dan Caldwell, will play Tuesday and Wednesday of the last two weeks in August and first week in September.

All play performances will be preceded by informal preshow entertainment by the Festival Singers under the direction of J. D. Nichols.

Tickets for all performances are available from the Marin Shakespeare Festival, Box 2306, San Rafael; all Bay area Emporium, Macy's and Sears, Roebuck and Co. stores and Ticketron outlets and Mill Valley's Greyhound Bus Depot.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Harold Lloyd Gains

Lloyd, 76, entered the hospital late last week.

The comedian, who appeared in 300 films from the silent era of the 1920s through the beginning of talking pictures in the 1930s, made lenseless horn-rimmed spectacles a film comedy staple. He has been in semiretirement for several years.

Norton Simon Divorce

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The 37-year marriage of millionaire industrialist Norton Simon apparently is at an end.

A secretary to Simon, 63, disclosed Wednesday her employer is planning to divorce his wife Lucille. No reason was given.

The couple was separated after Simon lost his bid for the Republican nomination to the U.S. Senate in June to incumbent George Murphy.

Huntley Draws Blast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. William J. Scherle, R-Iowa, said Wednesday television newscaster Chet Huntley had revealed himself to be "what we've always suspected — a Nixon hater."

Scherle criticized Huntley in a House speech for his recent critical comments about President Nixon. Huntley, who next month will retire after 16 years on NBC-TV's evening news report, described Nixon as so "shallow" that it frightened Huntley to think of him as President.

Scherle said Huntley had exposed his lack of objectivity. "His retirement comes 16 years too late," Scherle said.

Guerrillas Hit Village

LISBON (UPI)—The Portuguese Armed Force Information Service said today more than 300 guerrillas attacked the Portuguese Guinea village of Pirada Sunday night, killing 15 persons and wounding 41.

The announcement said a Portuguese soldier was missing in the attack on the African enclave. The Senegal-based guerrillas looted and set fire to 50 huts under cover of rocket, cannon and mortar fire, the communique said.

Praise Themselves

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats, meeting in caucus, have passed a resolution calling the current Congress one of the most productive in decades.

The resolution cited House passage of bills on welfare, social security boosts, emergency home financing, crime, postal reform, voting rights, the 18-year-old vote, presidential electoral reform, hospital construction and others.

Tour Aimed At Dope

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five congressmen, accompanied by government officials from the United States and Canada, begin a tour of U.S. and Canadian border points today to check on the Custom Bureau's new crackdown on dope smugglers.

The lawmakers on the tour include Reps. Tom Steed, D-Okla., Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., Howard Robinson, R-N.Y., Silvio Conte, R-Mass., and Robert McEwen, R-N.Y.

Cigarette Ad Ban?

BOSTON (UPI)—Legislation banning all cigarette advertising in Massachusetts was submitted to the legislature Wednesday by Rep. Belden G. Bly Jr., R-Saugus.

The bill would prohibit all advertising or cigarettes including the use of television, radio, newspapers, magazines and billboards.

The legislation goes farther than any proposal or regulation of the Federal Communications Commission in barring cigarette advertising, Bly said in a statement.

Pot Prescriptions?

TORONTO (UPI)—A Toronto psychiatrist said Wednesday he might prescribe marijuana to users to protect them from prosecution under Canadian drug laws.

Dr. Lionel Solursh of the Toronto Western Hospital, commented on a report a small group of doctors might begin prescribing marijuana to pressure the federal government for more liberal drug laws.

"I would say I might do it," Solrush said, but added his decision might vary from case to case.

ROYAL PATHS DIVERGE

Alaska's Natives Voted $1 Billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate by a 76-8 vote has approved and sent to the House a bill to give $1 billion cash to Alaska's Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts, as a final settlement of land claims upon the United States.

Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel hailed the bill as "a great victory" for progress and fairness in the treatment of the nation's earliest native citizens. He said he hoped a similar bill in the House, now waiting action by the Interior Committee, would be moved ahead quickly.

In the House, the controversial anticrime bill for the nation's capital was approved in a 332 to 64 vote without change as it came from a House-Senate conference committee. The bill retained "no-knock" and preventive detention sections that have been bitterly opposed by civil libertarians in Congress and black civil rights groups in Washington as being repressive and unconstitutional.

The significance of the bill extends beyond the boundaries of the District of Columbia, a federal preserve, since many of its disputed provisions were modeled on separate legislation which the administration has proposed for the federal enforcement system throughout the country. The bill now goes to the Senate where it is expected to receive stiff opposition from both liberals and conservatives.

The Senate-approved land settlement bill would give Alaska's natives $500 million in cash over 12 years and $500 million from oil and mineral resources collected from their lands, as well as 10 million acres of land.

The measure provides establishment of native corporations to use the $1 billion for tribal welfare and to promote economic self-sufficiency.

The Senate also adopted an amendment, bitterly opposed by Western Republicans, that would require competitive bidding for leasing of land in Alaska for mineral rights.

In other congressional action Wednesday:

—The House voted 311 to 76 to authorize $537,730,000 for the National Science Foundation (NSF) in the current fiscal year compared with $500 million asked by the administration.

—The Senate Employment, Manpower and Poverty subcommittee approved a far-reaching plan to reform the country's manpower training programs and create 150,000 new local public service jobs. Costs of the measure were estimated at between $2 and $3 billion to offset some of the costs for local public service jobs in schools, hospitals, police and fire departments and similar agencies that would provide employment in urban ghettos and depressed rural areas.

—Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., proposed an experimental housing subsidy that would limit housing rent costs for poor families to no more than one-quarter of their income.

Nixon Still Sees Upturn In Economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is optimistic the nation's sagging economy will pick up later this year despite a continuing dip in the closely-watched index of industrial production.

The President received guardedly optimistic reports from seven of his top economic strategists during a later afternoon meeting Wednesday. Aftrwards White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon is "very optimistic about the economy and he anticipates an upturn in the second half" of the year.

Nixon summoned the quadraid — his four top economic advisers — plus Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson, Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans and White House Counselor Robert P. Mayo to discuss business conditions. The quadriad includes Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns, Treasury Secretary David M. Kennedy, Management and Budget Director George P. Shultz and Chairman Paul W. McCracken of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Shortly before the meeting began, the Federal Reserve announced that industrial production fell 0.3 per cent last month to the lowest level since November 1968. It was the ninth drop in the past 11 months.

The June industrial production index was 168.6 per cent of the 1957-59 average, down 3.4 per cent from the peak established in July, 1969.

Administration economists had hoped the index would rise — or at least remain stable — in June. They said such a report would have indicated a "bottoming out" of the winter-and-spring business slump.

Ziegler said Nixon had no specific agenda for his meeting with the economic aides. The press secretary said the President wanted to discuss recent business developments.

NOW 'REAGAN'S RATPACK'?

Dino Joins Sinatra In Backing Governor

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Dean Martin, an active fund-raiser for Democrats and an old Hollywood "ratpack" pal of Frank Sinatra, has joined the re-election campaign of Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Martin and Sinatra, who endorsed the governor last week, will be associated with "Californians for Reagan," a group of Democrats supporting the Republican incumbent over Democratic challenger Jess Unruh.

A spokesman for Unruh declined comment on Martin's support but said, "We're lining up our own entertainment committee."

Jack McDowell, a spokesman for Reagan's campaign organization, said "Dino volunteered" the endorsement and "subsequent to that the governor talked to him on the phone."

DEAN MARTIN
A Demo for Reagan

McDowell said he had no knowledge of any other members of the fun-loving "clan" of Sinatra and associates who might be planning to also declare their support for Reagan.

The "clan," or the "ratpack" as it was known in Hollywood, included Sinatra, Martin, Sammy Davis, Joey Bishop and Peter Lawford, former brother-in-law of the late President Kennedy. Some members are reported not as chummy as they once were.

Martin, Davis and Sinatra headlined a "stars night" fund-raisers at Los Angeles in 1966 which raised more than $200,000 for Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown, who lost to Reagan.

McDowell reported he understood that Martin decided to join the campaign without prior knowledge that Sinatra had endorsed Reagan.

Reagan hinted at a news conference that Martin had endorsed him for reelection and his campaign organization confirmed it later. He said the names Sinatra and Martin "kind of go together like ham and eggs."

In response to a question, the former actor noted that show business personalities support political campaigns by appearing at rallies and staging fund-raisers.

He added, "Frank has expressed, as had Dean Martin, and some others, a desire to be a part of those kind of affairs when they take place."

Pressed about whether he was disclosing an endorsement by Martin, Reagan said, "I have no authority to say that."

Earlier in the day, Unruh shrugged off Sinatra's endorsement of Reagan, saying he didn't think the voters "are going to be influenced by big-name supporters." He accused Reagan of enlisting "hired guns."

Reagan also slammed the door firmly shut on Unruh's challenge to debate him. "I don't see any need for meeting Mr. Unruh on these issues," he said.

Freed Bishop Surprised At Own Survival, Not Bitter

HONG KONG (UPI)—Weak and faltering, Bishop James Edward Walsh said today he never thought he would live long enough to be released from a Communist Chinese prison. He denied the spy charges that led to his imprisonment.

"I love the Chinese people," the 79-year-old Roman Catholic clergyman from Cumberland, Md., said in denying any bitterness toward Peking after his 12-year confinement.

He spoke from a wheelchair in a voice that became progressively weaker and in words that faltered toward the end of his first news conference since China released him unexpectedly Friday. He has been hospitalized since.

Walsh was arrested Oct. 18, 1958 in Shanghai, where he was the Roman Catholic bishop. Seventeen months later Peking announced he had been sentenced to 20 years as a spy.

"I never thought I would ever see the day of my release," Walsh said. "I felt that I would not live long enough to complete my sentence of 20 years and that I would die in prison."

"I was not a spy for either the United States government or the Vatican," he added. He found it "hard to justify the severity of the sentence meted out to me."

"I came to China in 1918 as a priest and missioner for the purpose of preachingt he gospel of Jesus Christ to the Chinese and tending to their spiritual and material needs.

"I can tell you in all honesty and sincerity that I have never spent a day during my 40 years in Chinese soil in doing anything but that."

Asked if he admittted to Chinese authorities in Shanghai that he was a spy, Walsh said, "I admitted that I may be a spy in their legal sense. I don't repudiate this statement if it is accepted in the right sense. I was treated very well except for the intense interrogations... it hasn't been all sweetness and light."

Walsh said he was "bewildered by all the fuss and attention that has followed my release. I am beginning to suspect that many changes have taken place in all walks of life since I last had contact with the outside world."

Walsh first learned Friday of the death of Pope John XXIII and man's landing on the moon.

"I feel a bit like Rip Van Winkle waking up after a long sleep," he said.

As it orbits the earth, the moon spirals outward at a rate of about one foot every 30 years.

CAB Puts Halt On New Air Fares

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has suspended proposed fare changes on air routes from the mainland to Hawaii, and ordered a full-scale investigation of the situation.

The proposed new rates were to have taken effect July 22 on Continental, Northwest, Pan American, Trans World, United and Western airlines.

WORK COMPLETED OR JUST BEGUN?

About 35 tons of ship and 170 pounds of man is moved from a Sausalito shipyard to an awaiting way on Richardson Bay for launching before the weekend. The Kamchatka, moved yesterday by R. Trost Moving Co. of Concord, was built by its owners Pete Kondrashoff and Alex Jacobencia and can carry 50 tons of fish. The fishing vessel will be homeported in either Sausalito or San Francisco. Drydocks Edict Puts Issue In Sheriff's Lap

The problem of what to do with the derelict drydocks off Sausalito has landed in the lap of Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos.

Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner Tuesday appointed the sheriff receiver to carry out the court order for removal or destruction of the four huge wooden drydocks.

The drydocks, which were brought to Sausalito in 1966 by the late Delmar D. Wise for repairs at his Diesel Engineering and Maintenance Co., became bogged down in lawsuits and Richardson Bay mud.

He had intended to repair them for resale, but the City of Sausalito passed an ordinance barring them from the city limits before he could move them to his yards.

Marin County has twice obtained court orders to have them removed, but both were appealed. The first appeal was upheld, but the second denied this year.

Judge Gardiner ordered Mountanos to report back at 9 a.m. Aug. 11 with recommendations on methods of removal, the costs involved and the progress the owner is making in removing the docks.

J. Christopher Roberts, a Mill Valley artist and the drydocks' new owner, has indicated he will try to move them into Sausalito waters and make them into a gigantic wooden lotus blossom with stained glass windows for a cultural center if he can get funding and approval.

If he fails the sheriff is empowered to marshall all Roberts' assets to move the docks, according to Deputy County Counsel Joseph A. Forest.

FIVE CANDIDATES, ONE SEAT

Trustee Hopefuls Woo Hub Votes

Candidates for the San Anselmo School District board presented proposals to improve education and solve money problems to a near-capacity crowd last night in the Isabel Cook School auditorium.

The five candidates for the vacancy created by the resignation of former board chairman Cornelia A. Busse gave 10-minute opening statements and answered written questions from the audience in the candidates' night sponsored by parent-teacher associations and parents' clubs of the district.

A special election to fill the vacant board seat will be held Tuesday.

Candidate Miriam Beall of 68 Oakland Avenue, a graduate of San Francisco State College, has taught high school four years. She said money could be saved by centralizing some procedures now done at district level, such as purchasing and transportation.

Mrs. Beall said proposals to combine sixth grade classes with classes at two small district junior high schools sound good, but that some problems could result from teaching credential requirements for different grades.

She also proposed elimination of some schools with high maintenance costs caused by age and size; adding developmental programs for fourth grade and below in art, music and physical education and for seventh and eighth grades in industrial arts to the curricula; and study and evaluation of ungraded primary school programs for possible district wide application.

Mrs. Beall said she favors team teaching, provision for children to attend special programs in any school regardless of where they live in the district and establishment of procedures for evaluation of curricula by parents and teachers.

Candidate Joyce DeMartini of 5 Brookside Drive, is a housewife. Calling the current budget "frightening," she advocated making do with what the district has now as much as possible to save money.

Mrs. DeMartini opposed instituting new experimental education programs in the district, and said that parents should have power to prevent children's participation in experimental programs. She said she favors keeping present classes for both slow and advanced children and bringing trade classes back to the schools, even if it means cutting back on programs such as art.

"It's great to teach art," she said, "But what will we do with 2,000 artists?"

John F. Hulpke of 20 Oak Knoll Avenue, is an instructor at the graduate school of business of Golden Gate College. He said that inflation caused by the Vietnam war, waste caused by poor planning and additions to and improvement of educational programs have increased school costs.

Hulpke said that the school board should write letters to try to end the Vietnam War and press the state for property tax relief through shifting more costs to the income tax. New educational programs should be watched closely, he said, and if improvement results, citizens should "take a deep breath and pay."

School boards should be more business oriented, he said, and expect development of new curricula and programs to be done by professional educators in the system. Hulpke said teachers should have more leeway at the instructional level to develop new programs.

Eugene E. Jacks of 540 Fawn Drive, Sleepy Hollow, has a bachelor of science degree from the University of California at Berkeley and is an actuary for the California Department of Insurance.

He said he favors a balanced school board including at least one person with a solid business background and initiating programs within the district and with neighboring districts to share some administrative and purchasing costs to save money.

He said that a countywide electronic data processing program, used by businesses to cut costs for 20 years, could save money in school administration also.

Jacks proposed formation of a parents' advisory council composed of representatives of parents' clubs and parent-teacher associations to provide improved communication between the school board and the public and suggested that the council could help supplement instruction in weak areas.

He cited as an example an advisory council in Southern California which arranged extracurricular language instruction in elementary grades with tuition and parents' clubs' funds.

Pieter Toal of 48 Hawthorne Avenue, San Anselmo, served on the school board from 1965 to 1969 as an appointee. He has a master's degree in civil engineering from Delft Technological University, Netherlands, and has been an assistant professor at the University of Indonesia in Bandung, Indonesia.

Toal said he favors increased use of computer programs and increased cooperation among districts to save money, and that he feels the school board should put pressure on Sacramento for more state aid to education.

Toal also advocated more individualized teaching, earlier entry into school and earlier access to elective courses, including sex education courses. He said that the two small junior high schools in the district should either be combined or be oriented differently, for example as one vocational and one academic junior high.

He expressed concern over a developing gap in understanding between teachers and parents and said that the board should develop programs to get them together — not just discussing individual children, but discussing broad educational programs and plans.

Another candidates' night will be conducted by the Sleepy Hollow Homes Association at 9 p.m. today at 1317 Butterfield Road, Sleepy Hollow.

September Days Set For Rohnert Park Celebration

The annual Rohnert Park Founder's Day celebration will be held Sept. 11 — 13, Chamber of Commerce directors decided yesterday.

Donald Jones was named chairman of the event and said that committees will begin working on plans immediately.

Tentative plans call for a beauty contest to select Miss Rohnert Park on Sept. 11, a Founder's Day ball on Sept. 12 and fireworks on Sept. 13.

Chamber President Sil Cincera said the possibility of bringing a carnival in for the weekend will also be explored.

The chamber also agreed to sponsor an October candidates' night for contestants in the Sonoma County November election.

Spain Asks Sausalito Schools Evaluation

The future of the Sausalito School District rests with district trustees' ability to evaluate past experiences and to open communications between fighting factions, Interim Supt. Robert E. Spain said today.

"The first task for the new board and myself is to evaluate where we are in light of meeting an education program," Spain said of radio KTIM's Marin Sounding Board.

With Spain on the program, moderated by Kitty Oppenheimer, were Trustee Delta Christ and two mothers whose children have attended or still attend school in the controversial district, Mrs. Royce McLemore of Marin City and Susanna Lowry of Mill Valley.

Spain, citing "chaotic conditions" within the district when the school year ended in June, said he has proposed an organization structure to open communications. He did not elaborate.

Mrs. McLemore, whose children attend Martin Luther King School, said she could not speak of the future of the district until she had spoken of its past.

A supporter of Sidney K. Walton, recently fired principal of Martin Luther King School, she said Walton had brought "a year of progress" to the school as shown in student evaluation reports.

She added, in response to a telephone question, that Walton had "opened the eyes" of Marin City residents to participating in the selection of a district administrator.

"Power is going to have to be shared if progress is to be made," she said, adding that both groups in the dispute over control of the district are going to have to listen to each other.

"The new board is going to have to quit throwing up . . . who they represent," Mrs. McLemore declared. She claimed the board represents Sausalito taxpayers.

Mrs. Christ, after outlining the new board's recent actions, responded that she represents the district as a whole and claimed election results from Marin City were proof.

She added she would avoid "ignorant change and ignorant opposition to change." She listed her goal as insuring the schools were open and providing the best education program possible.

Mrs. Lowry painted a darker picture of the district's future, claiming it may already be "doomed."

"All the education in the world won't save us if we don't start working together," she said.

Also a supporter of Walton, she said the principal had succeeded in bringing black and white students together.

Prior to Walton's arrival, she said, there was complete disruption of the school's program. Now, with Walton gone, she predicts, "it will be a traumatic year at Martin Luther King School."

The program will be rebroadcast Sunday at 10 a.m.

Suspect Pleads Guilty In Bar Triangle Killing

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Earl Preston Paige, 51, of San Francisco, accused of fatally shooting his estranged wife's companion, pleaded guilty yesterday in Sonoma County Superior Court to second degree murder.

Paige had previously pleaded innocent to first degree murder in the April 5 shooting death of John Robert Perry, 26, of Petaluma. With the change in plea, charges of kidnap and assault were dismissed by Judge Kenneth M. Eymann.

The shooting occurred in a Windsor bar when Paige found Perry sitting beside his estranged wife, Naomi, 49. Perry was shot in the back of the head.

Paige had been accused of kidnapping his wife after the shooting and assaulting her later in a Healdsburg motel where he accused her of romantic involvements with Perry.

Sentencing was set for Wednesday at 10 a.m.

Human Rights Panel To Eye Budget Issues

Revamping the county's human rights department staff to fit a slashed budget will be one of the main topics to be discussed tonight by the Marin Human Rights Commission.

The meeting is set for 8 o'clock in the supervisors' chambers at the Civic Center.

Chairman James Quiett said the problem of finding a successor to Executive Director Austin J. Thompson may also come up for discussion. Thompson resigned under fire on June 16, and the resignation will take effect Aug. 15. Thompson, who is in the hospital for a knee operation, is not expected to attend tonight's session.

Thompson asked for a budget of $77,500 this fiscal year, but this was cut to $35,000 last month by the supervisors. County Administrator Alan Bruce had recommended dissolving the entire department, leaving only $1,000 for incidental commission expenses.

48 Gonorrhea Cases In Marin In Week

Forty-eight cases of gonorrhea — 11 each from San Rafael and Mill Valley — were reported in Marin County last week, according to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer.

Also reported were 17 cases of streptococcus infection, and once case each of serum hepatitis, tuberculosis and infectious hepatitis.

ary would receive the backing of key party officials and committees.

"The purpose was to solicit—at least from me—the statement that if in January...I was not the strongest candidate that I would support the strongest candidate," the former mayor said.

"I asked if it had also been put to Ronald Reagan and was understanding that woever was the strongest candidate would receive the unanimous support of the people involved."

Christopher said he remained in the race because information ht received in January indicated he would be the strongest candidate against Brown.

Jack S. McDowell, who wrote the story revealing the agreement for the San Francisco Examiner in February 1966, testified briefly that he had authored the story.

Patrick's attorney said the testimony of McDowell, who is now managing Reagan's reelection campaign for Spencer, Roberts and Associates, was designed to show his client's "good faith" at the time he made the accusation about the Field poll.

Patrick, 40, testified Wednesday he "understood political polls could be bought" and thus was not surprised about reports Christopher's organization had paid $16,000 to influence one.

Oakes Recovering, Is Up And Around For First Time

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Indian leader Richard Oakes was up and around today for the first time since he was beaten severely June 11 in a tavern fight.

A spokesman at General Hospital said the tracheotomy tube had been removed from his throat and all intravenous feeding tubes removed.

"He's breathing through his mouth, eating everything in sight and riding around in a wheelchair," the spokesman said. Oakes' condition was listed as good.

Thurber is a member of Newspaper Mailers Union 18, an affiliate of the International Typographical Union, and an employee of San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co., which prints and distributes the San Francisco Chronicle and Examiner.

Daly's wife identified the two teen-agers in a police lineup as the youths who forced their way into the family's home at 407 Connecticut Street. The youths later said Thurber was the man who took them to the home, police said.

The gunmen knocked on the door and asked her about the owner of a car parked outside, Mrs. Daly told police, and then forced their way into the home with guns drawn, asking for money.

One of the pair demanded money and when Daly said he had none, the man hit him in the face with a foot-long steel pipe. The two men then ordered him up against the wall.

Mrs. Daly then offered to get money from the kitchen and one man accompanied her to look. While there, she reported hearing a shot and rushed into the living room.

Daly slumped to the floor and the two gunmen fled up Alabama Street near 19th Street, she said.

Violence, vandalism and threats have punctuated the typographical union strike. Fourteen separate death threats have been reported, advertisers have been harassed and their businesses vandalized.

There have been several firebombings reported by I-J employees and on June 20 a member of the union was arrested after a shot was fired through a window in the newspaper office.

Throughout the strike, the union has denied any connection with the violence. After Daly's house was firebombed, union president Leon Olsen appeared on television to disavow any union links to the attacks.

Daly had been employed at the Independent-Journal only a few months before the shooting.

Surviving are his wife, Stephanie, and two young sons, Allan and Kevin.

Daly went to high school in Billings, Mont., and attended Eastern Montana College and Montana State College, graduating with an electrical engineering degree in 1964.

From 1957 to 1960 he was on active duty with the Navy, attaining the rank of communications technician second class.

From 1965 until he joined the I-J, Daly worked for Mergenthaler Linotype Co. as a field service engineer in San Francisco.

Child's Learning Disorders Panel At Jewish Center

A public panel discussion on current medical and educational trends on learning disorders in children will be held at 8 p.m. next Wednesday at the Marin Jewish Community Center, 200 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

The program is part of the center's preschool program which will integrate childhen with learning disorders, such as neurological (hearing and speech defects, with normal children in nursery school.

Panelists include Dr. Albert C. Goldberg of Terra Linda, medical director of Marin Head Start and pediatrician at Marin General Hospital and two San Francisco hospitals; Dr. Michael Taekman, staff neurosurgeon for hospitals in Richmond, Oakland, Pinole and Berkeley; Dr. Walter Rollin, associate professor of speech pathology and audiology at San Francisco State College, and Dr. Melvin B. Fox of Terra Linda, a behavioral optometrist.

Novato Boosters List Park Gifts

The Novato Civic Foundation has learned its fund-raising campaign has netted $2,083 for park development, Lorene Bunker, foundation publicity chairman, reported.

The foundation board voted to continue the drive through Nov. 10 at Tuesday night's board meeting.

Mrs. Bunker said the board also discussed the planned development of Novato Creek Park, an 11-acre strip of land adjacent to the creek, and agreed to recommend to the city council that park development be kept at a minimum. She added the foundation agreed to sell tickets for the opening nnght of "Stlag 17" at 8:30 p.m., Sept. 11, presented by the Novato Community Players.

teams, retired to the negotiating room, Denise told reporters, "company negotiators are going to the bargaining table prepared to get down immediately to the basic job—that of reaching a sound settlement before Sept. 14 when the current Ford-UAW collective bargaining agreement expires, without disruption of our operations nationally or at any of the 101 local bargaining locations."

Denise's comments were virtually a carbon copy of the comments made by Earl Bramblett, GM vice president in charge of personnel, when he opened negotiations with the UAW, which represents 700,000 workers at GM, Ford and Chrysler plants in the United States.

Like Bramblett, Denise said the current triennial negotiations come "at a critical point in our history." He said one out of every seven cars sold in the United States was built by workers abroad who earn only one quarter to one-half the wages of American auto workers.

"To the extent that this gap becomes even wider as a result of upcoming negotiations, it will be even more difficult for the domestic manufacturers to compete with foreign producers," Denise said.

But Ford "will do its best to negotiate an agreement that will be responsive to the needs of its employees and consistent with their interest (and) the national interest," Denise said.

It was Woodcock's first appearance at Ford as head of the UAW. Until this year, he had restricted himself to GM as head of the union's GM department.

Since he became head of the UAW, Woodcock has assumed the task of leading the union into negotiations, as he did Wednesday when he presented the demands to Bramblett.

"With a background of experience against which to make their judgments, with adolescent identity problems out of the way, students over 22, over 32, over 52 are almost always our best students," he said.

"Perhaps higher education at the college and university is too precious to be wasted on the immature," Hayakawa added.

Joseph Rhodes Jr., 22, a Harvard student who Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said should resign from the commission, asked the noted semanticist if he really meant what he said about bright students.

"I think I meant it," Hayakawa replied. "Much of the cause of student unrest is more psychological than rooted in events themselves."

Alto-Richardson Firemen Receive Fringe Benefits

Alto-Richardson Bay firemen have been granted a packade of new fringe benefits by the district board, Chief Carl O. Heynen Jr. reported.

Directors, meeting Tuesday, approved a rental sudsidy of 6.6 per cent of their salaries, which will amount to about $50 monthly for each of the district's 10 firemen, Heynen said.

Other benefits include a clothing allowance to permit employees to buy two work uniforms per year; an increase in vacation time to three weeks for firemen who have been with the district for five years; and pay for seven holidays in lieu of compensatory time.

Firemen were given a salary increase ranging from 6 to 7.5 per cent when the board adopted a $155,000 budget in June, Heynen said.

Cambodians Rebuffed In Hill Attack

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Cambodian troops ran out of ammunition and retreated from Kirirom today after six days of costly counterattacks against guerrilla soldiers who seized the mountaintop resort village Saturday.

A military spokesman who announced the retreat disclosed too that Viet Cong and North Vietnamese units attacked a government ammunition depot at Long Vek, 30 miles north of Phnom Penh, this morning and fighting was continuing at last report.

The level of Cambodian combat appeared to be increasing as South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon announced its 18,000-man task force in Cambodia killed 33 guerrillas Wednesday in two sharp clashes near the Vietnam border.

The U.S. Command in Saigon sent four waves of B52 bombers against an important Communist supply bivouac in the A Shau Valley in South Vietnam's northwest corner today in an attempt to forestall an expected guerrilla offensive in the northern war zone.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. Army chief of staff, told newsmen in Saigon the Allied thrust into Cambodia has ruined the Communist command's capability of launching a major offensive in the southern half of South Vietnam but not in the northern half.

The U.S. Command in Saigon said 72 Americans were killed and 729 wounded last week, an increase over the 61 dead of the week before. The South Vietnamese reported 423 dead, 1,275 wounded and 35 missing, also an increase. Allied commanders said Communist casualties were 1,831 killed, another sharp increase.

Cambodian troops at Kirirom, 56 miles west-southwest of Phnom Penh, suffered "fairly heavy" losses in counterattacking the village before they were forced to withdraw to its periphery for want of ammunition, the Phnom Penh government spokesman said.

"We are short of ammunition," he explained. "Our soldiers resisted to the last bullet. Because Kirirom is a hill, it is very difficult to climb, and each of our soldiers can only bring a limited quanity of ammunition."

American sources have said the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese drive at Kirirom is aimed at cutting Highway 4, the only thoroughfare between Phnom Penh and the port of Kompong Som, site of Cambodia's oil refinery.

Fighting elsewhere in Cambodia in the past 24 hours was characterized by what the spokesman termed "isolated and feeble enemy attacks," including harassment against the province capital at Siem Reap near the Communist-held Angkor Wat ruins.

Small skirmishes were reported 50 miles northwest and 37 miles east-southeast of the capital. A belated field dispatch said Cambodian troops killed 32 guerrillas while losing four dead in a series of encounters earlier this week 32 miles south of Phnom Penh.

Organic Gardens Course Offered

A five-session course in organic gardening will be offered by the Marin Jewish Community Center beginning Tuesday.

The course will meet on Tuesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the center, 200 North San Pedro Road, Santa Venetia.

Courses in modern art and painting are also being offered.

of a state of emergency since a six weeks' seamen's strike in May, 1966. It was only the fourth time the powers had been invoked since 1920.

The state of emergency gave the government authority to take special measures to control food and fuel supplies, transportation and other vital activities. It also gave it the right to use troops, if necessary, to move vital food supplies.

The proclamation was valid for a month. Any measures taken by the government under it must be approved by Parliament within a week.

William Whitelaw, leader of the House of Commons, said the Queen's message will be debated by the House Monday.

The state of emergency was decided on at a two-hour cabinet meeting this morning. Prime Minister Edward Heath and five other Privy Council members were waiting at Buckingham Palace when the Queen returned from a visit to Canada early this afternoon.

Ports throughout the country were silent and deserted. More than 200 ships were idle, with no longshoremen to load or unload them. Others had left before the walkout deadline.

Britain's 47,000 longshoremen Wednesday struck all the country's 40 seaports for the first time since the 1962 general strike to back an 80 per cent pay hike demand. The employers had offered seven per cent.

Officials said troops were alerted in camps near major seaports to be ready to unload vital cargoes of perishable foodstuffs.

Militant longshoremen's leaders said use of troops would make the crisis "much more serious."

"If the army comes in, we will not try to stop them," Ernie Rice, a union official, told London dockers. "But if they come in, matters will not be improved. In fact, the whole thing will be made much more serious."

The stock market, which dropped 11 points in the Financial Times index Wednesday after the walkout decision, slid further downhill at this morning's opening. Industrial shares were particularly weak.

Petaluman Found Dead In House

Harry Marvin Hosmer, 59, was found dead at his home, 523 Sixth Street, Petaluma, by police at 7 p.m. yesterday.

Sonoma County Coroner Andrew Johansen said Hosmer was found in a living room chair with a plastic bag tied around his head.

Police had been asked to check the house by Hosmer's stepson, Michael Kitchens of Sausalito. Johansen said no notes were found.

Hosmer is also survived by a daughter, Jill McDonald of Corte Madera; and a brother, William Hosmer of North Hollywood.

Slide-Lecture To Show Better San Anselmo

San Anselmo Councilman Lewis W. Stewart will give a slide-lecture next Thursday showing how downtown San Anselmo could have its face lifted for improved appearance.

The slide show, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, will start at 7:30 p.m. at Wade Thomas School. Stewart is a community consultant for Pacific Gas and Electric Co., preparing such demonstrations to show how communities can improve themselves.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM LUNSFORD

Funeral for William E. Lunsford, owner of a bar and restaurant at the Sausalito ferry slip at the outbreak of World War II, has been held in Reno, Nev.

The 88-year-old ex-Army officer died July 4 in Reno.

Lunsford was born in Alabama and traveled as a youth with Annie Oakley and the Buffalo Bill Cody Wild West show before joining the Army in 1901.

A cavalryman, he fought against Pancho Villa prior to commanding a company in England and France during World War I.

Before retiring in 1938 as a second lieutenant, he was stationed for many years in the Philippines.

After moving from Sausalito about 1942 to Santa Rosa, Lunsford worked as a bartender until his retirement in 1952.

He moved to Reno 10 years ago.

Military burial was at Mother of Sorrows Mausoleum, Reno.

STEPHEN YUHAS

Stephen Yuhas, an engineer in Sausalito for 20 years and a Tiburon resident, died yesterday in the intensive care unit at Marin General Hospital after undergoing surgery for a perforated duodenal ulcer. He was 50.

A native of New Salem, Pa., Yuhas was a resident of Marin County and California 15 years. He worked for E. G. Schoonmaker Inc. of Sausalito and lived at 6 Juno Road, Tiburon.

He is survived by his wife, Anna Mae; two children, Stephen J. and Barbara A. Yuhas, of the home address; four brothers, Michal, of Tiburon; George, of Cleveland, and Andre and Frank, both of New Salem, Pa., and four sisters, Kathryn Walsh of Cleveland, Alice Vargulich of New Salem, and Helen Campoli and Dorothy Briggs of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Funeral will be tomorrow at 11 a.m. at Russell and Gooch mortuary, Mill Valley, with burial at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

ZELMA F. ELKINS

Zelma Florence Elkins, 73, of 4 Cottage Avenue, Mill Valley, collapsed and died at her home yesterday, apparently of natural causes, according to the Marin County Coroner's office.

She was discovered by her husband, John W. Elkins, when he returned home at 10 a.m.

A native of California, she had lived in Marin County 12 years. Funeral arrangements are pending at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley.

GEORGE LINDAHL

Private funeral has been held in San Rafael for George Lindahl of San Anselmo.

A native of Odense, Denmark, he died Wednesday in a local hospital following a short illness.

Lindahl, 89, was a retired accountant and had lived in Marin County for 10 years.

He is survived by a son, George L. Lindahl of Ross and two grandchildren, George M. and John F. Lindahl of Ross.

Death Stills Pen: 'Games People Play'

CARMEL, Calif. (UPI)—Dr. Eric Berne, author of "Games People Play," the psychiatric textbook that became a bestseller, died Wednesday.

Berne, 60, had suffered a heart attack two weeks ago.

"Games People Play" explained the maneuvers people use among themselves in everyday life because they are unable to make direct contact. The "games" were the situations that everyone goes through every day in getting along with other people.

Originally written for other psychotherapists as a training manual in Berne's evolved version of Freudian analysis, the book became a bestseller throughout the country from 1964-67. Total sales were more than 2.5 million copies. It was one of the most popular books ever on psychiatry.

Avoiding textbook language, the book described a number of provocative-sounding "games," including "Look How Hard I've Tried," "Kick Me" and "They'll Be Glad They Knew Me."

It was easy to identify with the principal characters. Berne encouraged "role-playing to understand the nature and meaning of the situations.

He said behavior was a product of three universal states of mind: "parent," made up of things learned from one's parents and saved for use on one's children; "adult," the ability to deal with the world as it really is; and "child," the legacy of one's early years and the source of creativity and intuition.

Berne's matter-of-fact description of conversation patterns was popularly regarded as acid humor because it attempted to puncture the decorum of many social situations. Some professionals in the field criticized it as "insulting" to modern man, but many others welcomed the broad application of psychiatric insights made possible through the book's popularity.

Born and trained as a doctor in Canada, Berne came to the United States to take up psychiatry. He was drafted into the Army in World War II and got his first opportunity for experience in group therapy.

Berne is survived by a daughter, three sons and two stepchildren. He had been divorced twice. His last wife, Torre, died.

Residents Near 747 Runway Win Partial Victory

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Homeowners living near the nearly completed north runway at Los Angeles International Airport have won at least a partial victory in their fight against City Hall over noise pollution.

The city's Department of Airports Wednesday announced approval of emergency measures to purchase homes within 700 feet of the runway, the only one capable of handling the Boeing 747 jumbo jets.

Residents, some of whom live only 300 feet from the runway, complained that the noise of jets using the runway made life "unbearable."

An estimated 680 homes are involved.

Vandalism Case Decision Awaited

A Marin Municipal Court judge took under submission yesterday the question of whether the stop by two sheriff's deputies of the car of three men accused of conspiring to damage property of I-J advertisers was legal.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. said he will announce his decision at 9: 30 a.m. next Wednesday.

If he rules that the stop was illegal, the case against the three, all members of the International Typographical Union, will be dismissed. Otherwise, they will be held for trial on the felony charges in superior court.

The defendants are Dennis Joseph Crowley, 41, of San Jose; James Robert Brocato, 31, of Santa Rosa, and Grant William Anders, 30, of Pleasant Hill. They are charged with conspiring to break windows of six San Rafael and three Novato businesses before they were arrested in the early morning of June 3.

The judge yesterday heard arguments from defense attorneys Robert Y. Bell and Robert D. Carrow, who maintain that arresting officers Larry Stanfield and Richard Borba "had nothing on this car. . .but a hunch," in Bell's words.

The deputies stopped the car at about 1: 40 a.m. after seeing it drive slowly along a frontage road at the Strawberry Shopping Center in the direction of Stan's for Sports, where windows had been broken in the past.

The officers have testified they stopped the car both because it looked suspicious and because they couldn't read the license plate. They also said they observed a man in the back seat of the car make a movement as if he were shoving something down into the seat.

After stopping the car, one deputy saw a slingshot and chunks of a shiny metal in the back seat.

A search later produced two more slingshots and more chunks of metal, which a state laboratory expert has testified matched chunks found near the broken windows of stores.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Jerry R. Herman argued yesterday that the officers had a right to stop the car in light of high court cases which have held that police have the responsibility of trying to prevent crimes.

He said that the slow movement of the car at that time of the morning, the unclear license plate and the furtive movement of the man in the back seat gave the deputies the right to stop the car for further investigation.

The men were the first persons arrested in connection with window smashings of merchants who refused to discontinue advertising in the I-J. Since San Francisco Typographical Union 21 went on strike against the newspaper in January, about 40 businesses have been vandalized.

Lutherans Hear High Catholic Praise Luther

EVIAN, France (UPI)—A Roman Catholic Cardinal, attending the Lutheran World Federation's Fifth Assembly as an observer, gave unprecedented praise Wednesday night to Martin Luther, who began the Protestant Reformation in the 16th century.

Cardinal Jan Willebrands, president of the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity, told the assembly the dialogue between Lutherans and Catholics began six years ago and that observers at respective assemblies has become a matter of course.

He said the federation "gave an even more significant sign of its ecumenical spirit by inviting the president of the Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity, as the representative of the ecumenical endeavors of the Roman Catholic Church, to address your assembly."

"This invitation shows how far our dialogue has progressed in the few years that have passed since the Second Vatican Council," the cardinal said.

Eighty-three per cent of Finland's population belonds to the Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Stutsman Ends Last Working Day

Donald O. Stutsman, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority and Redevelopment Agency for more than 6 and one-half years, ended his last working day on the job last night by saying he will miss Marin City.

Stutsman, who has resigned, said he would be "leaving a piece of me" in Marin City, and although there have been "thorns in the roses," he will miss it.

"I hope Marin City can become the kind of community you people want to live in," he said.

James O. Quiett, chairman of the Marin County Redevelopment Agency, said: "I feel the community will experience a loss in losing Don."

Agency directors named Wallace K. Shepherd, administrative assistant, as interim executive director until a successor is selected.

Stutsman reported a screening committee had narrowed a field of 76 applicants for the job to five for interviewing.

Budget Session Set

The Mill Valley City Council will hold its next budget session at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at city hall, Councilman Jean Barnard has reported. The session originally was scheduled for July 23.

Hopeful Marin City Developer Wins Round

Marin Urban Development Association (MUAD), a nonprofit corporation of Marin City residents, last night moved half of the way toward a chance to become developer of Marin City.

The Marin County Redevelopment Agency gave preliminary approval for the corporation to become successor to Marin Development Association, an out-of-state firm long under fire for lack of action.

The second step necessary is preliminary approval of the Marin County Housing Authority, joint session, but that group did not muster a quorum.

Leland H. Jordan, attorney for the redevelopment agency, explained the agency's preliminary approval would be effective only if the authority adopted a similar resolution within 10 days.

Preliminary approval by both bodies will give the development association exclusive negotiating rights for development for nine months, and during that time it will have to come up with a feasible project.

Before MUDA was finally approved as developer, it would have to have contracts with the agency, authority and Marin Development Association, formerly California Development Corp., reported Donald O. Stutsman, executive director.

Before the vote, Thelma McKinney, an MUDA director, said: "Give us a chance. We've been stalemated all these years. Why not let us try?"

She said there had been two community meetings on the matter and the majority of people there were for having MUDA become the developer. "It's the consensus of the community to go along."

Ulysses J. Montgomery, a San Francisco urban consultant working for MUDA, said preliminary approval would put the corporation in a position where it would have to "put up or shut up."

Norman B. Campbell, a housing authority director, described the action as giving a "nine-month option of time to MUDA to come up with an acceptable project."

Mill Valley Sets Sailing Class Repeat

The third session of sailing lessons sponsored by the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department will begin Monday and run through July 31. Classes will be held at 10 a.m. for beginners and noon for intermediates.

Registration for the lessons will be taken at the community recreation center, Camino Alto and East Blithedale Avenue.

Stutsman recommended approval, noting there was little chance for successful development without substantial participation by Marin City residents.

He acknowledged there has been concern whether MUDA adequately represents Marin City, but said the firm has nine months to convince the "people of Marin City they represent them or they will fail."

Frank Phillips Sr., an MUDA director, said the firm will solicit membership from all sectors of the community. "We're trying to get the community involved," he said. "We're asking for nine months. Give us a chance."

Director Collie B. Gaines said that all MUDA meetings should be announced in advance, open to the public and held in a public place. C. J. Williams, another director of the nonprofit group, said the intent is to have meetings once a month with advance notice to the public.

"We got nothing to hide," Phillips said. "Nobody's trying to hide anything."

MUDA has seven directors, appointed by the Marin City Council last October, and Montgomery said an election will be held, probably before October, to broaden membership.

FIRST CRACK IN IMPASSE?

Underground Freeway Idea To Link West Bay Spans

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN LEANDRO — The first possible break in San Francisco's long war against new freeways appeared last night with a proposal by its planning director for a "basically underground" freeway between the Golden Gate and Bay bridges.

Allan B. Jacobs proposed a tunnel from the Presidio under the Marina Green, Fort Mason, Russian and Telegraph hills and the Embarcadero, surfacing at the foot of Howard Street to connect with the Southern Embarcadero Freeway.

The existing elevated Embarcadero Freeway would have to be torn down before construction could begin on the new link, Jacobs said in his presentation to the Association of Bay Area Governments regional transportation planning committee.

The committee, at the request of the state, has been attempting to mediate the freeway impasse. San Francisco and state officials have not even been able to talk with one another about the "freeway revolt" for several years.

Jacobs, noting his proposal was drawn at the instigation of Mayor Joseph A. Alioto, offered no estimates of the cost of such a tunnel.

Some idea of the cost, however, was given in a letter in April to the committee from Alan S. Hart, head of the state Division of Highways' district office in San Francisco — perhaps $350 million.

Hart said that the total cost of an underground freeway linking the two bridges, according to state estimates in the mid-1960s, approached $300 million "using the least costly combination of alternatives."

The precise figure was $284 million for the 3.5-mile freeway, or some $81 million a mile. Hart noted that costs have inflated at least 12 per cent since the estimates were made.

In addition, he noted, the old estimate for demolishing the Embarcadero Freeway was $5 million, plus $39 million to replace it with an underground freeway.

The state's proposal for a conventional freeway at the time was figured to cost $110 million, according to Hart.

Jacobs stressed that his proposal was not yet endorsed officially by the city, but he predicted the approach would win endorsement by the planning commission. Many residents would favor it, too, he said, "though I could be wrong — I have been before."

The chairman of the ABAG committee, Marin County Supervisor John F. McInnis, urged Jacobs to get the endorsement by the planning commision so the committee can ask the state to update its cost estimates.

McInnis pointed out that the extra cost of undergrounding the freeway would be borne by all nine counties in the Bay Area "because there is only so much highway money in the region."

Quickly praising Jacobs' proposal was the head of the state Office of Transportation Planning and Research, Charles G. Beer. "We're really happy to see San Francisco willing to reexamine the situation," Beer said.

Jacobs stressed that he saw the freeway not as a link between the bridges, but as a distributor to San Francisco's downtown. Through traffic is not a significant amount of the total traffic entering San Francisco, he said.

The capacity of the new freeway should be tied to "existing capacity constraints" on the Golden Gate Bridge, Jacobs said. "We do not desire a second deck for automobiles to be constructed on the Golden Gate Bridge," he declared.

Rail rapid transit from Marin should be in operation by the time the new freeway opens, Jacobs said.

"I am sure that a constructive agreement to this problem can evolve," Jacobs told the committee.

Day Center Plans Win Novato Nod

The Novato Plan Review Committee last night approved architectural and site plans for the Dolphin Club Child Day Care Center at 1900 Novato Boulevard, according to Secretary Juanita Gibson.

The Committee followed Tuesday night's council action and asked for plans for fencing and landscaping of the grounds — desiged to minimize noise.

The Novato Plan Review Committee also:

APARTMENT — Approved plans for a 20-unit apartment to be constructed on Diablo Avenue north of Hill Road by Ferndale Investment Co.

LANDSCAPING — Approved landscaping plans and sign for the Novato Center Building at Grant Avenue and Fifth Street for Sanco Investment Co.

SIGN — Approved a sign for David Young for Young Brothers Mobile Home Sales on Highway 101 north of Olive Avenue, if its size is reduced 20 per cent.

Supervisorial Staff Selects Bargain Agent

Marin County's mid-management employees, those directly under department heads and assistants, voted by a 3-1 margin yesterday to have the Marin County Employees Association speak for them in future contract negotiations.

The vote came in the wake of a decision by the board of supervisors last month to grant only token raises — and in some cases no raises at all — to employees in supervisorial position.

Of the 76 mid management employees eligible to vote, 58 cast ballots. Forty-two voted to have the Marin County Employees Association speak for them. Only 14 voted for the Marin Managerial Employees Association, and two wanted no representation.

The managerial employees association was formed about a year ago, with S. W. Eason of the assessor's office as president. Eason said today his group will meet at noon Monday to decide whether the organization should dissolve as a result of yesterday's vote.

Of the county's 1,250 employees, only 70 or 75 now remain unrepresented by any bargaining unit. These are department heads, their assistants, and those having confidential relationships with the board of supervisors, such as secretaries of the board and the county administrator's staff.

Randall M. Prevo, manager of the Marin County Employees Association, said his organization now speaks for about 1,050 of the total county work force of 1,250.

Novato District Gives Contract For Fire Hose

The Novato fire district board last night awarded a $9,248 contract to American Rubber Co. of Oakland, lowest of three bidders, for new fire hose, according to Fire Chief Jack Kidder.

The board also approved the annual agreement to purchase gasoline through Marin County at 21.20 cents per gallon for ethyl gasoline and 14.8 cents per gallon for diesel fuel. Last year the district used 5,528 gallons of gasoline and 438 gallons of diesel fuel, Kidder said.

The board adjourned to 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the main fire station.

Sonoma Fair Gives Ribbons For 4-H Nature Exhibits

Winners in the Sonoma County Fair 4-H Club forestry and wildlife divisions have been announced and include several entrants from Marin and Southern Sonoma.

Forestry projects were judged for educational value, appearance, workmanship and quality. Alan Thomas of Novato received one first and one second place award, as did Paul Frederick of Lagunitas and Debra Geils of Petaluma.

First place awards were won by Todd Horick of Point Reyes and James Pruett. Brad Simpkins and Pamela Allen of Petaluma. Sam Wenger of Petaluma won two second place awards, and Roger Horick of Point Reyes won one.

Wildlife exhibits demonstrating food habits, habitat, life cycles, physical structure and other attributes of wildlife were judged on the criteria of educational and scientific value, appearance, workmanship, interest and objectives.

Richard Eldon Brecker of Point Reyes won two first place awards, and Pamela Allen of Petaluma won one first and one second. Mark Geils, Byron C. Geils, Robert Matteri and George Geils of Petaluma and Terri Levstik and Mary Beth Levstik of Novato won first place awards.

Arrests In San Rafael Tied To Forgery Ring

Three Oakland men arrested Tuesday in San Rafael have been identified by Oakland police as part of a check-forging ring that in three years bilked banks and credit card firms in the Bay Area of several hundred thousand dollars.

The three were held in Marin County Jail for a time then transferred to Oakland City Jail yesterday to be booked on suspicion of attempted forgery and possession of a forged check.

The San Rafael arrests were followed by seven arrests in Oakland, and Oakland police Sgt. Terrence Green said that up to 15 arrests over the past few days in Yuba City, Los Angeles and Portland, Ore., may have been connected with the ring.

Green said the group is believed to have organized similar rings in Seattle, Miami, Houston and Birmingham.

He identified the ring leaders as Ernest L. Knox, 24, and Carl Sampson, 25, both of Oakland. Knox was arrested Tuesday evening at his Oakland home and booked on suspicion of forgery, possession of forged checks and identification cards and possesion of marijuana and stolen property.

Sampson was booked on suspicion of forgery and conspiracy to pass forged checks.

Also arrested in Oakland were Knox's wife, Donna, 20; Jasper Davis, 25; Ronald R. Beckham, 25; Buford Powers, 24, and Diane Rodda, 20.

Lt. Jess Spillner, who heads the Oakland Police Department's forgery-fraud detail, said the ring used identification cards stolen in burglaries and mail thefts to open checking accounts in banks.

Once an account was established, he continued, it could be increased with forged checks before withdrawals were made. Purchases would be made and paid for with credit cards for a month and then large purchases would be made just before the card holder vanished, police added.

Action Urged For Use Of Cascade Dam

Six measures designed to permit continued use of Mill Valley's Cascade Reservoir were proposed last night by the city's youth commission, vice chairman Carol Prichard reported.

The list will be sent to the city council, which will consider an emergency ordinance establishing a no-trespassing zone at the controversial mountain reservoir when it meets Monday.

The commission asked the council to:

1. Extend the tow-away zone on Cascade Drive to Cascade Park and along Lovell Avenue.
2. Ask Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., to install a public telephone near the dam.
3. Place a sign prohibiting autos beyond Cascade Park.
4. Provide sanitary facilities.
5. Place signs warning of the critical fire danger and asking users to respect the area.
6. Build a restraining fence on the creek side of the dam to prevent persons from falling off.

A motion to approve the measures was made by chairman George Kewin and carried with only Miss Prichard dissenting. She said they would not solve the health hazard posed by swimming in the reservoir.

The commission also heard a report that no work has been done on a shed for a proposed bicycle repair shop at the Mill Valley Drop-In House. Kewin said he would look for another site.

Commissioners elected Kewin as chairman, Miss Prichard, vice chairman, and David Abrahams, secretary.

San Rafael Teen Arrested On Drug Suspicion

A San Rafael youth, allegedly wielding a knife, was arrested last night in Petaluma after residents said he tried to force his way into three houses and a car.

Neal Kenneth Rhoades, 18, of 241 Union Street, Apt. 8, was arrested on suspicion of being under the influence of drugs and was admitted to Community Hospital of Sonoma County for psychiatric examination.

Police said he attempted to cut a screen door at the home of Donald R. Kuyat, 414 Galland Street, at 9:19 p.m. and attempted to break into the home of Malcolm H. Burnett, 803 West Street at 9:29 p.m. and of Carl Burgland, 817 West Street, at 9:34 p.m.

Police said that earlier he had approached a car being driven by Donald Shields, 5 Cader Court, Petaluma, in the 800 block of West Street and slashed at the vehicle with a knife.

Budget Meet Tonight

The Gallinas Village Community Services District board has scheduled an adjourned meeting for 8 p.m. today at the recreation center at the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church for final consideration of its $27,500 budget and for discussion of the summer recreation program, according to secretary Marguerite F. Clark.

ALMANAC

Today is Thursday, July 16, the 197th day of 1970 with 168 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

On this date in history:

In 1790 Congress set up the District of Columbia as the permanent seat of the United States government.

In 1969 Apollo 11 blasted off from Cape Kennedy with three astronauts aboard headed for the moon.

A thought for the day: Christian Science founder Mary Baker Eddy said, "Divine love always has met and always will meet every human need."

Planners Seek Larkspur Report

After a long discussion what constitutes an enclosed structure, the Larkspur Planning Commission has directed planning staff to prepare a report redefining the term for the July 28 meeting.

The definition is required, secretary Barbara Bruton reported, because certain uses in various zones of the city can only be conducted in enclosed structures.

The commission, meeting Tuesday, postponed to July 28 an application by the Tamalpais, 501 Via Casitas, for a fence, and discussions on architectural and parking policies and a drainage ordinance.

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Too Much Of A Good Thing Can Be A Tragedy In Bridge

There are two basic tragedies in life: not getting what you want, and getting it. I refer, of course, to life at the bridge table, where what you want is oodles and oodles of high cards. In today's hand, East's tragedy is that he got what he wanted.

OUTCOME SURPRISING

West led the six of spades, and East won the first trick with the jack. East continued with the ace and queen of spades, forcing out the king. East thought he was going to defeat the contract, but the outcome surprised him, as Jeremy Flint points out in his excellent new book "Tiger Bridge."

South led a club to the jack and returned a low diamond to try a finesse with the queen. East had been delighted to find the king of diamonds in his hand when he first picked up his cards, but he would have been even more delighted to give the king to his partner in exchange for any low card.

Swapping cards in the middle of the play is frowned upon, so South won the finesse with the queen of diamonds. Now he was sure of five clubs, two diamonds and a spade. The ninth trick was not far behind.

RUNS CLUBS

South ran the rest of the clubs, reducing all hands to four cards. East would have been delighted to give his partner the king of hearts, for then East could have reduced to A-x of hearts and K-x of diamonds. West could win the first heart trick and lead the ten of diamonds to set up a diamond trick.

TRAGEDY HITS

East's tragedy was that he held both the ace and king of hearts. His last four cards had to be both top hearts and the K-7 of diamonds. South thereupon led a heart, giving East two heart tricks but forcing him to lead diamonds away from the king.

As long as either way is tragic, I'd rather get the high cards. Pick your own poison.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - K 10 2
♥ - J 10 9
♦ - A Q 8 2
♣ - K 8 3.
What do you say!

ANSWER: Bid one diamond. You have 13 points in high cards, enough for an optional opening bid. You choose to bid rather than pass because the high-card structure is fairly good and because you have two tenspots, a nine and two eights to give the hand a little body.

Catholic Group Asks Juvenile Help Grant

The Marin Catholic Social Service has applied for a $101,000 federal grant to finance a three-year juvenile delinquency prevention program in the county.

The five-man team that would be formed would focus on the social and personal needs and problems of youth and try to set up concrete programs to meet the needs, according to the agency.

OTHER PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

By HARRY CRAFT

Independent Learning Systems Grows At Professional Center

A new organization that has established headquarters in Marin County and in the three months since its incorporation has taken over almost the entire Professional Center at 18 Professional Parkway, San Rafael with a staff of 60 persons is Independent Learning Systems, Inc.

Headed by Sidney R. Wilson of San Anselmo, a former senior vice president of Massey-Ferguson Corp. of Toronto, Canada, Independent Learning Systems is engaged in developing methods of instructional technology — or individualized instruction — at all school levels. Initially it has four courses ready for validation at the freshman level in about 30 colleges and universities. Its announced goal is to systematize some 350 courses in upwards of 100 institutions, assuring graduation of any student over a four-year period of learning.

In September, Independent Learning will move into the elementary field by opening a private school in Terra Linda. Later it plans to enter the high school level.

According to Wilson, there are about 50 organizations in the country specializing in instructional technology. He says some 14 of these are similar to Independent Learning Systems and have been successful in other parts of the country.

Associated with Wilson as vice presidents are John Loehr and Donald Tosti, who are trained specialists in experimental psychology and behavioral science respectively.

One of the principal reasons for establishing headquarters in Marin County was simply that Wilson, Loehr and Tosti wanted to live here.

STARTING THIS SUNDAY (July 19), the Emporium at the Northgate Mall will join six other Emporium suburban stores in Northern California to open every Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. The Emporium store in downtown San Francisco will remain closed on Sundays.

CABINETMAKER OTTO SCHRIER has finally moved his shop and business from San Francisco to 469 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley, after buying the building here well over a year ago. He is already a Mill Valley resident — and this saves him further commuting.

Much of the building has been remodeled and Schrier has leased out part of the space. Some additional space at street level (both front and rear) is still up for lease.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Japanese Stocks Can Mean Tricky Trading

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. We understand there are some unusual rules to observe when buying Japanese stocks. Can you enlighten us? — T.O.

A. I presume you're referring to the U.S. interest equalization tax on foreign investments and the Japanese government's validation requirement. These technicalities need not concern you if you confine your purchases to stocks which trade here through American Depository Receipts (ADRs). Some 20 of these are currently available. Their trading levels take into account the U.S. tax (11.25 per cent) and the shares available fall within the 20 per cent limit imposed by Japan's Finance Ministry on foreign investment in any one company.

If you buy shares on a Japanese exchange from Japanese owners you must add to their cost the U.S. tax and have them properly "validated." Ordinarily a validation certificate is given to the foreign buyer when the shares are delivered. But if heavy trading shows an increase of foreign buyers the validation certificate must be secured in advance and may even be withheld. All told, wouldn't it be simpler to stick to the ADRs?

Q. My investment club purchased Photon at 13. Is this stock worthy of averaging down for long-term growth potential? — R.F.

A. Management at Photon continues to be cautiously optimistic about financial results for 1970. A profit was earned in the first quarter, a period when the firm usually operates at break-even levels at best. Since the company began the year with a record $2 million-plus backlog, sales for the first half should be at an all-time high. Moreover, earnings are expected to exceed the $521,289 or 13 cents a share reported for the first six months of 1969.

Company products — the Fontmaster 532 is enjoying strong demand and the new 7700 Typographic Peripheral Printer has thus far been well accepted. The latter represents Photon's first entry into the computer accessory field. Receivables have been reduced to around the $1 million level. And the $2.5 million windfall patent suit award from Eltra Corp. enhances prospects. Speculative shares should be retained but not added to.

Stocks Take Sharp Rise; Trading Up

The UPI Market Indicator, measuring all stocks traded, showed a gain of 1.25 per cent on 1,531 issues crossing the tape. Of these, 943 advanced and 319 declined.

A four-hour turnover of 9,080,000 shares compared with 6,570,000 shares at a comparable period yesterday.

Analysts attributed the strong tone to some better-than-expected June quarter corporate earnings and to a report government will announce tomorrow an upturn in gross national product, (GNP), possibly signaling an end to the economic slowdown.

Saul Smerling, analyst for Standard & Poor's, said the market is responding to some favorable surprises in quarterly earnings and to preliminary indications real GNP (adjusted for inflation) perhaps will show a slight increase in the June quarter after two successive declines.

He said the BNP report may show that the economy is turning or that the business slowdown was not so severe as expected.

U.S. Steel Loses Tax Refund Bid

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge has rejected a bid by U.S. Steel Corp. for a record tax refund of $35 million.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Richard Levet Tuesday climaxed a suit in progress for five years.

Levet ruled that U.S. Steel was entitled only to recover some $950,000 in tax refunds for the year 1949. It had sought an additional $34 million for the two preceding years.

At the same time, Levet's decision set the stage for the government to require U.S. Steel to pay an additional $200-million in taxes and interest for the years 1951 and 1953 when an excess profits tax was in effect.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

10 EDITORIAL PAGE San Rafael, Calif. Thursday, July 16, 1970

TODAY'S EDITORIALS

Taxpayers' Protest Brings A Promising Development

When Marin's hastily formed Citizens Committee To Lower the Cost of Government called late last month for a mass turnout to urge county supervisors to hold the line on expenses, one sentence in its call said: "Maybe this will be the beginning of a county-wide, state-wide, even a nation-wide trend to 'hold the line' on government expenditures."

That may have been wishful thinking. But the idea did catch hold immediately in neighboring Sonoma County.

There, the Irate Taxpayers Committee and Sonoma County Taxpayers Association called for a similar turnout, for the same purpose. Last Friday, some 1,000 "straight citizens" showed up at the courthouse in Santa Rosa to confront the supervisors with the same hold-the-line plea voiced in Marin.

NEITHER TURNOUT accomplished its immediate purpose, but both may have started something.

The best the Marin protesters could achieve was decision by the supervisors to cancel planned pay increases for department heads — a decision, incidentally, which might be changed later on if the protesters become less watchful.

The Sonoma protest did a little better. Sonoma County supervisors agreed to review next year's budget in detail with a citizen committee, before taking up its adoption. Organizations represented in the protest throng were promised memberships on the committee.

THERE ARE PLENTY of pitfalls in this kind of approach to budgeting. To begin with, naming a representative citizen committee is a difficult task. All sorts of special interest groups demand representation. Each then brings along its private axe, for grinding at the expense of everyone else. As a result, the committee is likely to get bogged down in wrangling.

It's worth that chance, though. If the appointing body (in this case, the Sonoma County supervisors) bears in mind where the demand came from and makes sure the committee represents that demand, it may accomplish a good deal.

THE EXPLANATIONS (we won't call them alibis) given the protesters in Sonoma and Marin counties were much alike. For the most part, they consisted of the well-worn "I didn't do it; he did" — he, in this case, being the state or federal government. Higher echelons traditionally get the blame.

A really conscientious citizen committee, however, might find that some of the costs "mandated" by state and federal governments are not mandated at all. Some of them are programs into which the county (or the city or the school district) has been drawn by alluring promises of state and/or federal aid — only to find itself later bearing most of the cost.

A really conscientious citizen committee also might take a little different — and a little more practical — look at the productivity of work forces in various departments than the governing body is likely to get from the hired administrators on whom it tends to depend too heavily.

IT'S WORTH a try. The way taxes are going, anything with any chance of curbing them is worth a try.

We commend the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors on its decision to share budgeting with a citizen committee. The Marin County supervisors, and the boards of the cities and districts within Marin and Sonoma, might do well to follow that lead.

Second Batch

Most robins are migratory. But some know a good place when they see it. This latter minority has given up its migratory habits and has become a small group of resident robins, nesting here and living in Marin the year round.

One such robin couple is raising its second brood this summer in a nest in a pear tree where we can keep close watch on it from our house. We thought we were seeing things when the robins started nesting again. Less than six weeks ago they were anxiously feeding a stubby-tailed fledging, that was trying its unsteady wings in the garden.

However, an ornithologist friend tells us that two broods a year are not at all uncommon. Perhaps not having to migrate gives our robins a head start.

Court, Voiding Two-Thirds Rule, Digs Up Disquieting History

By JACK COOPER

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Everybody knows about the little boy who refused the big book the librarian offered, on the suspicion it probably contained a lot more about frogs than he really wanted to know.

This department recently touched on the California Supreme Court's decision that local bond issues could be enacted on a simple, rather than a two-thirds majority.

Then, not being as practical as the little boy, it continued to leaf through the text of the decision, finding some rather coincidental items in a pretty thorough research job by the court.

AT THE RISK of telling its readers more than they may want to know, it is going to go ahead and disgorge what it learned.

California's original constitution in 1849 did not have any two-thirds rule, but it did authorize the legislature to regulate cities' powers "of borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit, so as to prevent abuses."

Apparently this did not keep municipalities from taking on more debt than they could handle, with casual authorization from the legislature, and ballooning municipal debt was a large factor in the panic of the 1870s.

Usually the state (and not only California) took over and folded up the municipal enterprises at great cost.

"THE BUBBLE burst in the 1870s as California followed the rest of the nation into a severe financial depression," the court decision says. "Banks collapsed, the securities market declined, municipalities defaulted on their bonds, businesses closed and trade stagnated.

"As foreclosures and unemployment mounted, thousands drifted from the farms to the cities, vainly seeking work. The general mood was one of disillusionment and anger and the state was swept by radical political movements.

"It was thus in an atmosphere of economic and political crisis that the delegates to the Constitutional Convention set to work in 1878."

One of the results was the two-thirds rule.

ELSEWHERE in a foot note, the court said, "One commentator has noted that 'much of the overextended municipal debt of the mid-nineteenth century stemmed from the excessive zeal of local communities for transportation links, particularly for rail development.'"

The court mentions an act passed by the Legislature in 1866, authorizing the City of Petaluma, without any popular vote at all, to issue $500,000 in bonds to build "locks, dams, and canals on the Petaluma Creek and to collect tolls from the vessels which it was anticipated would use the network."

The Petaluma merchant marine never developed, but the episode ought to be celebrated as an example of the ordinary politicians' aptitude for economics. The laws of economics are beyond their capacity to repeal, but they keep trying.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A tough judge in Connecticut handed a hardened criminal concurrent sentences totalling 193 years. The defense attorney complained, "That's ridiculous. He can't possibly do it." The judge, leaving the bench, threw over his shoulder, "Tell him to do the best he can."

Three weeks after a good citizen of Glasgow had won the biggest football pool of the decade (over a hundred thousand pounds), his wife asked him, "Andrew, what should I do with all the begging letters?" Andrew, engrossed in his newspaper, answered calmly, "Just keep sending them oot!"

Dangers In Home Delivery Of Baby

The Public Health Department is perceiving a rather startling increase in babies being delivered in their home. The young mother should be aware that there are certain risks involved for herself and her child. It is a state law at the present time that all children at birth have a blood test which would indicate whether or not they have Phenylketonuria (PKU). This is a defect present at birth which if not discovered and treated early causes retardation. . .

In an age when venereal disease has increased to such proportions, if a mother should have gonorrhea the child passing through the infected birth canal is in danger of developing a severe eye infection which may lead to blindness. This is the reason that preventative "drops" are placed in every child's eyes at birth. Syphillis of course passes through the placenta to the child and early recognition and treatment are vital, moreover the mother should have a blood test.

If a mother is RH positive and the father RH negative the mother will build antibodies against subsequent children following the birth of a first child. This will result in destruction of the red blood cells of the child with resultant jaundice. The child may die, have motor difficulty or be mentally retarded. . .

In addition to PKU there are other inborn errors of metabolism detected only by the experienced eye of a physician together with certain specific laboratory procedures.

I think that we will see even a greater rise in home deliveries and I feel that the above facts should be brought before all young parents-to-be.

Better Places To Spend $30,000

A few days ago my letter expressing dismay at the action of the board of supervisors in granting a subsidy of $15,000 to the Marin Chamber of Commerce was published. My letter was written and mailed on the day the supervisors took this action. My dismay was doubled when I read the I-J the next day and learned that the subsidy was to be returned to the full $30,000 requested.

The chamber of commerce probably does a good job for the private profit of those whom it serves. Why do these not pay the upkeep? In this year of tight budgets, why was there a proposal to "save" $18,000 by eliminating the mini-film unit for chest x-rays when these x-rays are required by law or ordinance for many occupations? This move was defeated, but there will now be a charge for these required films, and we will all recall that this minifilm equipment was a gift to the people of Marin County from the Marin Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association.

This $30,000 subsidy to a private group could well apply to a transportation system. That is a desperate need for all the citizens of Marin. There are so many places for $30,000. Another place is right in the pockets of the 50 to 60 homeowners whose taxes make up that sum.

Reagan Vs. Bureaucracy In Welfare Showdown

(Reprinted from Oakland Tribune)

It would not be accurate to suggest hat Gov. Ronald Reagan has taken on the entire United States government, or even the Nixon administration portion thereof.

He has, however, attacked with harsh and vigorous words a sizeable segment of that vast bureaucracy that exists in self-perpetuating obliviousness along the banks of the Potomac.

Specifically, the governor's target is that tunnel-visioned band of paper-shufflers in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that he says wants a strangle-hold control on all manner of state welfare activity.

A HIGH LEVEL HEW official has threatened to cut off some $1 billion in welfare aid that the Federal Government annually sends to California.

It is alleged that somehow or other this state is short-changing certain of its welfare recipients by not keeping aid to dependent children payments (ADFC) up to a certain federally prescribed standard.

If the state fails to comply with the federal rules, the withdrawal of most federal funds is threatened.

YET, AS THE governor has pointed out, "California already leads the nation in the size and scope of its total social service health care and welfare programs."

Nearly 20 years ago, the Legislature established a set of sound procedures for making welfare payments, but evidently these are no longer acceptable to a bureaucracy 3,000 miles distant that anoints itself the sole judge of how welfare should be disbursed.

The federal orders-givers reflect obvious disdain for any state's efforts to control welfare give-away abuses or to keep payments within range of the taxpayers' ability to supply the funds.

The federal claim that California is unfairly depriving welfare recipients becomes patently ridiculous when comparisons are made between the state's welfare payments and national averages.

IN CALIFORNIA, welfare recipients under the ADFC program receive an average of $53 monthly while nationally the average is $45. Although the state ranks 11th among all states in the average amount paid under ADFC, this still is not enough to satisfy Washington.

In other important welfare efforts, California ranks first or second among all states in payments to the blind, aged and disabled welfare recipients.

As the governor has suggested, the "threat" to cut off the bulk of federal welfare aid to California is obviously empty and impractical.

HIS PLAN to follow all appeal procedures, and even to take the matter to the courts if necessary, hopefully will convince the power-grabbing bureaucrats of the soundness of the California position long before any critical impasse is reached.

The alternative is abject submission to the unreasonable federal order — at an annual cost to the state's taxpayers estimated to be no less than $100 million.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Canada Breaking With Past Behind Leadership Of Trudeau

OTTAWA, Canada — The interim report of a special commission on the use of drugs recommended recently a drastic liberalization of present laws. Specifically, the report of the Ledain Commission set up by the government proposed that possession and use of mind-altering drugs — marijuana, hashish, amphetamines, LSD — no longer be a crime subject to imprisonment.

The parliament may not in the end adopt the commission's recommendations, which stirred the inevitable controversy. But study of the uses and abuses of drugs is part of the Canadian effort to come to terms with the realities of today's world.

PRIME MINISTER Pierre Elliott Trudeau has given the lead. He believes the young should be heard with understanding and concern. What they are saying about the values — or the lack of values — must be heeded. Trudeau is at his best in the give-and-take of a session with college students, whether in Manitoba or Malaysia.

Because young Americans evading the draft have taken refuge in Canada, there has been sharp criticism in the United States of certain Canadian policies. Exaggerated reports have pictured Canada as a haven welcoming thousands of young Americans escaping military service each year. The total fleeing across the border has been put at 20,000 annually.

Allan J. Maceachen, minister of manpower and immigration, said in parliament not long ago that the number of American draft evaders is unquestionably much smaller than the figures currently used. He was replying to a question put by former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, who called for the number of Americans between the ages of 19 and 20 who had entered Canada beginning in January, 1969.

The only figure Maceachen could supply was for Americans in that age bracket applying for landed immigrant status. The total for 1969 was 2,046, of whom more than half were women. No attempt is made to check the military status of Americans crossing the border. This would be virtually impossible since there are estimated to be 35 million crossing each year.

The longest undefended border in the world has been the proud boast of the two nations that have lived at peace, side by side, for nearly two centuries. It is not only undefended but, given its length, only thinly policed.

Maceachen notes that during the 16 months while Canada was at war, beginning in 1939, and the United States was still at peace prior to Pearl Harbor, an undetermined number of Canadian deserters from the armed forces crossed into the United States. Nothing was done to prevent this movement or to arrest the deserters and return them to Canada. When three American deserters were apprehended by the Canadian Mounted Police and escorted across the border, a loud outcry came from many quarters. The Mounties had no business doing that.

TRUDEAU TALKS about the young with an informed familiarity growing out of innumerable encounters. He believes the outward manifestations, the long hair, the often freakish dress are not mere eccentricities but a form of protest against the rigidity, the compulsive conventionality, of much of contemporary life.

The prime minister is under no illusions about the pitfalls of too much permissiveness. Smoking pot is an indulgence that can be as self-destructive as the indulgence in alcohol or any other form of escapism. As the Ledain Commission report emphasized, far more research into the effect of mind-altering drugs is vital.

In many ways on the broad political front the Trudeau government is breaking with the past, long under the domination of U. S. policy. On Red China, Canada has been actively negotiating for an exchange of diplomatic missions with Peking. Minister of External Affairs Mitchell Sharp believes that when talks resume in Stockholm in the fall, agreement will be close. There are no illusions about what this will mean, since the limits put on other western embassies in Red China's capital are well known. But it is a step toward throwing off the dead hand of the past. That is the resolve behind much of what the Trudeau government is up to.

Italian Economy Breaking Down With Government

By PHIL NEWSOM UPI Foreign News Analyst

In Italy, the city of Rome teeters on the edge of bankruptcy, unable to meet its payroll except through fiscal sleight of hand.

In Naples, the city fathers withhold subsidies from the famous San Carlo Opera House and then place seals upon seats, sets and curtains because the opera owes $1,600 in back taxes.

Genoa's largest hospital postpones operations because the state-controlled health insurance system failed to provide funds for operating room supplies. Italians are warned of an economic recession and a tight money crisis, and then flock to the mountains and the beaches in record numbers.

Fiat locks its doors on 20,000 workers because it has no engines to put in its cars.

The country's 31st government since World War II falls.

PARTLY IT IS an Italian state of mind.

Partly it is the result of weak, left-of-center governments which, since 1962, have been promising much in the way of reforms and delivering little.

Partly it is the result of Italy's economic "miracle" of the last decade in which everyone wants a piece of the action.

When Premier Mariano Rumor surrendered his third government within the course of a year and seven months, it came as no great surprise.

WITHIN the government there were sharp differences between the Socialists and the Christian Democrats over a long list of reforms, and a question of cooperation with the communists. Factions divided the parties themselves — nine divisions within the Christian Democratic party alone.

Within the two rival Socalist parties there was bickering over a leftwing desire to ally with the Communists in two of the 15 new regional governments. Opposed were the Unitarian Socialists.

Hundreds of flash strikes had plagued the country during the 102 days of the Rumor government. A general strike called by the nation's three labor confederations for July 7 was canceled because the government's fall left the unions with nothing to strike against.

It had been scheduled as a demand for "social benefits," better housing, transport, hospital facilities and such, despite warnings the country could not afford the loss in man hours such a strike would entail.

In principle, the government has accepted all of these demands but has been hampered by empty coffers. Parliament now is discussing a bill that would raise exemptions for taxpayers with low incomes, another of the demands put forward by labor.

THERE IS NO doubt Italy is heading for economic trouble unless something is done.

The state's indebtedness went up $5 billion in 1969 and is expected to go up another $7 billion in 1970. Production, which was to go up 10 per cent to cover last fall's wage increases, is going up at an actual rate of 2.5 per cent.

And another weak and bickering government is not the answer.

Sex And Government: Not Very Much Of Either One

WASHINGTON — Mr. John Corry has written a piece in the July Harper's Magazine titled "Washington, Sex and Power." Corry's conclusions are that there is not so much sex in Washington as one might think, and while power acts as an aphrodisiac, more men in high positions get their kicks from politics than they do from bedfellows.

Corry says that Democrats are better Don Juans than Republicans, though some of the biggest lechers in Washington are middle-aged Republican conservatives, who were described by one hostess as "knee grabbers."

Corry says southerners are better at horsing around than northerners, and people who live in Georgetown are more interested in "what the kids are thinking" than having an affair with someone who lives in Bethesda, Md.

IT IS INTERESTING to note that at the very time Corry was doing research on his piece for Harper's a more in-depth study was being done by Prof. Heinrich Applebaum for the National Institute of Domestic Affairs, otherwise known as NIDA (pronounced either needa or neghda depending on how you feel at the time).

Professor Applebaum's study titled "Sex and the Washington Monument," has come up with some startling revelations.

For one thing, there hasn't been one illicit affair in Washington since the Nixon administration took over. This compares favorably with the Johnson administration when there were three and the Kennedy administration when there were four. (There were no statistics kept during the Eisenhower years.)

APPLEBAUM indicates that there are several reasons for the lack of hanky-panky during the present regime.

One is that Atty. Gen. John Mitchell's penchant for wiretapping has frightened off thousands of officials who had been thinking about it.

Another reason is the night sessions that the Senate has been forced to hold because of the debate on the Church-Cooper Amendment. Ironically, this would have been a perfect excuse for senators to engage in some extracurricular activity, except for the fact that they never knew when they would be called for a roll-call vote. It would be very hard to explain to their wives where they had been when the Washington Post reported the next morning that they were marked "absent."

Since this is an election year, House members have been so busy running for office they haven't had time to think about sex, Applebaum says. He also makes the point that most congressmen are so strapped for cash they would rather put money in their campaign fund than spend it on some young secretary or passionate constituent.

As for the executive branch, Applebaum's study revealed that Nixon appointees prefer watching spectator sports on TV rather than getting involved themselves.

ALSO, APPLEBAUM points out, Nixon administration officials have been so drained trying to get through to someone in the White House each day that they're not good for much except to head home and go right to sleep.

The press and TV corps in Washington might have gotten into trouble, Applebaum notes, except for Spiro Agnew. The only thing the vice president hasn't accused the press of, so far, is adultery. To keep Agnew from making such a charge, the entire membership of the National Press Club has taken a vow of chastity, which will remain in effect as long as the vice president is in office.

If there has been any talk of sex in Washington, it's come from the Pentagon. Every time someone in Congress tries to cut the military budget, everyone in the defense establishment starts screaming "rape."

Ex-Treasury Head's Oil Deals Disclosed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert B. Anderson made an agreement designed to pay him $900,000 from oil operations, just before becoming secretary of the Treasury in 1957, the Washington Post said today.

A copyrighted article, by Post staff writer Bernard D. Nossiter, said Anderson "completed a deal with some oil men" on June 14, 1957, less than three weeks before being confirmed as head of the Treasury during President Dwight D. Eisenhower's second term.

Nossiter described Anderson as "a central figure in policy-making to protect oil prices." He became a member of a Cabinet committee that recommended mandatory quotas on crude oil imports, imposed by Eisenhower in 1959, to keep foreign oil from flooding the U.S. market and driving down domestic prices.

The quota system has remained in effect and as recently as Wednesday, the House Ways and Means Committee voted to prevent the White House from switching to a tariff system without express congressional approval.

Nossiter said the alleged Anderson arrangement called for two payments of $450,000 each.

Nossiter said Anderson told him — and "the records confirm this" — he never received anywhere near the full $900,000. Nossiter said records indicated Anderson received, through 1963, a total of about $290,000.

Nossiter said that "one account of the transaction says the deal was initiated to enable Anderson to replace Vice President Richard M. Nixon on the 1956 Republican ticket." Anderson refused to discuss whether he was considered by Eisenhower as his 1956 running mate.

Anderson was quoted by Nossiter as saying the arrangement was an "ordinary, normal" affair, in which he sold an interest in some leases.

As for a direct interest in oil prices while secretary, Anderson was quoted: "Frankly, it never crossed my mind. I always regarded it (the money he received) as a fixed amount."

House Panel Charts A New Trade Route

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee has charted a new trade route for the United States which would cut back imports of products ranging from aprons to Russian mink stoles. It would be a significant departure from the nation's open door trade policy of nearly 40 years.

The committee reached approval of the first trade bill in eight years Wednesday, subject only to formal approval when technicians return after drafting the legal language July 28.

In its deliberations Wednesday, the committee voted to block President Nixon from replacing the system of oil import quotas with a tariff system as recommended by a presidential task force. The task force said tariffs could reduce the price of oil and gasoline.

The panel also agreed to extend the embargo on fur skins from Russia and China to include finished fur coats.

This would mean a firm would have to buy mink, ermine, muskrat or other skins from countries other than the Soviet Union or Mainland China before shipping coats to the United States.

The United States has been on a reciprocal trade policy since 1934, and if the committee bill becomes law, it would be a major departure from that policy.

Generally, most ways and means bills emerge from Congress virtually intact, the way they were drafted during committee sessions.

The Senate is expected to treat the measure favorably, perhaps adding even more import quotas on such products as steel or trucks. Twice before, the Senate has approved textile import quotas.

The oil and mink decisions were reached after the committee earlier had decided to impose mandatory quotas on shoes and noncotton textiles. The panel also voted the President discretionary authority to impose quotas on any product when imports increase sharply and significantly penetrate U.S. markets.

Free trade advocates contend quotas will drive up consumer prices. This is disputed, particularly by friends of quotas, notably O. R. Strackbein, head of the Nationwide Committee of Import-Export Policy, who contends a recent study shows prices of goods with quota restrictions have not risen as sharply as unrestricted goods in the last 10 years.

The Nixon Administration has agreed reluctantly only to quotas on textiles in an effort to pressure Japan to come to a voluntary agreement to limit their sales.

Under the shoe textile provision, a voluntary agreement would supersede any mandatory quotas.

Under the quota bill, shoes and textiles would be cut back by one third or more to average what imports were in the three-year period between 1967 and 1969. Cotton textiles already are covered by an international agreement.

A number of administration spokesman recently have cautioned against imposition of import quotas which could lead to retaliation against U.S. products — notably farm goods — sold overseas.

Organized labor generally supports the quota legislation, contending U.S. jobs are threatened by foreign goods.

The most recent administration spokesman announcing his opposition was secretary of State William P. Rogers, who said he hoped the House and Senate would modify the bill during floor debate.

Other administration officials expressing concern or outright opposition to quotas include Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin, Assistant Attorney General Richard McLaren and Paul McCracken, chairman of the council of economic advisers.

Reed Board Lists Post's Applicants

A screening committee for a new Reed School District superintendent has prepared a list of applicants for the post and recommended that the district board hold interviews July 25.

Acting Supt. Stanley H. Friese said the committee's report will be considered by the board when it meets Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Del Mar School.

The committee met in closed session Tuesday to review the 35 applicants for the post. Friese declined to release the names of the applicants or discolse the number still being considered.

HAPPY OUTING ENDS IN GRIM TRAGEDY

Group Pushes Master Plan On Ridgelands

Directors of the Alto-Sutton Manor District association last night urged the Mill Valley planning commission to develop a master plan for the city's ridgelands.

Publicity chairman Sara S. Ruffner said the board made the request in answer to the commission's criticism of the city council's rejection of plans by Cal-Fong Investment Co. for a 120-unit cottage development in Alto Bowl.

"We felt we could avoid problems like this in the future with a master plan rather than relying on piecemeal planning," Mrs. Ruffner said.

The board also authorized chairman John A. Walters to ask the state division of highways to establish a no-stopping zone on East Blithedale Avenue at Tower Drive. Mrs. Ruffner said several residents have complained of near collisions at the corner as cars stop to pick up hitchhikers.

The board set its next meeting for Aug. 19 at 8 p.m. at Walter's Home, 26 Plaza Drive.

Tiburon Pay Hike Decision Not Yet Actually Reached

Across-the-board pay raises of 5 per cent for all city employees were not approved in principle by the Tiburon City Council Monday, as reported in Tuesday's Independent-Journal.

Consideration of the salary hike was postponed until July 27 and, although city staff was directed to prepare paperwork needed to grant the raise, discussion of the proposal is yet to take place.

The 5 per cent raise is the proposal of the finance and administration committee, made up of Mayor Denis T. Rice and Councilman Albert H. Sennett. The committee also recommended that City Mgr. Lawrence D. Rose be given an increase of $930 yearly in his car allowance.

Another councilman, Anne L. Ellinwood, said yesterday that "I feel an upward revision of all (salary) ranges by 5 per cent, together with the 5 per cent step increases which I anticipate will be included in the budget, should be subjected to the most careful of scrutiny."

"I object to the use of an increased car allowance to avoid increasing the city manager's salary," she said. "If this proposal comes to a vote, I shall not vote affirmatively."

Injuries Corrected

Florence L. Nestel, 50, of 25 Alvarado Avenue, Mill Valley, injured in an accident on Highway 101 in Corte Madera June 28, was treated at Marin General Hospital for facial cuts and back sprain. The Independent-Journal report of the accident did not mention her injuries.

WARNING BY PROFESSOR:

Americans Becoming Dehumanized

By LARRY MOWELL

Like Dr. Frankenstein, the United States is building "monsters" in the name of science for Vietnam that are turning on its people. A University of California professor told an audience at the Marin Community Mental Health Center last night.

Dr. Marc Pilisuk, of the university's department of social welfare, noted that tiger cages penning prisoners in Vietnam shocked a Senate fact-finding committee "and then a few days later Sen. Mondale (Walter F., D-Minn.) said there are tiger cages in this country being used in Texas on migrant workers."

"How much of the material being developed — always for a good purpose — will be turned back on ourselves?" asked Pilsuk, who is writing a book on involvement of the Central Intelligence Agency and large corporations abroad.

He spoke of his own experience with a product developed for Vietnam: CNS gas, which causes vomiting.

While participating in a People's Park vigil last year, he said, a policeman handed him a bullhorn and told him the vigil would be allowed in Sproul Plaza at the university, so he convinced people to go there.

However, police and national guardsmen cordoned off the plaza and would allow no one to leave, he said. Then a helicopter flying low sprayed the dangerous CNS gas on the captive audience, he added.

He focused blame for such a tactic on researchers and the large private foundations who finance such research.

He explained how Michigan State University professors developed the South Vietnamese secret police. "They did their good research on how you could win the hearts and minds of the people to this oppressive regime," he said.

Failing to win them, they then research on scaring them and finally exterminating them, he charged.

Extermination is being done by systematically bombing the countryside to force people to move into enclaves, Pilisuk said. Daily bombings in Laos are as great as any during World War II, he said, adding that long after American ground troops have been withdrawn, the air war will continue.

Of the protected hamlet system, he said, "It goes beyond anything that Stalin conceived."

He told of constant questioning, indoctrination and spying on those in the hamlets. The tactics used for oppression have been developed by the 325 nonprofit American organizations doing research in Vietnam, he charged.

"What is the reason humane people allow all this to happen? Where are the good people when this is happening? In Nazi Germany not everybody was an (Adolf) Eichman. Most of the people there were people like ourselves," said the professor.

He asked how a professor from Michigan State could stand calmly by with notebook in hand while a South Vietnamese policeman applied electrical shocks to battered and bound prisoners.

His answer was dehumanization — psychologically detaching oneself from the human aspect of what was occuring.

This process allows people to feel no pain over millions starving in India and leads to a diminished sense of personal responsibility for actions, he said.

In other words, the Michigan State professor could involve himself with the procedural details of the torture and forget a human being was in agony, Pilisuk said.

"You get closer and closer to the line that people are expendable and must be exterminated if they don't come over," he said.

The same process of reconciling values to what is happening goes on in everyone, Pilisuk said. He noted that the "good people" of Nazi Germany made slight accomodations to the Nazis that allowed the slaughter of millions and alleged the mass of Americans are dehumanized enough to do the same.

Nasser, Moscow Agree To Demand Israeli Evacuation

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union and Egypt have agreed to demand Israeli "withdrawal from all occupied territory" as an indispensable condition for a political settlement, middle eastern diplomatic sources said today.

The agreement was signed today in a final top level meeting between the ruling Soviet triumvirate and visiting President Gamal Abdel Nasser. It also contains a Soviet commitment to "continue all possible aid" to the United Arab Republic, the sources said. Tass reported the Kremlin meeting without giving details on the agreement.

The agreement specifies the territories Israel is to evacuate —the Sinai Peninsula, the Gaza Strip, West Jerusalem, the west bank of the Jordan and the Golan Heights.

Nasser is scheduled to return to Cairo Friday.

Pony Parties Support Kathy's Mare

By PAT BALMES

Silence.

The four-year-old guests at Brooks Gordon's party in Freeman Park in Mill Valley on Tuesday eye Flash suspiciously. No volunteers.

"The biggest boy here" is recruited by the hostess and bravely steps up to the pinto Shetland pony. Kathy lifts him to the Western saddle, adjusts the stirrups to the length of the boy's legs and leads the sleepy little steed on a stroll around the park. When the first rider returns smiling and unscathed, the other little guests are keen for their turn.

A helper, Mrs. Milan Sladky of Mill Valley, enthuses, "I'll have to train a goat for a buggy now like we had in the Alps where I grew up!" She remarks that Mill Valley is very much like Bavaria.

Horsewoman Kathy relates that some mothers are afraid of the pony. " 'Don't get too near to the pony, children!' they say," chuckles the seventh grader who considers her pony very tame. "The little girls love the pony and want to ride it again and again, but the boys aren't so interested. Lifting them is the hardest part of the job."

Kathy and her pony went into business last year after Flash entertained at a friend's birthday party. Those guests wanted their mothers to hire Flash when the time for their birthday parties arrived.

Kathy, who lives at 33 Shelly Drive in Mill Valley, brings her Shetland pony to backyard parties when they are close to Flash's pasture, or else meets the children at Mill Valley parks or the Southern Marin

MR. AND MRS. JAMES H. WEBB (Faulkner photo)

Couple Married In San Francisco Rite

Leslie Gaddy of San Francisco became the bride of James H. Webb of San Rafael Friday evening in a ceremony at the Swedenborgen Church in San Francisco. A reception followed at the Alta Mira Hotel in Sausalito.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Gaddy of San Anselmo, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Warren E. Webb of Berkeley.

Matron of honor was Mrs. John C. Dalton of Gilroy, and the bridegroom's brother, Bruce Webb, was best man. Guests were ushered to their seats by Leslie's brothers, John L. and William Gaddy.

The bride was graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School and attended Chico State College and Grace Ball Secretarial School in San Francisco. She is employed by United States Steel Corporation in San Francisco.

James is also the brother of Marty Webb. He is a graduate of Berkeley High School and the Los Angeles Art Center College and is employed as the manager of Strawberry Town and Country Village.

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Females fighting the advent of the "midi" in fall fashions have a Women's Lib-style champion in the White House. She's 22-year-old Julie Eisenhower, who firmly declares the longer skirts are not for her and she won't wear them.

As Julie sees it, women have become "sheep" in having to follow fashion trends they neither like nor want. She is ready to lead a revolt and sees no reason to toss out her present wardrobe.

Julie's mother, the First Lady, has been the most adventuresome in trying new skirt lengths since last spring. But even she seems uncertain of where she wants her hemline.

Mrs. Nixon has been wearing her hemlines from knee length to two and three inches below.

As the summer goes on, both Julie and her sister, Tricia Nixon, 24, have remained holdouts with skirts well above the knees. But it's doubtful they can buck the tide.

Inevitably they are fashion leaders and inevitably they will find the New York and Washington stores showing only the longer lengths. Julie's complaint is echoed in the White House by most of the young staffers who prefer the miniskirt or at least hemlines slightly above the knee.

Slim, darkhaired Julie Robinson, who is on the First Lady's press staff, says of the longuette: "Are you kidding? I wouldn't be caught dead in them. I don't know anybody on the staff who plans to buy them.

"I don't have the money to buy a new wardrobe. Besides, I don't want to look like Ruby Keeler."

But Julie Eisenhower is becoming more daring and less ingenue with her hairdos. For the Women's National Press Club's golden anniversary dinner, she wore her hair in an updo evening coiffure of soft curls which was very much admired, especially by her husband.

"I've been trying to get her to wear it up for a long time," said Julie's husband, David.

The President's younger daughter also has found that women are not welcome at some exclusive country clubs and it comes as a bit of a shock.

When the young Eisenhowers were visiting David's grandmother, Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, in Augusta, Ga., a few months ago, they decided to play a round of golf at the Augusta Country Club where former President Dwight D. Eisenhower had spent many vacations.

When Julie showed up with her clubs at the all-male golf club, the managers handled the situation deftly by telling Julie she could "tour" the course with her husband. She got the message, but confesses it did not occur to her that some clubs bar women.

A New Look Long For Stewardesses

A new $3.5 million stewardess ensemble, which features a generally longer look, will be introduced by United Air Lines late next month. Designed by Hollywood couturier Jean Louis the wardrobe will include as its basic garment a red jumper which will come to the top of the knee, and a matching red midi-length winter great-coat. The latter will cover the knees. There also will be shiny black boots. Length of the current ensemble, designed by Jean Louis and introduced in 1968: three inches above the knee.

Women Better With Finances, Say Bankers

By DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Another male myth about woman has been disproved through talks with bankers.

According to song, legend, night club comics and male locker room gossip, woman is a lovable but birdbrained household liability when it comes to handling money or a checkbook. To hear most men tell it she balances the checkbook by standing it on end or rounding off to the nearest dollar.

Not so, says bankers across the country. A sampling of full service bank officers indicates that today's woman has more money sense than her chief critic, man. The average female is more reliable when it comes to paying bank loans, writing checks that don't bounce and meeting bank charge card obligations.

"No matter what some people think about the female's sense of money, or lack of it, our women customers are generally quite responsible," Henry Fletcher, president of the Merchants Bank of Aurora, Ill. maintains.

"When we have trouble with a loan, we often go directly to the wife who straightens it out."

J. Grant Bickmore, president of the Idaho Bank and Trust Co. in Pocatello, recently said that housewives normally are more apt to keep their checkbooks balanced and write fewer bad checks. The same thing applies to meeting charge card payments, he said.

A bank officer at Boatmen's National Bank in St. Louis said men are more likely to be late in paying off personal installment loans than women. "And the ladies respond faster to a second notice," he noted.

A loan officer at the Chemical Bank New York Trust Co. said women are more compulsive about paying off debts and often settle a two or three year loan in one year. A young Manhattan career girl recently paid off a two-year loan in exactly eleven weeks, he said.

One large California bank which did not want to be named went so far as to say that men — not women — exceed the limits of their charge cards by eight to one.

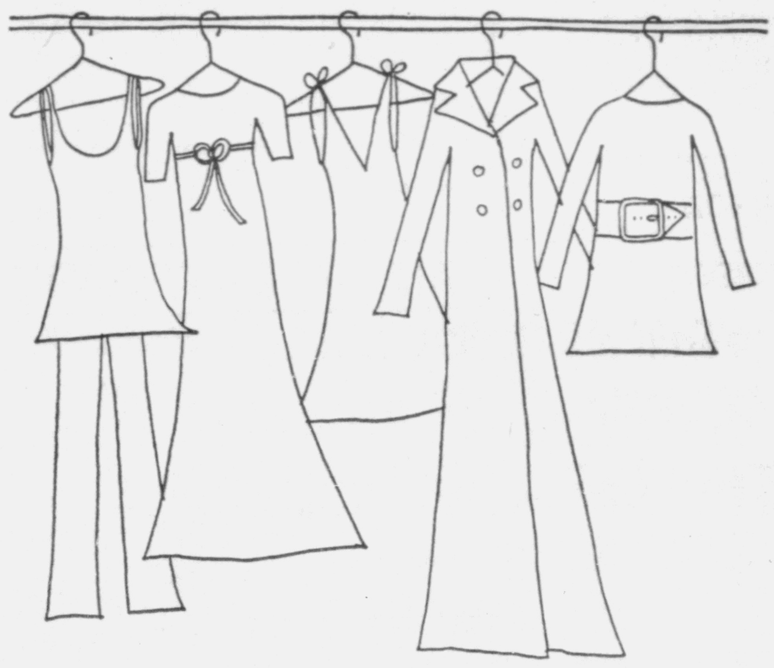
A recent banking survey shows that 40 per cent of the wives today decide where money is to be saved and 33 per cent where the checking account will be located. Since most banks are not open at night, and the husband works during the day, it has fallen to the woman to handle banking matters. This survey showed that 24 per cent of the wives handled auto loans.

"What's so strange about that?" asked Barbara Casey, 27, and a St. Louis housewife, an edge of anger in her voice.

"After all, we're the ones who buy the groceries, household furniture, clothes for the kids and settle most of the bills. Naturally, our banking habits are more dependable."

And the bankers tend to agree.



This is the new length.

In other words, take your choice. Because that's what fashion is all about these days. Choice. You can be maxi in the morning, midi at midday and mini by night. You can even be mini-dressed and maxi-coated. And of course, you don't have to skirt the issue at all. You can simply be girl-in-pants. Which can also be mini, midi, or maxi. Now, see what we mean? The new length is no length except the one (or two or three) that turns you on.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Every Summer Stubborn, Bossy Grandmother Comes To Visit

DEAR HELEN:

Every summer my grandmother comes to visit, and life becomes hell. She is stubborn, bossy, and won't mind her own business.

Here's an example: Some boys were here when my folks were going out for the evening. They told my girl friend and I that they should leave now, but the boys whispered they'd meet us outside 15 minutes later.

My grandmother didn't see us sneak out, but when I came back in to get an empty bottle so we could play "Spin the Bottle," she said it was time for young ladies to be inside. (She didn't know the boys were there.) So I told her I had to go out and look for the fountain pen I'd lost. Then the two boys and us two girls made out. (She didn't know we were making out.)

Grandma called and said she would tell my mother, but we wouldn't listen to her.

Well, when my parents came home, guess who got in big trouble because of Grandma's big mouth? — RED-EYED "14"

DEAR 14:

Guess who got in trouble because she was a sneaky kid who deserved it? Sorry, chum, I'm on your grandmother's side here. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Two of my best friends have become involved with drugs. They use LSD, speed, marijuana and pills. All they do is tell me how beautiful it is and try to coax me into it. They'd like to turn on the whole world, but I can see them changing and I don't want to be like that.

I've been friends with them for six years, but the other day I heard them talking about slipping something in my drink.

Please tell me how I can keep straight and still keep their friendship? — WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED:

Your letter points up one of the biggest problems in the drug fight. Users think it's their natural right to convert their friends, but the straights keep silent for fear of being labeled square.

If you really care about these two girls, you'll switch to honesty. Tell them how they've changed, show them where they may be headed, meet every argument for with an argument against and keep pushing them to visit the drug-help house in your town — where they'll meet kids who have been there and are making a comeback.

This will accomplish one of two things: They'll either turn off dope, or turn you off as a preachy dope they'd rather avoid. Let's hope it's the former. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

You've had many touching, humorous and honest "What Is A" letters. May I add another? It may not be as warm and praising, but it's just as honest.

What Is A Drug Addict?

A lonely youth seeking security, longing to belong.

A scared kid with a hypodermic — and then suddenly he's a ruthless kid stealing for the next fix, boosting meat in the local supermarket, mugging people, conning others, holding up a gas station, dealing drugs, all to support a habit he "couldn't get."

A fellow running after a bag of junk, too tired to go on running, but too addicted to stop; sick when the last fix wears off, thin from lack of sleep, poor diet and too many needles, glassy-eyed with pinned pupils.

But most of all, who is the drug addict? Your brother? Your sister? Your best friend? — You?? — GERRI.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

China Is Recognized By Italy's Designers

Princess Irene Galitzine, whose showrooms always are crowded with Italian nobility, had a Manchurian line this season with prints inspired by Tang Dynasty paintings.

Mila Schon, who caters to the industrial royalty of Northern Italy, was all kimonos and coolies Tuesday night as she finally abandoned her ultrashort miniskirts in favor of a length just below the knee.

To keep warm and dry in winter she had huge capes in man-made Borg seal which reversed to a plastic fabric in red and black printed Chinese characters.

They went with high boots, unlike evening wear which had satin covered shoes with high wood platforms and a square toe which covered the vamp and left the back half of the foot out in the cold. The shoes caused the models to mince in the kind of walk imperial Chinese ladies had to use with their bound feet.

Kimonos came in doubleface wool for day and crepes and satins for evening. Kimono jackets and coolie coats teamed both with long skirts and with trousers, long or coolie length. Many of the jackets were sleeveless and buttoned off to show that what looked like a suit really was a dress and jacket.

Her over-all look was slim, even her ponchos over pants cut like Chinese ponchos—pointed poncho bottoms but Chinese side-closing necks.

She used some of her opulent all-bungle beaded fabric in white for a decidedly cowboy outfit of white satin pants with beaded chaps and hat which her audience took as a dig at Valentino, reigning Rome fashion king.

The season's cleverest use of pleats and tucks gave a fresh look to Federico Forquet's collection. Midcalf coats were slim but pleated all around from collar to hem. There were box pleats in soft gray tweed, rib-stitched pleats in brown and unpleated tucks sewn so they stood out in narrow three dimensional folds.

Gucho-Zoave — coolie — call-them-what-you-will pants, the ones that just cover the knee and are stagged or tucked into high boots, were popular both at Schon and Forquet.

Villemure-Whitburn Vows Said

Teresa A. Whitburn and Jack J. Villemure of Cotati were married at Grace Lutheran Church in Novato on Saturday.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Whitburn of Novato and the late Mr. Whitburn. Her uncle, a twin brother of her late father, Roger Whitburn of Bedford, N.Y. gave her in marriage.

Mrs. John Robbins of Bridgeville was matron of honor, and Cathy Bacho of Novato was the bridesmaid.

Don Anderson of San Rafael was best man and Mark Whitburn, the bride's brother, was the usher.

Teresa was graduated from Novato High School and will be graduated from Sonoma State College next year.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E.E. Villemure of Cap de la Madeline, Quebec, Canada. He was graduated from Assumption High School there and is employed at the Santa Rosa Post Office.

The couple will live in oCtati.

ART REVIEW

By MARY LOU STRIBLING

Webster defines romanticism as a tendency to be fanciful or imaginative, while realism relates to qualities which are true to life. As far as art is concerned, it is practically impossible to mark a clear division between the two attitudes, since what may seem very real to one person may register as pure fantasy to another.

It is always interesting, however, to observe how different viewpoints can influence the manner in which a subject is presented, and the current exhibit by the Marin Society of Artists provides the opportunity to do just that.

The Romance and Reality show, which will continue through Aug. 2 in the Frances Young Gallery at the Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross, is focused primarily, though not entirely, upon representational works.

Representational art is often misconstrued as photographic naturalism. Actually, it implies merely that the artist attempts to produce a likeness of, not an imitation of, some image he finds meaningful. The outcome of his efforts may be far removed from images objectively perceived by his eye alone, and include subjective elements from his own emotional involvement.

Such involvement characterizes the majority of the pieces in the society's new show. Both impressionistic and expressionistic influences are clearly evident, and it appears that some of the current art fads have been deliberately excluded, for there is not a single soup can, six-eyed nude, or funky ceramic assemblage in sight.

A few examples are technically inept and trite in concept, but there are a number of really fine works among both paintings and graphics. It is a bit weighted, perhaps, on the landscape side, but there is enough stylistic variety to make the imbalance forgivable.

Merit awards were given to Eleanor Elsocht's acrylic painting, "Mystique," and to "Waiting," a sensuous composition in rich browns and reds by Phyllis Taplitz. Ursula Johnson also received a merit award for her beautifully textured transfer drawing, "Life Signs." Honorable mentions went to works by John Harte, Patricia Meyer and Carol Sideman.

While labels have no bearing on the quality of art, it would have been provocative (and certainly courageous) if entries had been tagged either "realistic" or "romantic" to afford some perception of the artists' personal evaluations. An editorial note at the gallery door states: ". . . New materials, new perspectives, and new insights allow the contemporary artist more freedom in interpreting his world. Is it romance or reality? That depends on the point of view."

High-Wire Artist, 65, Plans Longest, Highest Walk Ever

TALLULAH FALL, Ga. (UPI) — High-wire artist Karl Wallenda planned short practice sessions today in final preparations for his death defying act Saturday over Tallulah Gorge — billed as the longest and highest tightwalk ever attempted.

Wallenda, 65, said there will be no dry-run walk on the two-inch cable stretched 997-feet across the 700-foot deep Gorge.

"If I walk it, I walk it once and that's it," Wallenda said.

Promoters hope to draw some 50,000 spectators who will pay $5 each to see the act. Part of the proceeds will be used to build an amphitheater and to promote tourism at this once-popular vacation spot in the northeast Georgia mountains.

A performer who called himself Professor Leon crossed the same Gorge 84 years ago but his walk was not as high nor as long as Wallenda's.

Wallenda plans to stand on his head during the walk in honor of U.S. fighting men in Vietnam.

"It makes me very proud to do that," said the German-born Wallenda.

"Wind is my biggest enemy," he said. To help balance him on the walk, Wallenda will carry a 45-pound pole used in the seven-man pyramid act once performed by himself and members of his family. Two members of the group, a son-in-law and nephew, were killed in a 1962 accident in Detroit while performing the team-rope-walking act. Wallenda and other team members were injured.

Auditions For Play Set In Mill Valley

Auditions for the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts production of "Moon for the Misbegotten" will be held at 8 p.m. July 27 and 29 at the Mill Valley Golf Clubhouse, 280 Buena Vista Avenue.

Persons interested in working on the production staff of the Eugene O'Neill play may also attend the auditions.

City Worker Bill Before Assembly

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A bill barring cities, counties and special districts from requiring employees to live within their jurisdiction has cleared the final committee hurdle and gone to the Assembly floor.

The bill, SB 1114 by Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, already had cleared the Senate, and Assembly approval would send it to the governor.

One possible hitch, however, is the prospect of a bid by some legislators to amend the bill on the floor to include charter cities. This could arouse opposition to the bill by the powerful League of California Cities, which so far has taken no position on the bill, a spokesman for the senator said.

No Charges Filed

No charge has been filed in Marin Municipal Court against Richard Sheldon Knowles, 18, former San Rafael resident now of Berkeley, who was arrested early Tuesday near the scene of a boat burglary in a San Rafael yacht harbor.

Silent Film Showing

"The Scarlet Letter," a 1926 silent film starring Lillian Gish, Lars Hanson and Henry B. Walthall, will be shown tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Sausalito Youth Center, 180 Harrison Street.

Two Stores In Novato List Burglary Losses

Someone entered two adjoining Novato stores Monday night or early Tuesday morning and took small amounts of money, police reported.

The stores are Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Parlor at 1769 Grant Avenue, which lost $50, and Amber Griffin Book Store at 1769A Grant, which lost $6, according to police. Entry was made through the building attics.

Personnel Group To Pick Leaders

A new chairman and a vice chairman will be picked by the Marin Personnel Commission tomorrow at the civic center.

The meeting is set for 3 p.m. in the supervisors' chambers on the third floor. Current chairman is Bella Aaron, and vice chairman, Robert B. McCreadie. The commission usually rotates the chairmanship each year.

Commissioners also will discuss proposed county policy to give the "culturally disadvantaged" (minorities and those lacking in formal education) a better chance at county employment.

Should Jets Pay For Using Quiet?

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI)— Airlines with supersonic jets "should be made to pay for using up our quiet," says professor William Baxter of Stanford University.

Baxter, a lawyer-economist, told a news conference Wednesday "sonic boom and excessive noise on takeoff is just another example of environmental deterioration," adding that "rules should be changed to refashion concepts of ownership."

"For example," he said, "airlines should be made to pay for using up our quiet."

Regents Meet Today On Grading Issue

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The University of California regents met today with an agenda including the question of whether professors, in this time of unrest, are giving students better grades than in the past.

The question was raised at the regents' April meeting by Regent Glenn Campbell, and university administrators were instructed to gather data from all nine campuses, a big job.

Campbell, a hawk on the problem of how to handle student dissenters, suggested professors were lowering their standards. This, it was implied, made it easier for students to spend time in disturbances.

When Campbell raised his question, administrators agreed students are being given considerably higher grades than in some years ago. However, the administrators denied this was because teachers were favoring student activism.

The reason, they said, was because students are better prepared than their predecessors.

This is partly because of the influence of television, and partly because admission standards are much higher than they were for the present generation's parents.

Another matter to be discussed during the regents' two-day meeting is the effect of the legislature's slashing of the university's proposed $74 million operating budget by 12 per cent. The construction budget was cut from $84 million to $900,000.

BEST SHOWS FOR TONIGHT

Unusual on television tonight:

KCRA (3), KRON (4), 7:30 p.m. — Chet Huntley's "NBC White Paper" analysis of the migrant worker's plight, filmed in Florida citrus-growing regions, is given a repeat showing.

KGO(7), 7:30 p.m. — The "San Francisco Magic Electronic Rock Festival" is a three-and-one-half hour program in color devoted to youth with music, news about summer happenings in the Bay Area and suggested help with drug problems.

KQED (9), 8:30 p.m. — Roman Polanski, director, is interviewed on "The Film Generation: Cinema of the Absurd," a segment on "NET Festival" that examines the satiric and allegorical qualities of the "absurd" style.

KPIX (5), 9 p.m. — Glenn Ford, Geraldine Page and Angela Lansbury star in the movie "Dear Heart," the comedy-drama tale of a small-town postmistress in New York for a convention who meets an attractive traveling salesman and falls in love.

TELEVISION IN REVIEW

'Courtship Of Eddie's Father' Underrated

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — I'm beginning to think that ABC-TV's "The Courtship of Eddie's Father" is one of television's most underrated series. In fact, I'm sure of it.

I've been watching some reruns of the show this summer, and I suggest you do also to see how a so-called "situation comedy" can be quietly civilized and gentle, particularly in its contemporary attitude toward the relationship of a father and his young son.

The fact is that, although "The Courtship of Eddie's Father" is technically classified as a situation comedy, it is a bit more than that—not heavy stuff certainly, but an entertainingly cool and intelligent piece of light, human fare.

The series is based originally on a movie of the same name, concerning a small boy who tries to find a wife for his father (Glenn Ford). In the television adaptation, the Glenn Ford part is taken over by Bill Bixby.

And although the boy in the series (Brandon Cruz) is also dedicated to seeking out a wife for his widowed father, this is merely the running thread—a sort of light underpinning—for a program that is essentially about a man and a boy. And this relationship is what makes it unique and often nicely touching.

The way Bixby and young Mr. Cruz get along on an acting basis is altogether charming. They are so real in their attitudes and affection toward each other that they frequently seem to be an actual father and son.

And, as their housekeeper, Miyoshi Umeki is a fine part of the regular cast—never too obvious, yet a mature, occasional mother substitute for Cruz. The notion that Miss Umeki could well be the wife that the young man is seeking for his father is always softly present, but is never pushed hard. It is just that Miss Umeki's understated presence is, as always, gently potent.

In "The Courtship of Eddie's Father," the main characters are not buffoons and cartoon equivalents. The father, unlike many on television, is no fool. The son, unlike many on video, is no brat. The situations are often ones that we can recognize.

Furthermore, what gives the series some added substance is that many episodes make quiet statements in the area of values. Unlike most television series, relatives such as grandmothers are not necessarily shown with affection. Friendship has high priority.

I liked one program in which the young boy frankly decides he doesn't care much for his grandmother — his father's mother. She is, in fact, pretty definitely a pain. And Bixby is nicely understanding about it, for his chief loyalty is to his son.

County Strike Hinted As Negotiations Stall

A strike by county firemen and sheriff's deputies is possible if deadlocked wage negotiations are not resolved soon, an employee spokesman said today.

"Yes, a strike has been discused," said Randall M. Prevo, manager of the Marin County Employee Association, which is bargaining in behalf of 200 public safety employees, including deputies, firemen and communication workers, on a new contract. But Prevo said he has advised the employees to seek mediation first.

Safety personnel are the lone employee group who have not reached agreement with the county on salaries and benefits for 1970-71.

Both Prevo and Asst. County Administrator John F. Barrows, representing the county, admitted today that talks are deadlocked.

Prevo said the safety employees met last night and formed an action committee to explore steps that can be taken. He said the possibility of a strike was discussed.

"However, I advised them to wait until after a mediator has been called in to try to settle the differences," Prevo added.

Prevo said he had been in touch with the state conciliation service in San Francisco and asked its supervising officer, James Marshall, to mediate. "I'm expecting a call from him today," Prevo said.

Barrows said the county will get together with the mediator as soon as Prevo arranges the meeting. Recommendations of the mediator are not binding on either side.

Sheriff's deputies, who originally asked for a 17.5 per cent pay raise, are now holding out for a 15 per cent raise, Barrows disclosed. Firemen and communications workers want a 10 per cent raise, and firemen also are seeking a reduced work week.

"The firemen are now working 95 hours a week, highest in the Bay Area, said Prevo. "They asked for a reduction to 72 hours but are willing to settle for 84, or any reduction that would show good faith."

Barrows said the county's last offer was a 7.5 per cent pay raise for deputies and 5 per cent for all other safety employees.

In addition to the pay and hour issues, the effective date of any pay raise is also at odds.

The 1969-70 contract expired on June 30, but a 60-day extension clause went into effect.

Prevo said the safety employees want any pay raise to take effect as of July 1, since other regular employees got theirs on that date. Barrows, on the other hand, contends that raises should take effect on the day a new contract is signed.

All other bargaining units representing regular county employees, probation workers, social workers, and nurses have settled for pay raises of 5 to 6 per cent. Management and mid-management categories, department heads and their immediate subordinates got no raises.

Sewage Plant Site Near Agate Beach

A permanent sewage traatment plan will be built near Agaet Beach on the Bolinas Mesa, the Bolinas publicity district board decided last night, according to clerk Jane Boyer.

Mrs. Boyer said the chosen site drew no protests from the 60 persons who attended last night's meeting. Two other sites under consideration, one at the west of the Bolinas lagoon and one near Bolinas School, were turned down by district directors after a number of residents spoke against the locations.

"The other sites would have been cheaper, but were esthetically unsuitable," Mrs. Boyer explained. "Cost of the plant, which will serve both Stinson Beach and Bolinas, has not yet been determined," she said, "and land cost has not yet been decided."

Mrs. Boyer said most of the residents on the large mesa have indicated they want to be included in the sewer system, being built by the utility district in conjunction with the Stinson Beach County Water District. The Bolinas district has been under fire from the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board for dumping raw sewage into the mouth of Bolinas lagoon.

Printers Press For Wage Boosts

RICHMOND (UPI)—The International Typographical Union will press for improved wage and benefits in contract negotiations because newspaper profits are increasing, an ITU vice president has said.

Tam District Approves Loan To Club

The Tamalpais Community Services District board has voted to loan $13,500 from its reserve funds to the Tamalpais Valley Improvement Club to pay off a mortgage on 11.5 acres of land the club owns, director Glenn Lambacher reported.

He said the improvement club plans to donate the land to the services district for a park as soon as the mortgage, which the club used to build its clubhouse, is paid.

The Tamalpais Community Services District also:

PUBLIC HEARING — Set a public hearing on a proposed $30 annual sewer service charge for Aug. 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the district office, 305 Bell Lane.

RATE INCREASE — Postponed consideration of a rate increase for garbage pickup in the district until July 21 at 7 p.m. Henry's Garbage Services is asking for the hike, which would raise one-can rates from $2.10 to $2.70 and two-can rates from $3.80 to $5.

GRADING — Accepted an offer from the Allan-Marin Co., of Mill Valley to grade for the district's proposed little league field, to be built later this year at Tamalpais Valley School.

Houston Brass Keeping Eyes On Dolinsek

By RALPH CHATOIAN

A first baseman for the Columbus, Ga., Astros of the Class AA Southern League, the 22-year-old left-hander has been leading the league in batting throughout the first half of the season.

His batting average, prior to last night's game, was at .317, after being in the .330's most of the season.

"I've been in a slump the last few days, not making good contact," he said yesterday via long distance telephone from Ashville, Tenn. where the Columbus team was playing. "But I'll break it."

About leading the league in hitting, Dolinsek said, "There's still a long time to go. We've played 90 games so far and there are still 51 to go. I just hope I keep having a good year."

In addition to his lofty batting average, Dolinsky has slugged six home runs, 10 triples, 12 doubles, and has knocked in 44 runs. His 96 hits and 19 triples also lead the league.

Dolinsek said he had set goals for himself before the season started, and they included 80 runs batted in, 10 home runs and 25 doubles. He has a good chance of reaching them.

Thisweek's edition of the St. Louis Sporting News has a three column feature story about Dolinsek, the player of the week in the Southern League. The story reports that Grady Hatton, a Houston vice president was in Columbus, and had high praise for the young slugger, as did Tal Smith, another Houston vice president. Also John Mullen, assistant to general manager Spec Richardson was praising Dolinsek's ability. The six-foot-two, 185-pound Dolinsek hopes to get a promotion to Oklahoma City, Okla., of the AAA American Association for next season, which would be just a step away from the big time in Houston's Astrodome.

He broke into professional baseball last year after winning honors at Arizona State University. He helped the Sun Devils win the NCAA tournament and was named the tourney's most valuable player. In 67 games for Arizona State he batted .346 and rapped nine home runs. He decided to forego his senior year of college and signed a professional contract.

He was assigned to Covington of the Appalachian Rookie League and in 60 games batted .301 with seven homers. Thus his promotion to the tougher AA division.

In addition to being a great hitter and outfielder, he pitched during his prep days at Novato High and was author of a no-hitter in one of his victories during his senior year. He was all-Marin Athletic League in football and basketball as well as baseball.

He said he found the pitching much better in the Southern League than was the case last year. "In the rookie league, the young pitchers have the physical ability, but they don't have the experience and know-how we see here."

"You have to be prepared both mentally and physically to play professional baseball."

Killebrew Doesn't Fit The Description

In Baseball, "being a competitor" means 1) smashing your bat on home plate when you pop up; 2) kicking your helmet when you strike out; 3) demolishing the water cooler when you hit into a double play; 4) cursing the umpire on a called third strike; 5) cursing the press when you lose; 6) starting fights when you're having a bad day.

Being a competitor means holding a big league job even though you can't field, hit or throw up to major league standards. "He hated to lose, he did so much of it," his epitaph should read. Being a competitor means, when you can't get round on the fast ball, you pretend you're hitting behind the runner. You bunt a lot. Some chronic, imaginary, ready-on-demand but undiagnosable injury is advisable for days when young, unhittable fireballers are throwing for the other team, but be ready to limp bravely out of the dugout in the late innings when he has been lifted for a pinchhitter and a sore-armed reliever.

There's Too Much Silence

The trouble with Harmon Clayton Killebrew is, he's not a competitor. You can tell that because 1) he's fourth in the league in batting; 2) he's first in the league in home runs, runs batted in, bases on balls — and silence. "Competitors" never lead the league in anything but whirlpool baths and cracked helmets.

You can tell he's not a competitor because he smiles a lot. "Competitors" never smile. They scowl a lot. You can tell he's not a competitor because he's never been kicked out of a game. "Competitors" get kicked out of lots of games — particularly, when Sam McDowell is pitching.

John McGraw probably would have taken to putting tacks in his bed, salt in his coffee, hiding his shoes or telephoning him anonymously late at night, anything to shake him up. Ty Cobb used to play this game in a cold rage. So did Jackie Robinson. Don Drysdale used to look at batters as if they were captured spies.

He Answers With A Smile

Killebrew goes through the game like a door-to-door salesman. A writer (never mind who) once predicted in a World Series that Harmon would have a cauliflowered chest at third base fielding doubleplay balls. In the locker room, the next day, Harmon smiled at the offender, bared his breast and said, "See, it isn't even bleeding." Another writer called him "Harmless" Killebrew. Harmon thought it was funny.

He has never had a salary squabble. ("Competitors" really earn their reputations when it comes to negotiations with the front office.) He once turned down a testimonial fee for a cigaret after he almost choked to death for weeks trying to learn how to smoke. ("Competitors" would endorse poison ivy.) He cheerfully slugs his way through the snows of Minnesota in winter to attend functions at the request of the publicity department. ("Competitors" usually start off demanding "how much?"). You would think, then, from the foregoing that Harmon Killebrew would be a marginal player, a platooner just happy to be hanging on, an "out" man to pitchers, trade bait for front offices.

All Managers Should Have One

But Killebrew has hit 472 home runs in his career. He is hitting them this year at the rate of one every 10 times at bat. His career rate is one every 12.5 at bats, second only to Babe Ruth. He has batted in 1,218 runs, has scored more than 1,000. He is smiling his way to the Hall of Fame. The important statistic is Minnesota has won two championships in five years with him. "Every manager," says his manager, Bill Rigney, "ought to have one Killebrew to manage before he dies."

(Jim Gilmartin on Vacation)

$2 Million Difference In Football

NEW YORK (UPI)—A difference of $2 million a year in pension and insurance benefit contributions is the primary cause of the current dispute between the National Football League Players Association and the 26 NFL club owners.

The Players Association has proposed that benefit contributions on the part of the owners be increased by $3.6 million a year while the owners have offered an increase of $1.6 million, it was revealed today by Tom Vance, the public relations director for the Association.

REDUCTION

In addition to their lower figure, the owners' offer, according to Vance, "was conditioned on the players season game pay and permanently waiving all financial rights to their licensing revenues."

"If the players made these personal concessions," Vance added, "it would cost them at least $600,000 a year."

The Association contends that a projected $10 to $13 million increase in television revenues alone for the NFL make the player proposal reasonable.

COSTS LESS

"Furthermore, the players have volunteered that pension contributions would be reduced if actual television revenues fall short of the owners' forecast," Vance said. "Although the owners profess to find the player demand outrageous, the NFL Players Association's proposal would cost one-third less than the benefit plan of baseball."

While the dispute rages, college all star football players were back on the field today in Evanston, Ill., following a one day strike in support of the Players Association.

"We have decided that we have accomplished what we decided to accomplish by striking one day in backing up the player's association," All Star spokesman Steve Tannen said Wednesday night following a team meeting. "But we also felt duty to the All Star game and to the people who are helped by its charities so we felt it best to resume practice."

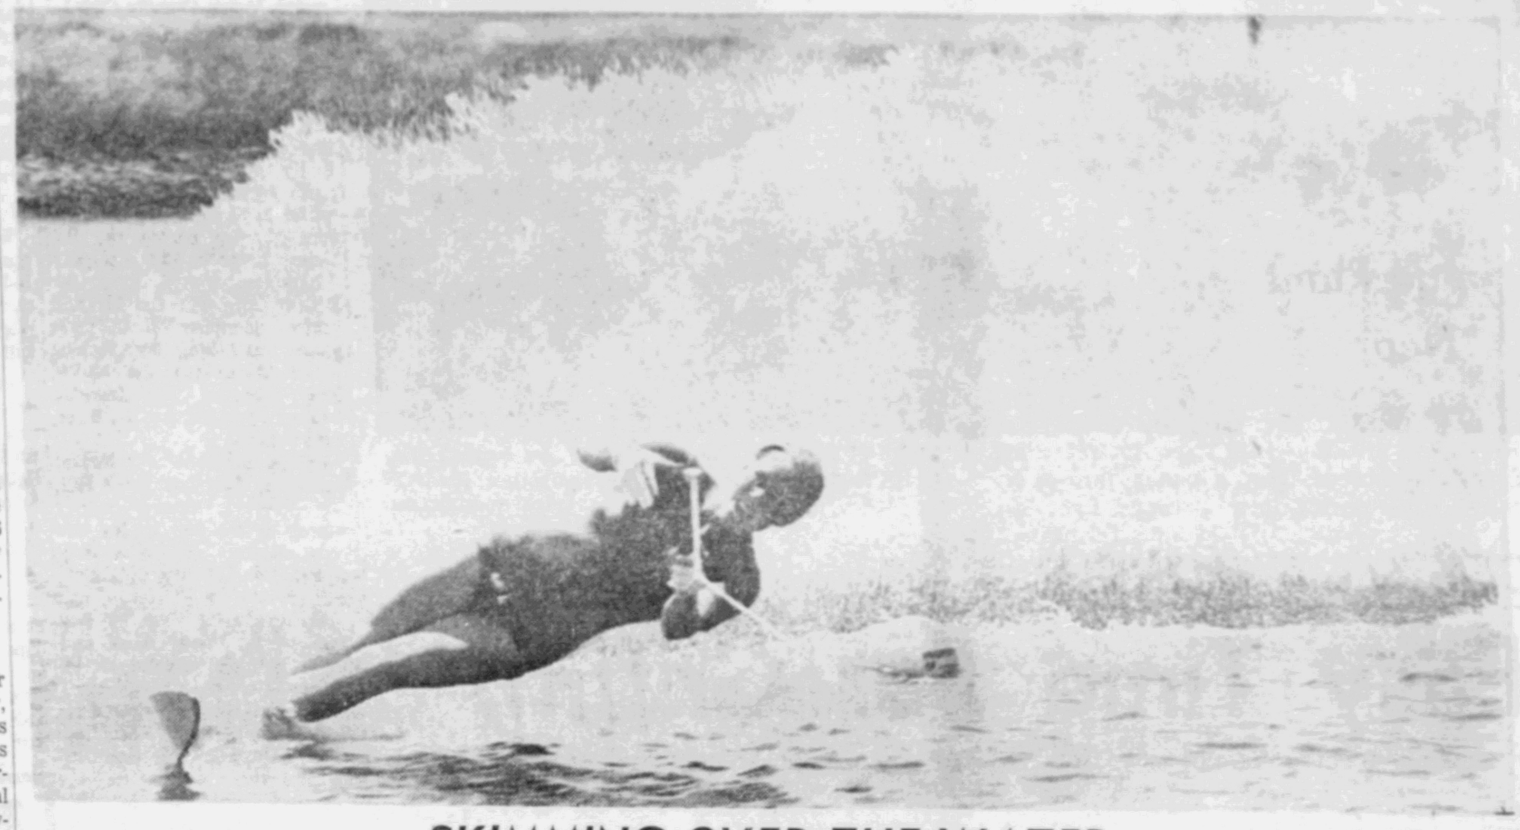
OTTO ATTENDS

Otto Graham, coach of the All Stars, attended the meeting and urged the players to show up for supervised preparation for the annual game with the Kansas City Chiefs July 31.

Graham told the squad meeting that the coaches would report for practice on schedule Thursday morning and that he hoped the players would also report.

The players boycotted organized practice Wednesday. Some players, however, worked out individually.

Harold Hutchings, president of Chicago Tribune Charities sponsors of the annual game, said "we wish to emphasize that Chicago Tribune Charities is not in any way involved in the dispute. We are a third party with only one interest—to se that the game is played."



SKIMMING OVER THE WATER

Sharon Boivie, 19-year-old Novatan, will be among the 21 international water ski stars competing this weekend in the California World Cup tournament at Berkeley's Aquatic Park. Mike Suyderhoud, of San Anselmo, reigning world's champion, also will be among the U. S. entries competing against the best skiers from seven other nations. Cost for the tourney, which starts at 11 a.m. both Saturday and Sunday, is $2 each day for adults and $1 for children, and an additional $1 for island bleacher tickets. Men's and women's competition will be in slalom, tricks and jumping.

AT DRAKE HIGH

Summer Success In Basketball

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Even if it weren't the only one in existence, the Drake High School summer basketball program would probably be the best in the bay area.

Started 10 years ago by Bob Fitzhenry, then basketball coach and now the San Anselmo school's recreation director, (who, incidentally, will return as basketball coach next winter), the league has enjoyed continuous prosperity. Originally it included eight teams. Now there are 25 in two divisions, with more waiting in line.

Twelve adult teams from Marin County, and 13 high school squads from Marin and San Francisco combine to play five nights a week, three games a night at the Drake gym, where an estimated 150 people are always in the stands, (admission is free).

The high school division includes all eight Marin County Athletic League schools, plus St. Ignatius, Wilson, Lowell, Riordan and Balboa from San Francisco. Those, incidentally, are five of the city's best teams.

During its history the league has seen some pretty fair players and teams. Fitzhenry remembers some years ago when adult teams from San Francisco competed. "There was a team called St. Agnes that would have won the Pacific Coast Conference," he said. No doubt with players such as Fred LaCour and Tom Meschery, a one time San Francisco Warrior now with Seattle of the National Basketball Association.

Among the players in the league this year are All-Northern California star Kevin Restani of Riordan and Lowell's hotshot Mark Gilberg, who is averaging 31 points a game in league play.

The success of the league, while due largely, of course, to its monopoly of summer basketball in the bay area, can also be credited to Fitzhenry and the Drake recreation department, which runs things with clockwork efficiency.

Since three games must be played each night, certain time-saving innovations have been brought into use, among them a change in foul-shooting rules. Instead of shooting every foul which calls for a foul shot, the teams take the ball out of bounds through the fifth team foul. After that, two shots are awarded for a normal one shot soul, and three chances to make two are given for two shot fouls.

"We were concerned that maybe this would increase fouling, but it didn't at all," states Fitzhenry. "I think it really improves the game." As another time-saving gimick, teams scheduled to play immediately following a game in progress warm up in the girls' gym next door.

Also concerned with maintaining a high degree of sportsmanship, the league instituted a rule last year stating that a team on which two technical fouls is called forfeits the game. Additionally, any further trouble, on or off the court, results in suspension of the team from the league for the rest of the season.

Actually, that rule is seldom needed. It's been used only once. Its existence is to insure that the games will not be subject to the high tensions of the regular basketball season.

"We want to keep this a low pressure situation," says Fitzhenry.

Terra Linda DiMaggio '9' In Key Win

Terra Linda shut out Annex Motors, 7-0 in a battle for first place in the Northern division, and the Drake Pirates edged Toby's Truckers, 4-3 to stay a full game ahead of the Italian Club in the South yesterday in the Marin County Joe DiMaggio Baseball League.

FOUR-HITTER

John Klinger threw a four-hitter and struck out 11 as Terra Linda broke a first place tie with Annex Motors and ran its record to seven wins and five losses. Bill Sherbert and Jerry Seefeldt each had a pair of singles for the Trojans.

Drake got a triple from John Loane in the third inning that scored Steve Hale with what proved to be the winning run as the Pirates won their ninth game in 14 decisions. Vince Bormolini doubled and singled for Toby's.

The Italian Club stayed even with Drake in the loss column by beating Healdsburg 4-3 on the three-hit pitching of John Moresco, whose sacrifice fly accounted for the winning run. Healdsburg is 3-8.

TWO SINGLES

Greg Tong had two singles and a pair of RBI to lead Presidio past the slumping Mill Valley Chiefs, who have dropped to third place in the South with a 7-5 record. Score was 9-2.

Holiday Magic's Dirk Gansloser belted a two-run triple and a two-run homer in leading the San Rafael team to its fifth victory in 11 tries 8-3, good for third place in the North. Art Vollert slammed a solo home run for last place San Marin.

Ken Stabler Rides Again

SANTA ROSA (UPI)—Ken Stabler, still awaiting his initial appearance in a regular season game, is taking part in his third pre-season training camp with the Oakland Raiders.

The All-America southpaw quarterback from Alabama was injured throughout his rookie season and left camp to take care of "personal problems" last year. This time he figures he's ready to shoot for the No. 1 quarterback job behind Daryle Lamonica.

End Of Road For Marin's Babe Ruth Baseball Teams

And then there were none.

Novato, Marin County's last surviving entry in the Babe Ruth District 7 tournaments, was eliminated last night at Sonoma, losing to Concord, 9-5 after eliminating the Mill Valley Americans earlier in the day, 7-2.

Ken Siler came on in relief to nail down the victory against Mill Valley, one of two teams from that city to enter District 7 double elimination competition. The Nationals were eliminated last week in Santa Rosa along with a team from Central Marin.

The other Marin team, Northgate, was knocked out of the Sonoma tourney last week.

WILL LUCK CHANGE?

Wilson Is Sold To San Diego

DETROIT (UPI)—Maybe Earl Wilson's luck will be better in San Diego.

It certainly can't get any worse than it was when the right-handed pitcher was a member of the Detroit Tigers, which he was until sold in a waiver transaction to the Padres Wednesday.

Wilson, 34, pitched a no-hitter as a member of the Boston Red Sox against the California Angels on June 26, 1962 and won 22 games as a Tiger in 1967.

But Wilson compiled marks of 13-12 and 12-10 the past two seasons with a propensity for injuries to his pitching hand—because he stopped batted balls with it—and his legs—because he stopped hits with them, when he wasn't suffering pulled leg muscles.

He had only a 4-6 record thus far this season with a 4.45 earned run average after ERAs of 3.07, 3.27 and 2.85 the previous three seasons. He has a 120-103 career won-lost record.

"He had to know he was going, the way he's been pitching this year," one teammate commented.

Wilson was disgruntled over being demoted to the bullpen recently and a lackadaisical performance in the second game of last Sunday's doubleheader with Baltimore did not endear him to management.

TIGER ALL THROUGH?

Easy Time For Griffith

NEW YORK (UPI)—Emile Griffith grinned boyishly as he discussed his future and the sixth world championship it possibly holds, and across the hall, Dick Tiger sat with a towel wrapped around his waist and talked of the past.

Griffith, a five-time world champion ended, the 40-year-old Tiger's title hopes forever Wednesday night by jabbing out an easy 10-round decision at Madison Square Garden. No longer will Nino Benvenuti, the middleweight champion, be able to ignore the 32-year-old Grif-Griffith simply because he's eliminated every other contender.

"I don't want to talk about fighting Benvenuti because he keeps ducking me," Griffith said, "but I don't see how he can keep it up. He signed quick to fight Carlos Monzon a couple of weeks ago because he didn't want to wait around and see if I beat Tiger."

VICTORIES

"By the sixth round I knew I had it won," the Virgin Islander, who has a 64-11 record said. "I was leading by so much that in a clinch I told Tiger that I still wanted to be his friend even though he lost."

It was a bitter defeat for Tiger, who came out of Nigeria to win the world middleweight and light heavyweight titles and run up a 61-17-3 record during his 18-year career. Baffled by the jitterbugging Griffith, Tiger tried to lure him within range with grotesque imitations of Griffith by dropping his hands to his side and bouncing up and down.

The closes thing to a knockdown came in the fifth round when Tiger missed a punch and fell to the canvas. He has always claimed that a similar slip, which was ruled a knockdown by the referee, cost him his middleweight title back in 1966 in their previous meeting when Griffith won by the narrowest of decisions.

Tiger, who at 167 pounds held a 10-pound advantage, sought to avenge that disputed loss, but his body no longer responded.

Sanders, Nicklaus In Field

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Doug Sanders has to be a glutton for punishment.

On Monday, he suffered a heartbreaking loss when Jack Nicklaus edged him by one stroke in a playoff for the British Open championship.

Today, he and 146 other players tee off in the opening of the $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic at the suburban Whitemarsh Valley Country Club.

Nicklaus, fresh from his British Open win and his first major championship in three years, was among those topping the field seeking the $30,000 first prize in the four-day tourney over the par 72, 6,708-yard course.

Others included a reluctant defending champion Dave Hill, Lee Trevino, leading money winner on the tour so far this year, Masters champion Billy Casper, Don January, Dan Sikes and Bob Murphy.

Hill explained that he has been feeling "very weak and tired" the past several weeks and would not have been here if he had not been the defending champion. He said he had played only about four times in the past three weeks.

January tuned up for the event by carding a seven-under par 65 to capture the $500 first prize in Wednesday's pro-am. His round included nine birdies, marred only by bogeys on the fourth and 18th holes.

Pond Paces Novato Win

Novato's American Legion baseball team stormed to its fourth consecutive victory yesterday, routing Vallejo, 13-5 at Vallejo.

First baseman Steve Pond went five for five to pace Novato, which leads the second half of the Northern California Junior league's double round robin season with a 4-1 record. Overall the team is 9-4.

HOLD BACK THE YAWNS

It's Tough To Get Excited About Season's 2nd Half

NEW YORK (UPI)—Baseball fans looking ahead to the second half of the season may find it hard to suppress a yawn. After all, what's to get excited about?

Fat cats are sitting contentedly on top of three of the four major league divisions, and it looks as if the other clubs in those divisions haven't the strength to play "king of the mountain." Who's going to knock off Cincinnati, for example? The Reds are 10 games in front in the National League West and scarcely breathing hard.

NOT LIKELY

With 21-year-old Wayne Simpson at 13-1 and Jim Merritt at 14-7 backed by a lineup that haunts the dreams of opposing pitchers, it isn't likely the Reds will be headed off.

Just run down the batting order and shudder: Tony Perez, .356 with 29 homers and 90 runs-batted-in (the last two figures lead the league) and Johnny Bench right behind Perez with 28 homers and 79 RBIs. "Trailing" are Pete Rose at .323 and Bobby Tolan, .316.

In the American League East, Baltimore seems to have exposed the New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers as pretenders by capturing series from both clubs just before the All-Star break. The Orioles are impressive with Frank Robinson, the league leader with .330 and Boog Powell, who is hitting .320 with 23 homers and 73 runs-batted-in. Add to their assets a Brooks Robinson — ever the wizard with the glove —who is enjoying one of his finest seasons at the plate with a .288 average and 54 RBIs, and three first-rate pitchers in Jim Palmer (12-6), Dave McNally, (12-6) and Mike Cuellar (11-5). It's easy to see why the Birds hold a six-game lead.

BY FIVE

Minnesota leads the second-place California Angels in the American League West by five games. The Twins have a powerful lineup which includes Harmon Killebrew, who is hitting .322 and leading the league with 26 homers and 73 RBIs, Tony Oliva at .328 with 63 RBIs and Cesar Tovar at .319. The ace of the Twins' pitching staff is Jim Perry with a 13-7 record.

The only division with exciting prospects for the coming weeks is the National League East. A hot pennant fight is shaping up there between the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Mets, with a possible contender in the revived Chicago Cubs.

The Pirates, now leading the Mets by 1 1-2 games, vaulted into first place before the All-Star game with a four-game sweep of the St. Louis Cardinals. At the same time, the Mets were dropping three of four games to their persistent bugaboos, the last-place Montreal Expos. The pesky Expos have won eight of 12 games from the Mets this year.

BACK WINNING

Chicago, which went into a tailspin earlier in the season when it lost 12 straight games, one short of the club record, surges into the second half of the season with six victories in its last eight starts. The Cubs are now five games back.

Pittsburgh boasts a strong lineup, headed by Roberto Clemente who is hitting .358. The Mets hold their strong suit in their pitching staff led by Tom Seaver, currently 14-5.

The Cubs have Jim Hickman, one of the heros of the All-Star game, at .335 and Bill Williams, also among the top 10 batting leaders, with .317. All-Stars Glenn Beckert and Don Kessinger also add strength at the plate and on the field.

U.S. Track Stars Lead Germans

STUTTGART, Germany (UPI) —The lifetime best of a 30-year old veteran helped the youngest track and field team ever to represent the United States gain a comfortable lead over West Germany Wednesday after the first day of their two-day dual meet.

Bill Skinner of the University of Tennessee threw the javelin 291 feet 10 inches in his fourth try to win the event.

"It was the best performance of the day on our side," coach Leroy Walker said.

oGing into today's competition, the United States was leading 58-48, following victories in the 100 and 400 meters, sprint relay, 400 meter hurdles, pole vault and javelin.

Other American winners included Ben Vaughan, who clocked a wind-aided 10.0 seconds for 100 meters, John Smith with 45.1 seconds in the 400 meters, Ralph Mann in the 400 meter hurdles with a time of 49.3 seconds and Sam Carruthers in the pole vault with a leap of 17 feet, 3-4 inches.

Intrepid Remains Unbeaten

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The wind conditions were different in the America's Cup observation trials Wednesday but the results were the same — Intrepid won.

The wind, blowing about 15 miles per hour, was stronger than it has been in the 10 days of trials but it made little difference to Intrepid which beat Valiant by 2 minutes, 36 seconds to remain unbeaten.

Baseball

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox yesterday optioned pitcher Jose Santiago to Louisville of the International League in order to make room for the return of pitcher Jim Lonborg. Winner of the 1967 American League Cy Young Award, Lonborg was placed on the disabled list last month after injuring his shoulder.

Football

PHILADELPHIA — John Carlos, San Jose State track great turned professional football player, was to undergo surgery today to repair torn ligaments in his right knee suffered yesterday during a light workout while trying to learn the Philadelphia Eagles' pass patterns. He will be out of uniform for at least six weeks.

IRVINE, Calif. — Lamar Lundy, traded during the offseason to San Diego after 13 years with the Los Angeles Rams, has retired from pro football because of knee problems.

Charger general manager Sid Gilman made the announcement yesterday, saying that doctors said Lundy's knee is not strong enough to allow him to continue to play. "There was no finer player and there is no finer person than Lamar Lundy," Gillman said.

Track

SAN FRANCISCO — Gayle Hopkins, former All-American and Olympian, has been named to succeed Bob Lualhati as head track coach at San Francisco State College. Hopkins, a long jumper, who holds single season and career scoring records at Arizona State, will take over in the fall for Lualhati, who will become head track coach at Skyline Junior College in San Bruno.

Golf

OKLAHOMA CITY — Defending champion Allen Miller was matched against George Haines of Far Hills, N.J., in today's second round of the Trans- Mississippi Golf Tournament. Haines yesterday defeated former Walker Cupper Ed Updegraff, and Miller downed Steve Homsley of San Antonio, Tex.

Two rounds of match play were scheduled for today to cut the championship flight to eight men for the quarterfinals tomorrow.

Jarcik, Travel Teams Triumph

Jarcik Insurance defeated the Sausalito Boat House, 62-60 behind Steve Bryant's 22 points, and Pat Shafer scored 20 to lead San Rafael Travel past Harvey Wallbanger last night in the Drake summer basketball league.

Pirates To Open New Stadium

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—New stadiums and pennants don't necessarily go together, but the last time the Pittsburgh Pirates opened a stadium, they won a pennant.

That was in 1909, and it was at Forbes Field.

Tonight the Pirates, leading the National League's Eastern Division, open Three Rivers Stadium against the Cincinnati Reds, who lead the West, and who dedicated their own new stadium last month.

NINTH

It will be the ninth modern National League park opened since 1960 and, curiously, none of them have hosted a World Series in the first year of operation.

The St. Louis Cardinals won pennants in 1964, 1967 and 1968, but in 1966, when they moved into Busch Memorial Stadium, they finished sixth.

The Dodgers have won four pennants since moving to Los Angeles, but one of them was not in 1962—the year they opened Dodger Stadium—even though they won 102 games.

San Francisco won that year, in a playoff. In 1960, when Candlestick Park opened, the Giants finished fifth.

Nobody thought of a pennant when the Mets inhabited Shea Stadium for the first time in 1964, nor when Houston moved into the Astrodome or San Diego joined the league with its new park. The Braves won pennants in Milwaukee, but notta pennants in Milwaukee, but not in their new Atlanta Stadium.

This year, perhaps it will be different. Both division leaders play in new parks.

Most of the Pittsburgh players, especially the hitters, look forward to Three Rivers. They should hit more home runs than they did at Forbes Field.

In a recent Forbes Field game, Willie Stargell hit a ball that was caught behind the flagpole in centerfield, 457 feet from home plate. At Three Rivers Stadium, it would have cleared the fence by 47 feet.

NOT COMPLETED

Three Rivers Stadium will not be 100 per cent completed tonight—new stadiums rarely are—and so there will be plenty of grumblings from inconvenienced fans.

When they opened the Astrodome, they found out grass wouldn't grow under glass. Shea Stadium had some massive traffic jams.

Athletics In New York Doubleheader

NEW YORK (UPI)—Hoping for some sort of transformation during the All-Star break, the Oakland A's step into the second half of their season with visions of a charge toward first place.

Oakland trails Minnesota by 9 1-2 games in the American League West after a disappointing first half of the season in which starting pitchers were repeatedly rocked from the mound and potentially explosive hitters did not deliver in the clutch.

Today the A's challenge the New York Yankees in a twinbill introducing an eight-game road trip which goes through Boston and concludes in Washington.

Segui and Fingers were inserted as regulars in the starting rotation after Jim Nash was traded to Atlanta, John Odom was shelved with an elbow injury and Al Downing was traded following an unimpressive stay.

Each hurler has held his own as a starter, but the A's still are hurting for a consistent winner. Odom, who comes off the disabled list shortly, could be the answer if his elbow is healed.

Segui, 4-5 with a 2.78 earned run average, fired a complete game win over Milwaukee in his last outing. Fingers, 5-7 with a 3.34 ERA, has been the one starter to whom the A's batters have given very little offensive support.

Moorings Ruined: Pollution

Some of the mooring buoys in the Ayala Cove area of Angel Island are no longer usable and Kenneth Huddleston, manager of the island, lays the blame directly on pollution in San Francisco Bay.

Following design plans used at Catalina Island in Southern California, buoys were installed with tie lines around the area. The Catalina and Angel Island areas differed drastically.

"It was an engineering boo boo," admitted Huddleston. "There is too much pollution in San Francisco Bay," he said, "and it causes the ropes to become covered with mud and marine growth. No one wants to handle ropes which are covered with that."

For the present, Huddleston said boaters should only use the large white buoys and disregard the smaller orange styrofoam floats. He said additional stern tie-off buoys will be installed in the future, "but that could be anywhere between two months and a year from now."

Huddleston also cautioned boaters to use fenders when using the floating slips because of winter storm damage to the slips, although he said he hadn't received any complaints about them.

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG

An easy position to check, and certainly an important one, is the relation of the ball and your left foot at the moment of release. Both should arrive at the foul line at the same time. If the left foot arrives first, you'll force the swing and often drop the ball behind the foul line.

DOLINSEK

said Dolinsek, adding that he felt fortunate to play college ball at Arizona State under Bob Winkle, who taught him this mental approach. "He is a fantastic man. For any of the success I've had so far I give him all the credit."

Although under the situation he will have to change his mind, Dolinsek is not fond of the thought of playing baseball on Astroturf, which must be blasphemy in Houston Astrodome circles.

"I've played on real grass fields all my life but I guess I will just have to get used to the fact that artificial turf is here now," he said.

John and his wife, the former Sue Spencer (also a 1966 Novato High graduate) and their two-year-old daughter, Jana, now are making their off season home in Tempe, Ariz. Sue still has two more years of college to go, while John has less than a year with plans of going for a masters degree in science after getting his B.A.

"Baseball is too uncertain a thing," he said. "I want to make sure I get my college."

Smart man that Dolinsek; he's going places.

Timmer Realty defeated the Terra Linda Old Timers, 16 - 2, Patio Club outslugged Smith's Exterminators, 12 - 11 and Saleme Construction beat the Brothers Three, 9 - 7 in San Rafael adult softball league practice games last night at Albert Park.

Fosse Out Of Game Tonight

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Ray Fosse, the Cleveland Indians' young rookie catcher who was bowled over as the winning run scored in the All-Star baseball game, will miss tonight's game against Kansas City.

Fosse's shoulder was badly bruised in the collision Tuesday night with the Cincinnati Reds' Pete Rose.

"I won't be able to play with this pain," the 23-year-old Fosse said. "It's okay unless I raise my arm."

"But there is no separation," said Brock, "and the shoulder should loosen up in the next 24 hours."

While the rest of the Indians worked out at the stadium Wednesday, Fosse underwent heat treatments. They start a three-game series tonight in Kansas City.

Fosse said he thought Rose was going around him at the plate, "but he started to dive and had no place to go."

MARIN-SONOMA GOLF

Junior Action At Meadow

Twenty-four golfers, ages 12-17, were to battle at Meadow Club in Fairfax this afternoon for nine qualifying places in the Northern California Golf Association Junior Amateur Championships, to be held next month at Lake Merced Golf and Country Club in Daly City. Meadow Club is one of 10 qualifying courses for the event.

Meadow Club's own junior invitational will be held next Monday, with some 50 golfers competing in 17-and-under and 18-20 age groups. Play will be in twosomes, with golfers coming from throughout the bay area.

An estimated 70 persons are expected to play in Peacock Gap's Mixed Couples Tournament Sunday on the San Rafael course.

A five-week Sugar and Spice men's tournament at Sonoma National will begin this Sunday. More than 120 players have registered for the tourney.

NONALCOHOLIC ADULTS

18-Year-Old Vote Voted

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly, in a move to invite young people "inside the system," has approved legislation giving 18-year-old Californians the right to vote and share other responsibilities of adults.

Gov. Ronald Reagan told newsmen Wednesday he "leaned away" from giving the vote to 18-year-olds but added, "I think full citizenship has to go with it if you're going to have the right to vote."

The proposed constitutional amendment by Assemblyman John V. Briggs, R-Fullerton, was sent to the Senate on a 58-15 vote—in what was believed to be the first time in California history that such a measure cleared either house.

Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, said passage meant the Assembly was telling young people, "We trust you. We invite you inside the system."

The proposal lowers the age of legal adulthood from 21 to 18. If it clears the Senate and is approved by voters in November, 18-year-olds will be allowed to vote, serve on juries, run for public office, sign contracts, and be liable for debts.

But the measure does not allow 18-year-olds to drink.

Assemblyman William Ketchum, R-Paso Robles, declared he wouldn't vote for the measure unless it gave an 18-year-old boy or girl all the responsibilities of adulthood, including the right to drink.

"I have a couple of young people and I know they were kind of passing it around behind the barn before they were 21 and I know you did, too," Ketchum, the father of two grown children, told Briggs.

But Briggs said he did not want a lower drinking age included in his proposal because anti-liquor forces might rally to defeat the entire plan at the polls.

The constitutional change would take effect Jan. 1, 1972. The legislature would have the power to make exceptions, such as allowing 18-year-old defendants to be treated differently than persons over 23 in criminal cases.

The Youth Authority handles felony cases involving juveniles which now extends to persons up to 23 years of age. The authority has wide discretion in sentencing and releasing prisoners and the legislature could allow them to continue handling persons over 18 if the constitutional amendment is approved.

Briggs noted the U.S. Supreme Court is considering federal legislation which lowered the voting age nationally to 18. The federal law applies only to the voting age and does not lower the age of adulthood in other areas.

Briggs said California residents should have a chance at least to vote on whether they want 18-year-olds to be full adults.

Lawmakers Tell Secrets —Pentagon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Pentagon today accused a newly formed group of House and Senate members of publishing secret information concerning U.S. The cogressional group quickly denied it.

At issue was a 150-page report issued by 28 representaktives and senators, calling themselves "Members of Congress for Peace Through Law." The report criticized high military spending and urged deemphasis of expensive land based nuclear missiles. The Defense Department said today the group published secret information without submitting it for clearance.

"While a great many of the figures were not accurate enough to affect national security, some of them were of an accuracy sufficient that we would have advised them to delete the figures in the interest of national security," Friedheim said.

He refused to identify the classified material, saying that "to pursue it in great detail here would be to further the damage that has been done."

A spokesman for the congressional group responded:

"I can say without qualification that the information in this report was drawn entirely from non-classified sources."

Ronald Tammen, staff consultant for the group, said, "I sat in on this from the very beginning and I can say without restriction that none of the material in this report was drawn from classified sources."

Again Heads Board

Hugh Dougherty has been re-elected president of the Stinson Beach County Water District board and James V. Stevens was chosen vice president. Stevens was also named to represent the district on a committee to review progress on a joint sewage disposal system being planned with the Bolinas Public Utility District.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Doctor Has Collection Of Odd Noises Of Heart, Body Cavity

Doctor William Bennett Bean of Iowa City has many hobbies. One is collecting material referring to noises in the chest that can be heard by physicians without a stethoscope.

Many of these eerie sounds are loud heart murmurs. Plastic valves inserted into a defective heart may also give off a click that is audible to other persons in the room.

Dr. Bean was consulted by an elderly farmer who said his heart squeaked whenever he took a deep breath. But when he stripped for an examination, the medico was unable to detect the slightest noise. "No, no," the oldster insisted, "the squeak is there only when I'm dressed."

THE CURE — a little oil on his suspender pulley.

The chest and abdomen are separated by the diaphragm. Occasionally a loop of intestine that is distended with gas presses upward on the diaphragm in the vicinity of the heart. This provides the old ticker with a drum on which it beats merrily.

This happened to a 10-year-old boy who lived on the second floor. As the physician stood at the door of the house, he could hear the rhythmical thumping coming through the open window.

HAD THE BOY been older and married, his wife may have complained about the noise, especially at night when in bed. These individuals can be likened to the crocodile in "Peter Pan" who swallowed an alarm clock that ticked and ticked merrily as he walked about.

The chest may also act like a sounding board, especially when free air is present in the space between the chest wall and the lungs. The heart makes a racket as it flaps against the ribs. It may even swish or gurgle if there is fluid as well as air in the space.

THESE SENSATIONS are temporary and last from a few hours to two weeks.

CORRECTING DROPSY

REPLY

Yes, depending upon the origin of the swollen legs. When circulatory disorders, a dietary protein deficiency, or certain types of kidney or liver conditions are responsible, the swelling will disappear if the cause can be successfully treated. Dropsy of cardiac origin responds well to modern remedies that increase the elimination of tissue fluids. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on generalized edema.

NEEDN'T BULGE

H. S. writes: How long after a hysterectomy does it take for the stomach to return to its natural size?

REPLY

After the uterus is removed there is no reason why the stomach should become larger or smaller. If you refer to the size of the abdomen, much depends upon what you eat and how active you are after the operation. In some instances, loss of muscle tone following surgery leads to some abdominal sagging. Don't use the hysterectomy as an excuse for getting fat.

NO IMMUNITY

A. N. writes: If a person had a cancer and was cured, is he immune to further attacks?

REPLY

No. Some individuals have several cancers during their lifetime.

The Cost Of Cambodia: $55 Million?

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—The military and economic price tag for the United States in Cambodia this fiscal year could run to about $50 to $55 million, according to what well-informed U.S. sources here described today as a realistic view.

The total would include an approximately $30 million military aid program and a maximum of $20 million to $25 million in economic aid, the sources said.

These estimates are based on the needs of the war effort in Cambodia and the ability of the disrupted economy to pay for them balanced against opinion in the United States and the shrinking availability of funds because of the scaling down of U.S. involvement in the area, the sources said.

The estimates were made available as Finance Minister Kim Ang, a personal adviser to Premier Lon Nol, said Cambodia would have to depend on foreign aid if its economy is to survive the war with the Communists. He said the United States was the "No 1 hope" for economic assistance but that Cambodia also sought aid from Japan.

The U.S. expenses mentioned did not include costs of such expensive items as U.S. air interdiction of Communist supply route, U.S. air reconnaissance or air support of South Vietnamese or Khmer troops in Cambodia.

The United States is officially acknowledging only the interdiction of supply routes. As far as can be determined, all U.S. air activity is being regarded as an extension of the air war in South Vietnam and Laos and being paid for out of funds supplied for that purpose.

According to Cambodian Finance Minister Ang, the Lon Nol government has already asked the United States for cash grants totalling more than $127 million to cover increased military expenses and losses in government revenue.

Fetus Death Murder Bill Gains Nod

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The killer of an unborn baby could be prosecuted for murder under a bill which today reached the Assembly floor.

Approved Wednesday by the Criminal Procedure Committee, the measure by Assemblyman Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, would include unborn fetuses in the definition of human being used in murder and manslaughter laws.

He told the committee the bill would bring "the intentional unlawful killing of a fetus" under the laws.

The lawmaker introduced the bill last month after the state Supreme Court ruled that a fetus could not be considered a human being under the legal definition of murder. Biddle said he was "shocked and disappointed" at the ruling and introduced his bill "in direct response."

Originally the bill covered the killing of a fetus past the 20th week of pregnancy, but Biddle amended it to include fetuses at any stage of development.

Abortions legal under present law would remain legal, he said. And any abortion, legal or illegal, performed with the consent of the mother would not be murder. It would be prosecuted under abortion laws.

An illegal abortion performed against the will of the mother would be murder.

The Supreme Court's ruling came in the case of an Amador County man charged with murder of an unborn child carried by his ex-wife. The man admitted kicking the woman in the abdomen and she delivered a stillborn fetus with a fractured skull.

Reagan Drives For Tax Reform Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan appealed to California voters today to put pressure on Democratic state senators to approve the administration's $1 billion tax revision plan.

And, Reagan said he was "reasonably optimistic" no new taxes would be required next year despite insistence of Democratic gubernatorial nominee Jess Unruh that a minimum increase of $400 million will be necessary.

"Our goal is to come forth with a balanced budget with no tax increase," the governor told a news conference Wednesday. He declined to rule out new taxes completely.

He repeated his belief that federally mandated welfare programs and increased costs of education could dictate new taxes in 1971.

The governor issued a personal appeal to voters to intercede on his behalf in a battle with Democrats in the Senate where his tax program has one more hurdle to clear.

Reagan accused the Democrats of devising "hurriedly dreamed-up alternatives which are political expediencies designed to obstruct true tax reform."

"Their ill-conceived program would offer a limited measure of property tax relief and finance it by increases in income taxes for the lower and middle income earner," he added.

Reagan said his Assembly-passed package would provide "meaningful and lasting property tax relief" and noted the Senate is the last obstacle in achieving it.

"I am therefore urging all Californians to let their senators know that property tax relief can be accomplished now," he said.

The Senate Finance Committee Wednesday approved the tax reshuffle program after rejecting attempts by Democrats to amend their own program into it.

There are 20 Republicans, 19 Democrats and one vacancy in the upper house. It takes 21 votes to pass one of the governor's bills and 27 votes for the other. Democrats say they have enough support to stymie one of them.

The governor's program would grant between 20 per cent and 40 per cent property tax relief to homeowners and a $50 state income tax credit to renters.

It would raise the money to finance the tax relief primarily through imposition of a payroll withholding system of the income tax and a 1-cent increase in the statewide sales tax.

Democrats assail the sales tax hike as regressive because they say it hits the poor person hardest. Their plan would offer similar property tax relief and a $70 check to all renters. They would also impose withholding and narrow the first income tax bracket to raise the needed revenue.

The governor also denounced officials who have criticized his tax shift, which sets a ceiling on school district expenditures. An increase in spending would have to be approved by voters.

Fire Guts Unit In Housing Project

According to firemen, the blaze began about 1:16 p.m. in a closet of the Connie Barrow home, Apartment T107. Within minutes, the apartment's four rooms were engulfed in flames. Firemen, who are still investigating the cause, say it may have been caused by faulty wiring.

The flames caused smoke damage to two other units in the building, which is owned by the Marin County Housing Authority.

Truck Rolls, Two Soldiers Hospitalized

Two soldiers, said to be absent without leave from Fort Ord, were hospitalized, today when their pickup truck rolled down a hill in Novato, police said.

They were given emergency treatment at Novato General Hospital and Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital before being transferred to Letterman General Hospital in San Francisco.

Hospitalized with facial cuts and other injuries was Pfc. Kenneth Wayne Ball, 19. Pfc. Lonnie Wayne Price, 20, suffered a broken right leg and body bruises, according to the hospital.

Police reported that at 1:27 a.m., the two drove up a fire road on a steep hill behind the 900 block of Sunset Parkway. The truck rolled down the hill, overturning at least three times and possibly running over Ball, the driver, police said.

Legal Notice

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
SCOWN LANE IMPROVEMENT
PROJECT 69-019
CITY OF NOVATO
MARIN COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Finance Director, City of Novato, California, until 4:00 o'clock p.m., on Monday, July 27, 1970, for the furnishing of all plant, labor, materials, tools, equipment and machinery necessary for the construction of Scown Lane Improvement Project 69-019.

The proposals will be publicly opened and read in the office of the Finance Director on the date and at the time mentioned above. Plans and specifications and proposal forms, may be obtained at the office of the City Engineer upon payment of a non-refundable printing and service charge in the amount of Three Dollars ($3.00). Other fee documents available from the City which may be applicable to this project are as follows: Novato Standard Specifications - $3.00, Uniform Standard Drawings of all Cities and County of Marin - $1.00. All checks shall be made payable to the City of Novato, and should be mailed to the Public Works Department, City of Novato.

The work to be done includes, but is not necessarily limited to: installing redwood header, roadway grading and construction, drainage facilities, PCC driveway approach and valley gutter and all appurtenances necessary for the successful completion of the project as shown on the plans and specifications.

Notice is hereby given that on June 9, 1970, the City Council adopted a resolution determining the general prevailing rate of wages applicable to the work to be done, which shall be the minimum rates paid on this project, a copy of which wage scale is attached hereto.

The City reserves the right to reject any or all bids, to waive any informality in a bid, and to make award as the interests of the City may require. This notice is given by order of the Council of the City of Novato, California.

No bid will be received unless it is made on proposal form furnished by the City Engineer. Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified or cashier's check or bid bond in the amount of ten percent (10%) of the estimated aggregate amount of the bid as a guarantee that the bidder, if the award is made to him in accordance with the terms of his proposal, will promptly execute a contract in the required form, secure payment of workmen's compensation insurance, and furnish a satisfactory faithful performance bond and a labor and material bond. Each of said bonds shall be in the sum of not less than one hundred percent (100%) of the estimated aggregate amount of the payments to be made under the contract, computed on the basis of the price stated in the proposal. In addition to the above, and if requested by the City, the bidder shall furnish a financial statement of recent date. Failure to comply with this requirement will render a bid informal and shall be sufficient cause for rejection.

The contractor shall complete the construction of the total project within thirty (30) working days, the first day of which shall be the date of the City Engineer's notice to proceed.

Two-Truck Crackup Hurts Petaluman, 43

Reader Grisham, 43, of 1520 East Madison Street, Petaluma, has been treated at Petaluma General Hospital for ankle injuries suffered in a two-truck collision on Highway 101, south of Petaluma.

The California Highway Patrol said his pickup was struck from the rear at 6:10 p.m. Tuesday by a tractor-trailer rig driven by Paul Gravel, 28, of Ukiah.

Sonoma Rejects Sales Office For Jenner Plan

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Plans for a sales office at the Jenner Bay Development on the Russian River have been rejected by the Sonoma County oBard of Supervisors.

The board, in denying an appeal from a planning commission decision Tuesday objected to the proposed location because it would block ocean views from Shoreline Highway.

The denial was made without prejudice so that the developers may rearrange the plans and reapply at any time.

Open Meeting Bill Bagley Proposed Signed By Reagan

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation prohibiting state and local agencies from conducting meetings, conferences or other functions in places that discriminate has been signed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The bill is AB 1319 by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.

Meetings will be barred in places that discriminate on the basis of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry or sex.

Bagley introduced the measure after a woman reporter for a wire service was denied admission to a public conference the governor held in a Sacramento club that does not admit women.

Arraignment Set In Assault Case

Stephen Orlando Marez, 30, of San Francisco, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court, charged with felonious assault of his estranged wife last year in Novato.

He is to be arraigned next Wednesday.

Marez was arrested last month on a year-old warrant. He is charged with giving his wife such a severe beating and kicking at a party in Novato on May 25, 1969, that she was hospitalized for two weeks.

FOUR-LETTER WORDS

Student Feels Love, Fear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — James P. Clark, 22, makes free use of a couple of four-letter words when he tries to explain his generation to his elders.

One is "love." The other is "fear."

When the first atomic bombs were exploded 25 years ago this month, Clark was not yet born.

Clark, a native of Warren, Pa., was graduated last month from Georgetown University. He had majored in English. Next year, thanks to a scholarship, he will start studying law at New York University.

Clark was chosen by his classmates to be the student speaker at the Georgetown commencement exercises. He addressed himself to his parents and to the other parents present.

He said plainly that he was opposed to "the system" under which he had grown up. He pledged himself to do what he could to change it.

He said it without hate or rancor. He said it with "love."

The generation to whom he spoke had made it possible for the generation to which he belonged to live and go to school without worries about food or clothing or the manifold other necessities which some of those present had found wanting when they were young.

"We are proud of you," Clark told his elders, "and love you for your sacrifices."

Nevertheless, he said, in addition to the material plenty, his generation had inherited a legacy it could not stomach. Again he resorted to a four-letter word—"fear."

"We are more than spoiled and overprivileged," he said. "We are afraid—for ourselves, for our peoples, for our world.

"Most of the students who graduate today have never been cognizant of a time in their lives when a man they had never seen in a distant city might not destroy them and everything they had ever known, merely by pushing a button.

"No other generation has faced the imminent possibility of seeing in its lifetime a murdered earth become the end product of man's very existence."

Clark said in his speech and in a later conversation with United Press International that he did not, by any means, consider himself a spokesman for all students. He has participated in student protests, but he does not think of himself as an "activist." He is opposed to violence, by his or any other generation.

Clark's generation, which grew up in the 1950s and 1960s, had no clear understanding of the travails of the Great Depression of the 1930s which wounded many members of the preceding generation.

But it grew up in a period when the intercontinental ballistic missile, the U-2 spy planes, the Cuban Missile Crisis, were the big news of the moment.

"We saw developing," Clark said, "a national paranoia that turned into a non-morality which insisted that a protective 'first strike,' or shooting your neighbor if he were to try to get into your fallout shelter, were somehow justified.

"As a grade-schooler, I remember waking in the middle of the night to hear distant thunder and trembling to wonder if the Russians were bombing our cities.

"Many of us came to identify nuclear war with the end of the world we heard so much about in Sunday School.

"We did not outgrow this childhood fear. During my first year in Georgetown, a small group of students through a cruel trick convinced an entire dormitory floor of sophomores that a nuclear attack had been launched by the Soviet Union.

Settlers, Tribesmen Battle For Philippine Tribal Lands

MANILA (UPI)—The Philippine government is faced with an explosive situation in its southern frontier provinces similar to the confrontation in the old American West between white settlers and the Indians.

This time the fight is between Christian Filipino settlers and primitive native tribesmen in remote areas on the big, southern Philippine island of Mindanao. The issue is the same—land.

The center of the conflict in Mindanao is mineral-rich Cotabato province where Manobo tribesmen are reported on the verge of an uprising.

The Manobos, who for generations had been living a simple nomadic life and hunting food with bows and arrows, have found themselves dispossessed of their tribal 13,000-acre reservation. They claim land-hungry settler have the backing of bribed government soldiers and corrupt politicians.

The breaking point came in June when the house of Manobo chieftain Ma Falen was set on fire.f His 16-year-old daughter was trapped and burned to death inside. Several days later, two constabulary soldiers were killed in apparent retaliation.

Ma Falen, 55, and his estimated 5,000 followers retreated into the forests when they realized settlers and soldiers were after them. After about two weeks in hiding, Ma Falen surrendered through a government intermediary for peace talks with officials in Manila.

But Ma Falen made it clear he would settle for nothing less than equal justice for his tribesmen and the return of their land.

The Cotabato land dispute has gained nationwide attention in the Philippines because of the alleged involvement of a prominent politician and a government agency.

Congressman James Chiongbian of Cotabato accused the presidential assistant on national minorities, Manuel Elizalde Jr., of stirring up unrest in the province by providing arms to the Manobo tribesmen.

Elizalde, a millionaire philanthropist who has been helping resettle many tribal groups scattered in the Philippines, denied the allegation. In turn, he accused Chongbian of grabbing the Manobo lands in Cotabato because of his mining claims in the area.

The Philippine Congress has decided to send an investigating team to the area. Mamintal Tamano, the only Moslem member of the Philippine Senate, will lead it.

Tamano, a law graduate from Cornell University, in Ithaca, N.Y., said the land dispute in Cotabato is symptomatic of the unrest in the southern Philippines, his home region. He said the estimated 3 million Filipino minorities in the south have long been exploited by Christians, and their impatience is now erupting into open defiance against government authority.

"It is about time that the government really does something before the unrest reaches a magniture when it is helpless to contain the situation," Tamano said.

"It's all very, very sad," he said.

Unique Program Will Teach Intensive Care Of Infants

I-J Special Report

SAN DIEGO — A unique program to train physician-nurse teams from community hospitals in San Diego and Imperial counties in the intensive care of newborn infants will be launched this fall at University Hospital.

Dr. Louis Gluck, Professor of Pediatrics, UCSD School of Medicine, and head of the training course, said it will be patterned after a program he initiated at Yale-New Haven Medical Center before joining the UCSD staff last year.

He said enrollees, representing six or eight community hospitals in each course, will include the physician in charge of newborn service at each hospital plus the nurse heading that hospital's infant Intensive Care Unit.

The purpose of the undertaking, Dr. Gluck said, is to improve premature and newborn care.

"Of every 1,000 babies born in the United States today, 22 won't live to blow out the candles on their first birthday cake," he noted.

University Hospital currently is running its own training course in newborn medical problems, and this will serve as the local prototype for the two to four eight-week courses to follow next year.

Dr. Gluck explained that University Hospital's Infant Special Care Center will serve as a center for taking in difficult neonatal medical problems.

The program will serve as a model, he said, and its facilities will be available to the San Diego community as a public service.

Many traditional hospital concepts in the care of newborn infants may fall by the wayside at the new center. For instance, the "stick-in-the-mud" arrangements of incubators around the wall of the special care unit will be altered by the installation of ceiling outlets for oxygen, compressed air, suction and electrical outlets.

Sonar Aids Ocean Drill Feat

I-J Special Report

Engineers and drillers aboard an American ship have lowered a drill string through water two miles deep and successfully steered the drill bit back into a 12-inch hole on the ocean floor through a 16-foot cone.

The technological feat, conducted from the ship Glomar Challenger in connection with the National Science Foundation's Deep Sea Drilling Project (DSDP), constitutes a major technological advance according to Dr. William D. McElroy, NSF Director.

"The establishment of the capability of re-entering a deep ocean-floor drill hole is a major and exciting technological achievement for which the contributing scientists, engineers, and technicians are to be congratulated. This achievement certainly broadens the scientific possibilities of the Drilling Project and opens the door to a new era in ocean exploration for scientific and industrial purposes."

The 10,000-foot-plus drill string was maneuvered by Captain Joe Clarke into the cone for the first time.

To steer the drill string into such a small target through sonar scanning and the vessel's dynamic positioning system will now enable engineers to replace worn drill bits and assure drilling through layers of chert, or flint-like rock. On previous expeditions, chert dulled the bits and forced premature termination of many holes before scientific objectives were achieved.

The Glomar Challenger tests in the Atlantic Ocean were conducted by engineers of EDO Western, which supplied the scanning sonar used in the re-entry system; Global Marine, Inc., which owns and operates the ship and performs the drilling; and Scripps Institution of Oceanography, which manages the Deep Sea Drilling Project under contract to the National Science Foundation.

The re-entry system consists of a high-resolution scanning sonar system that "looks downward through the drill bit on the lower end of the drill string, a funnel-shaped re-entry cone mounted on the ocean floor, and a system for steering the drill pipe toward the cone.

The large re-entry cone is hexagonal, 16 feet across at the top, and 14 feet tall. There are three acoustic reflectors equally spaced around the outside of the cone about 4 feet beyond its rim. The re-entry cone is keel-hauled to a position directly beneath an opening in the vessel under the drilling derrick and lowered to the ocean floor on the drill pipe.

The drill pipe positioning system consists of the dynamic positioning system of Glomar Challenger and a sideward-thrusting water jet (jet-sub) located approximately 60 feet above the drill bit on the drill string.

The drill string, aimed at re-entering a bore hole, is lowered toward the ocean floor. The sonar transducer at the end of the string picks up an echo of its signal from the three reflectors near the re-entry cone and a display of this target appears on the bridge. The dynamic positioning system of Challenger is used to maneuver the drill pipe closer than 100 feet to the re-entry cone. At this point, the jet sub is used to maneuver the drill pipe over the re-entry cone. When the visual display unit indicates the drill bit is centered between the acoustic reflectors, the drill pipe is lowered into the funnel.

Yellow Cars Popular With The Young Set

HOLLAND, Mich. (UPI)—It's been years since yellow cars were popular, but they are back now—in a big way.

Yellow's return, says Rene Willis, Chemetron color expert, reflects the impact of the youth market which sets the trends for auto colors by demanding bright, even shocking, colors.

If the past repeats itself, however, yellow will give way in a couple of years to some other color as youthful tastes shift, he adds.

Gun, Pot Charges In Boat Raid

Drug agents looking for marijuana boarded a 107-foot converted subchaser anchored off Tiburon last night and found an arsenal of weapons, arresting six young persons aboard.

Lt. James C. Schwedhelm of the Marin Drug Abuse Bureau said narcotics agents suspected the boat was being used to haul marijuana when it appeared first in Sausalito about three weeks ago. It later was moved to the mouth of Tiburon Harbor.

"A bunch of kids on a subchaser" seemed odd to the officers, Schwedhelm said, and undercover agents who soon made friends with the boat's occupants arranged for a sale of marijuana.

An agent who went aboard the board, named the Makaira, thought he saw a machine gun aboard and a search warrant was obtained to look for illegal weapons.

ARRIVING AT SHIP

Just before dark yesterday, eight federal, state and Marin agents in a borrowed speedboat arrived at the gray ship, which is out of Los Angeles, and were told, "we've been expecting you."

Although the agents found only a small quantity of marijuana, they said "there were guns everywhere." Handguns in holsters hung from all the bunks of the ship, Schwedhelm said, and the agents rounded up about 40 revolvers and pistols and about 10 rifles, many of them loaded. A large quantity of ammunition was also found.

The agents believed the guns had been taken in trade for marijuana, which the agents think the boat's occupants were importing from Mexico.

The suspected machine gun turned out to be a rifle resembling one, he said. Also seized was an army sniper scope. All guns will be checked to determine if they are stolen, Schwedhelm said.

One man arrested in a car ashore had two loaded guns under the seat, Schwedhelm said. He was identified as Jerald Noel McDonald, 30, of no known address.

OTHER BOOKINGS

Others booked into Marin County Jail were Robert Allen Drake, 19, who gave his address as Michigan; Joan Heath Edwards, 21, who said she is from Australia; George William Lawson, 28; Vicki Jo Hartzell, 19, and James Lee Harris, 25, all of no permanent address.

Bail had not been set this morning and the arrested persons were to appear in Marin Municipal Court later today. Drake and Harris were booked on suspicion of selling marijuana, Miss Edwards on suspicion of offering to sell it and the others on suspicion of possessing it. McDonald was also accused of having a tear gas weapon.

BOATLOAD OF GUNS — A narcotics agent examines the arsenal taken in a narcotics agent raid on the converted subchaser Makaira, anchored off Tiburon. Some 40 pistols and 10 rifles, along with ammunition, telescopic sights and a U.S. Army sniperscope, were confiscated.

DECISION BY SATURDAY

Dr. Peck Still Undecided About Mental Health Post

Dr. Harris B. Peck said yesterday he still has not made up his mind on whether to take the job of director of Marin's Community Mental Health Center but added he would announce a decision by Saturday.

The New York psychiatrist's continued insistence that he remains interested in the post followed by one day Supervisor John F. McInnis's statement that the job may no longer be open to the doctor.

Peck, meeting informally yesterday with two local mental health leaders, continued to leave suspended the question of whether he would accept the center's top slot.

He first told Trude Baum and Rae S. Taub of the Marin Association of Mental Health he was "leaning away" from acceptance because the job did not include teaching functions and his wife was still reluctant to move from Southern California. Peck, 55, is teaching at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical School.

Later he asked the two mental health leaders what his chances were "of gaining a substantial degree of public confidence and support to launch an effective program" should the $30,000 a year job be accepted.

Peck was told "the psychoanalytic group in the county would give you immediate acceptance," while the community at-large would take a "show-me" attitude.

McInnis, informed Tuesday by County Administrator Alan Bruce that Peck had failed to accept the position within the agreed-upon time period, said, "As far as the doctor is concerned, the case is done with — finished."

Peck was the near-unanimous choice of the Marin Hospital District board and the county supervisors June 29 for the position held by Dr. Donald P. Wilson, who has resigned. Peck was given 10 days to accept the offer.

"I never refused the job as some reports have indicated," the doctor said yesterday. "I was told Monday by Bruce and Bolinger (hospital administrator Ray K. Bolinger) that they were starting to recruit again for the job."

He quoted Bruce as saying, "We will get back some of the people who wanted the position."

Bolinger, reached following yesterday's meeting, said should Peck accept the original offer, he would still face "reconsideration" by the supervisors and hospital district board.

Bolinger said he did not know whether the "reconsideration" would involve only Peck or include the other 18 applicants.

He said the screening committee which had unanimously recommended Peck would meet tomorrow at noon no matter what Peck's decision. He refused to discuss action planned at that meeting.

Peck spent about an hour yesterday afternoon answering questions about his impression of the county's mental health program.

He said he had only a fragmentary view of the situation in Marin's program, which has pitted supporters of the psychoanalytic concept against those supporting behavior therapy.

He said his impressions came from "biased" telephone callers, adding that he had been refused a meeting with the "community" by Bruce and Bolinger until he accepted the position.

Bolinger later said public forums would have been set had Peck accepted the position. None was set beforehand because the doctor had had ample opportunity to discuss the situation with the two boards and the screening committee, Bolinger said.

Christopher Denies Poll Influence

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher testified today an accusation that his organization paid $16,000 to influence a public opinion poll hurt his unsuccessful 1966 campaign for governor.

Patrick, a San Rafael cosmetics manufacturer who finished fourth, charged during the campaign the Christopher organization "bought" Field's California Poll for $16,000.

Christopher, former board chairman of Christopher Dairies, said he felt Patrick's charge was "just a reckless statement made in the heat of the campaign."

But he testified it had hurt his campaign against Reagan because "my own personal integrity had been impugned."

Christopher's testimony centered around a newspaper report that he and Reagan agreed in the summer of 1965 that whoever was the weakest candidate against incumbent Democrat Edmund G. Brown in early 1966 would withdraw and support the other Republican.

Christopher testified he met twice with GOP leaders in Los Angeles and left understanding that whichever candidate had the strongest support in Janu-

I-J Employee's Wound Fatal; New Charges

Allan Daly Loses Battle To Survive

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Independent-Journal employee Allan Wesley Daly died at 8:10 a.m. today at San Francisco General Hospital.

The 30-year-old systems design engineer in the I-J's production department died of complications arising from a gunshot wound in the abdomen suffered when shot at close range by one of two young men who burst into his home on Independence Day.

His doctor, F. William Blaisdell, had called it "a matter of incredible luck" that Daly was not dead on arrival at the hospital.

Frank Thurber, of San Bruno 45-year-old member of a union affiliated with the union striking the I-J, will be charged with murder in the case, homicide Lt. Charles Ellis said today.

He said the grand jury would hear the case July 27.

ARRESTED AGAIN

Thurber, who was arrested July 6 along with two San Bruno teen-agers, had been free on bail since Friday, but Ellis said he was rearrested in San Bruno today. He was booked into city prison at 10:30 a.m.

The youths, Larry G. Rutherford, 16, and Richard A. Wamsley, 17, are being held in juvenile hall. They are scheduled to appear before Juvenile Court Judge Francis Mayer July 29 on suspicion of robbery and attempted murder, but Ellis said they also would be charged with murder.

Daly was shot at his San Francisco home by two men who entered, slugged Daly with a metal pipe and shot him while his wife was searching the kitchen for money the men had asked for, police said. The gunmen took $5 which was recovered outside the house by police.

PRIOR ATTACKS

Prior to the shooting, Daly's home had been attacked twice by firebombers and the tires of his car slashed on another occasion.

Four days after the shooting, a firebomb was thrown into the home of two nonstriking printers in Petaluma.

I-J general manager, Norwin Yoffie, said, "It is not possible for me to express my sense of loss and my horror at the mindless act that resulted in his death."

Officials of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, which struck the I-J Jan. 7, have denied any connection with the shooting. Union secretary G. M. Bachich said today of Daly's death, "All I can say is that we're sorry that he passed away. Any human being would be sorry that a man died."

HEART STOPS

The hospital said Daly died after his heart stopped and was restarted by a surgical team several times last night. He had suffered liver failure and lung problems yesterday, according to a hospital spokesman.

He also may have contracted pulmonary pneumonia, the hospital said.

The hospital had used more

Collegians Split On Why Campuses Boil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The President's Commission on Student Unrest, in its initial look at dissent, has been given almost as may reasons for the problem as it had witnesses: boredom, the Vietnam War, racial prejudice, hypocrisy and the Nixon administration.

Almost the only agreement came from two student leaders, one black and one white, who predicted at Wednesday's opening hearing the commission's report would end up on the shelf along with the recent reports from similar commissions.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said campus violence could not be separated from the Indochina War, and suggested it was no coincidence shooting deaths of four Kent State University students came "hard on the heels of our invasion of Cambodia."

Charles F. Palmer, 23, president of the National Student Association which organized student strikes after the Cambodian incursion, disagreed Cambodia was the catalyst. Despite Nixon administration attempts to bill the 1969-70 academic year as a "quiet year," Palmer said, there were more disorders than ever and they began long before Cambodia.

Palmer said the real cause of student unrest stemmed more from the refusal of college administrators to give students a say in their affairs and to stop treating them like children.

Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, president of San Francisco State College, tended to agree, but his solution was to let the "bored" bright student troublemakers out of their college "playpens" to spend two or three years working in the "real world" so they would appreciate a college education.

This drew fire from several commission members, and under questioning, Mill Valley resident Hayakawa amended his statement to exclude Negro student dissenters who he conceded had legitimate demands for more of the "fruits of our society."

Hayakawa suggested compulsory military or civilian service to the nation from all young

UAW Takes 1970 Demand List To Ford

DETROIT (UPI)—The United Auto Workers today took the second step in the 1970 labor contract negotiations by presenting Ford Motor Co. with a package of demands that would cost the "Big Three" auto builders $3 billion over three years.

Leonard Woodcock, the new UAW president, made the presentation to Malcolm Denis, a Ford vice president in charge of the labor negotiations.

The UAW, the nation's second largest union, represents 166,000 Ford workers, including 13,000 in Canada who also will be covered by the new pact.

Woodcock presented an identical list of demands to General Motors Corp. Wednesday, and he plans to move on to Chrysler Corp. Friday.

National Emergency In Britain

LONDON (UPI)--The British government today proclaimed a state of national emergency to deal with a nationwide dockworkers strike that brought the first national ports shutdown in 44 years.

The proclamation was signed by Queen Elizabeth II at a special session of the Privy Council a few minutes after she returned from a visit to Canada.

The state of emergency was announced in a message from the Queen to the House of Commons, read to it by the speaker, Dr. Horace King.

The message said: "Her majesty has deemed it proper by proclamation dated July 16 and made in pursuance of the emergency powers act of 1920 to declare that a state of emergency exists."

More than 200 ships already had been stranded by the strike in this nation which depends upon its exports to live and which imports most of its food. Under the emergency decree troops can handle the longshoremen's work.

The Queen's message said, "If it appears to the Queen that there have occurred or are about to occur events of such a nature as to be calculated, by interfering with supply and distribution of food, water, fuel or light, or with means of locomotion to deprive the community or any substantial proportion of the community of the essentials of life, Her Majesty may by proclamation declare that a state of emergency exists."

This was the first declaration

Marin Shakespeare Festival Opening Set

Curtain time for the opening night presentation of "The Tempest" — first of four season productions—is 8 p.m. tomorrow and Saturday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

The theater, situated amid 26 acres of forest, has a pool separating the terraced seating from the acoustically engineered stage.

A fund-raising "Feast to Good Will," featuring Elizabethan dining, dancing under the stars and dinner entertainment, will be held from 5 to 11 p.m. Saturday at the San Rafael Elks Club, 1312 Mission Avenue, to help finance the productions.

Other performances of "The Tempest," directed by John Olon Scrimgeour, will be held July 26, August 6, 7, 15, 23, 27 and 28 and September 5, 13, 17, and 25. A special performance will be held August 9 at 2 p.m. at Stern Grove, San Francisco.

"Taming of the Shrew," directed by Dan Caldwell, opens July 24, and "Henry V," directed by Mark Bramhall, opens July 31.

In addition to the three Shakespearean plays, this year's festival will include "Brigadoon," a musical about a Scottish village that appears only one day each 100 years. "Brigadoon," directed by J. D. Nichols and Dan Caldwell, will play Tuesday and Wednesday of the last two weeks in August and first week in September.

All play performances will be preceded by informal preshow entertainment by the Festival Singers under the direction of J. D. Nichols.

Tickets for all performances are available from the Marin Shakespeare Festival, Box 2306, San Rafael; all Bay area Emporium, Macy's and Sears, Roebuck and Co. stores and Ticketron outlets and Mill Valley's Greyhound Bus Depot.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Harold Lloyd Gains

Lloyd, 76, entered the hospital late last week.

The comedian, who appeared in 300 films from the silent era of the 1920s through the beginning of talking pictures in the 1930s, made lenseless horn-rimmed spectacles a film comedy staple. He has been in semiretirement for several years.

Norton Simon Divorce

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The 37-year marriage of millionaire industrialist Norton Simon apparently is at an end.

A secretary to Simon, 63, disclosed Wednesday her employer is planning to divorce his wife Lucille. No reason was given.

Huntley Draws Blast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. William J. Scherle, R-Iowa, said Wednesday television newscaster Chet Huntley had revealed himself to be "what we've always suspected — a Nixon hater."

Scherle criticized Huntley in a House speech for his recent critical comments about President Nixon. Huntley, who next month will retire after 16 years on NBC-TV's evening news report, described Nixon as so "shallow" that it frightened Huntley to think of him as President.

Scherle said Huntley had exposed his lack of objectivity. "His retirement comes 16 years too late," Scherle said.

Guerrillas Hit Village

LISBON (UPI)—The Portuguese Armed Force Information Service said today more than 300 guerrillas attacked the Portuguese Guinea village of Pirada Sunday night, killing 15 persons and wounding 41.

The announcement said a Portuguese soldier was missing in the attack on the African enclave. The Senegal-based guerrillas looted and set fire to 50 huts under cover of rocket, cannon and mortar fire, the communique said.

Praise Themselves

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats, meeting in caucus, have passed a resolution calling the current Congress one of the most productive in decades.

The resolution cited House passage of bills on welfare, social security boosts, emergency home financing, crime, postal reform, voting rights, the 18-year-old vote, presidential electoral reform, hospital construction and others.

Tour Aimed At Dope

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five congressmen, accompanied by government officials from the United States and Canada, begin a tour of U.S. and Canadian border points today to check on the Custom Bureau's new crackdown on dope smugglers.

The lawmakers on the tour include Reps. Tom Steed, D-Okla., Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., Howard Robinson, R-N.Y., Silvio Conte, R-Mass., and Robert McEwen, R-N.Y.

Cigarette Ad Ban?

BOSTON (UPI)—Legislation banning all cigarette advertising in Massachusetts was submitted to the legislature Wednesday by Rep. Belden G. Bly Jr., R-Saugus.

The bill would prohibit all advertising or cigarettes including the use of television, radio, newspapers, magazines and billboards.

The legislation goes farther than any proposal or regulation of the Federal Communications Commission in barring cigarette advertising, Bly said in a statement.

Pot Prescriptions?

TORONTO (UPI)—A Toronto psychiatrist said Wednesday he might prescribe marijuana to users to protect them from prosecution under Canadian drug laws.

Dr. Lionel Solursh of the Toronto Western Hospital, commented on a report a small group of doctors might begin prescribing marijuana to pressure the federal government for more liberal drug laws.

"I would say I might do it," Solrush said, but added his decision might vary from case to case.

ROYAL PATHS DIVERGE

Alaska's Natives Voted $1 Billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate by a 76-8 vote has approved and sent to the House a bill to give $1 billion cash to Alaska's Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts, as a final settlement of land claims upon the United States.

Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel hailed the bill as "a great victory" for progress and fairness in the treatment of the nation's earliest native citizens. He said he hoped a similar bill in the House, now waiting action by the Interior Committee, would be moved ahead quickly.

In the House, the controversial anticrime bill for the nation's capital was approved in a 332 to 64 vote without change as it came from a House-Senate conference committee. The bill retained "no-knock" and preventive detention sections that have been bitterly opposed by civil libertarians in Congress and black civil rights groups in Washington as being repressive and unconstitutional.

The significance of the bill extends beyond the boundaries of the District of Columbia, a federal preserve, since many of its disputed provisions were modeled on separate legislation which the administration has proposed for the federal enforcement system throughout the country. The bill now goes to the Senate where it is expected to receive stiff opposition from both liberals and conservatives.

The Senate-approved land settlement bill would give Alaska's natives $500 million in cash over 12 years and $500 million from oil and mineral resources collected from their lands, as well as 10 million acres of land.

The measure provides establishment of native corporations to use the $1 billion for tribal welfare and to promote economic self-sufficiency.

The Senate also adopted an amendment, bitterly opposed by Western Republicans, that would require competitive bidding for leasing of land in Alaska for mineral rights.

In other congressional action Wednesday:

—The House voted 311 to 76 to authorize $537,730,000 for the National Science Foundation (NSF) in the current fiscal year compared with $500 million asked by the administration.

—The Senate Employment, Manpower and Poverty subcommittee approved a far-reaching plan to reform the country's manpower training programs and create 150,000 new local public service jobs. Costs of the measure were estimated at between $2 and $3 billion to offset some of the costs for local public service jobs in schools, hospitals, police and fire departments and similar agencies that would provide employment in urban ghettos and depressed rural areas.

—Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., proposed an experimental housing subsidy that would limit housing rent costs for poor families to no more than one-quarter of their income.

Nixon Still Sees Upturn In Economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is optimistic the nation's sagging economy will pick up later this year despite a continuing dip in the closely-watched index of industrial production.

The President received guardedly optimistic reports from seven of his top economic strategists during a later afternoon meeting Wednesday. Aftrwards White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon is "very optimistic about the economy and he anticipates an upturn in the second half" of the year.

Nixon summoned the quadraid — his four top economic advisers — plus Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson, Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans and White House Counselor Robert P. Mayo to discuss business conditions. The quadriad includes Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns, Treasury Secretary David M. Kennedy, Management and Budget Director George P. Shultz and Chairman Paul W. McCracken of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Shortly before the meeting began, the Federal Reserve announced that industrial production fell 0.3 per cent last month to the lowest level since November 1968. It was the ninth drop in the past 11 months.

The June industrial production index was 168.6 per cent of the 1957-59 average, down 3.4 per cent from the peak established in July, 1969.

Administration economists had hoped the index would rise — or at least remain stable — in June. They said such a report would have indicated a "bottoming out" of the winter-and-spring business slump.

Auto assemblies increased 4.5 per cent in June, possibly as a result of manufacturers building up stocks as a hedge against a strike. Most other industrial activity declined.

Ziegler said Nixon had no specific agenda for his meeting with the economic aides. The press secretary said the President wanted to discuss recent business developments.

NOW 'REAGAN'S RATPACK'?

Dino Joins Sinatra In Backing Governor

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Dean Martin, an active fund-raiser for Democrats and an old Hollywood "ratpack" pal of Frank Sinatra, has joined the re-election campaign of Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Martin and Sinatra, who endorsed the governor last week, will be associated with "Californians for Reagan," a group of Democrats supporting the Republican incumbent over Democratic challenger Jess Unruh.

A spokesman for Unruh declined comment on Martin's support but said, "We're lining up our own entertainment committee."

Jack McDowell, a spokesman for Reagan's campaign organization, said "Dino volunteered" the endorsement and "subsequent to that the governor talked to him on the phone."

DEAN MARTIN
A Demo for Reagan

McDowell said he had no knowledge of any other members of the fun-loving "clan" of Sinatra and associates who might be planning to also declare their support for Reagan.

The "clan," or the "ratpack" as it was known in Hollywood, included Sinatra, Martin, Sammy Davis, Joey Bishop and Peter Lawford, former brother-in-law of the late President Kennedy. Some members are reported not as chummy as they once were.

Martin, Davis and Sinatra headlined a "stars night" fund-raisers at Los Angeles in 1966 which raised more than $200,000 for Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown, who lost to Reagan.

McDowell reported he understood that Martin decided to join the campaign without prior knowledge that Sinatra had endorsed Reagan.

Reagan hinted at a news conference that Martin had endorsed him for reelection and his campaign organization confirmed it later. He said the names Sinatra and Martin "kind of go together like ham and eggs."

In response to a question, the former actor noted that show business personalities support political campaigns by appearing at rallies and staging fund-raisers.

He added, "Frank has expressed, as had Dean Martin, and some others, a desire to be a part of those kind of affairs when they take place."

Pressed about whether he was disclosing an endorsement by Martin, Reagan said, "I have no authority to say that."

Earlier in the day, Unruh shrugged off Sinatra's endorsement of Reagan, saying he didn't think the voters "are going to be influenced by big-name supporters." He accused Reagan of enlisting "hired guns."

Reagan also slammed the door firmly shut on Unruh's challenge to debate him. "I don't see any need for meeting Mr. Unruh on these issues," he said.

Freed Bishop Surprised At Own Survival, Not Bitter

HONG KONG (UPI)—Weak and faltering, Bishop James Edward Walsh said today he never thought he would live long enough to be released from a Communist Chinese prison. He denied the spy charges that led to his imprisonment.

"I love the Chinese people," the 79-year-old Roman Catholic clergyman from Cumberland, Md., said in denying any bitterness toward Peking after his 12-year confinement.

He spoke from a wheelchair in a voice that became progressively weaker and in words that faltered toward the end of his first news conference since China released him unexpectedly Friday. He has been hospitalized since.

Walsh was arrested Oct. 18, 1958 in Shanghai, where he was the Roman Catholic bishop. Seventeen months later Peking announced he had been sentenced to 20 years as a spy.

"I never thought I would ever see the day of my release," Walsh said. "I felt that I would not live long enough to complete my sentence of 20 years and that I would die in prison."

"I was not a spy for either the United States government or the Vatican," he added. He found it "hard to justify the severity of the sentence meted out to me."

"I came to China in 1918 as a priest and missioner for the purpose of preachingt he gospel of Jesus Christ to the Chinese and tending to their spiritual and material needs.

"I can tell you in all honesty and sincerity that I have never spent a day during my 40 years in Chinese soil in doing anything but that."

Asked if he admittted to Chinese authorities in Shanghai that he was a spy, Walsh said, "I admitted that I may be a spy in their legal sense. I don't repudiate this statement if it is accepted in the right sense. I was treated very well except for the intense interrogations... it hasn't been all sweetness and light."

Walsh said he was "bewildered by all the fuss and attention that has followed my release. I am beginning to suspect that many changes have taken place in all walks of life since I last had contact with the outside world."

Walsh first learned Friday of the death of Pope John XXIII and man's landing on the moon.

"I feel a bit like Rip Van Winkle waking up after a long sleep," he said.

As it orbits the earth, the moon spirals outward at a rate of about one foot every 30 years.

CAB Puts Halt On New Air Fares

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has suspended proposed fare changes on air routes from the mainland to Hawaii, and ordered a full-scale investigation of the situation.

The proposed new rates were to have taken effect July 22 on Continental, Northwest, Pan American, Trans World, United and Western airlines.

WORK COMPLETED OR JUST BEGUN?

About 35 tons of ship and 170 pounds of man is moved from a Sausalito shipyard to an awaiting way on Richardson Bay for launching before the weekend. The Kamchatka, moved yesterday by R. Trost Moving Co. of Concord, was built by its owners Pete Kondrashoff and Alex Jacobencia and can carry 50 tons of fish. The fishing vessel will be homeported in either Sausalito or San Francisco. Drydocks Edict Puts Issue In Sheriff's Lap

The problem of what to do with the derelict drydocks off Sausalito has landed in the lap of Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos.

Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner Tuesday appointed the sheriff receiver to carry out the court order for removal or destruction of the four huge wooden drydocks.

The drydocks, which were brought to Sausalito in 1966 by the late Delmar D. Wise for repairs at his Diesel Engineering and Maintenance Co., became bogged down in lawsuits and Richardson Bay mud.

He had intended to repair them for resale, but the City of Sausalito passed an ordinance barring them from the city limits before he could move them to his yards.

Marin County has twice obtained court orders to have them removed, but both were appealed. The first appeal was upheld, but the second denied this year.

Judge Gardiner ordered Mountanos to report back at 9 a.m. Aug. 11 with recommendations on methods of removal, the costs involved and the progress the owner is making in removing the docks.

J. Christopher Roberts, a Mill Valley artist and the drydocks' new owner, has indicated he will try to move them into Sausalito waters and make them into a gigantic wooden lotus blossom with stained glass windows for a cultural center if he can get funding and approval.

If he fails the sheriff is empowered to marshall all Roberts' assets to move the docks, according to Deputy County Counsel Joseph A. Forest.

FIVE CANDIDATES, ONE SEAT

Trustee Hopefuls Woo Hub Votes

Candidates for the San Anselmo School District board presented proposals to improve education and solve money problems to a near-capacity crowd last night in the Isabel Cook School auditorium.

The five candidates for the vacancy created by the resignation of former board chairman Cornelia A. Busse gave 10-minute opening statements and answered written questions from the audience in the candidates' night sponsored by parent-teacher associations and parents' clubs of the district.

A special election to fill the vacant board seat will be held Tuesday.

Candidate Miriam Beall of 68 Oakland Avenue, a graduate of San Francisco State College, has taught high school four years. She said money could be saved by centralizing some procedures now done at district level, such as purchasing and transportation.

Mrs. Beall said proposals to combine sixth grade classes with classes at two small district junior high schools sound good, but that some problems could result from teaching credential requirements for different grades.

She also proposed elimination of some schools with high maintenance costs caused by age and size; adding developmental programs for fourth grade and below in art, music and physical education and for seventh and eighth grades in industrial arts to the curricula; and study and evaluation of ungraded primary school programs for possible district wide application.

Mrs. Beall said she favors team teaching, provision for children to attend special programs in any school regardless of where they live in the district and establishment of procedures for evaluation of curricula by parents and teachers.

Candidate Joyce DeMartini of 5 Brookside Drive, is a housewife. Calling the current budget "frightening," she advocated making do with what the district has now as much as possible to save money.

Mrs. DeMartini opposed instituting new experimental education programs in the district, and said that parents should have power to prevent children's participation in experimental programs. She said she favors keeping present classes for both slow and advanced children and bringing trade classes back to the schools, even if it means cutting back on programs such as art.

"It's great to teach art," she said, "But what will we do with 2,000 artists?"

John F. Hulpke of 20 Oak Knoll Avenue, is an instructor at the graduate school of business of Golden Gate College. He said that inflation caused by the Vietnam war, waste caused by poor planning and additions to and improvement of educational programs have increased school costs.

Hulpke said that the school board should write letters to try to end the Vietnam War and press the state for property tax relief through shifting more costs to the income tax. New educational programs should be watched closely, he said, and if improvement results, citizens should "take a deep breath and pay."

School boards should be more business oriented, he said, and expect development of new curricula and programs to be done by professional educators in the system. Hulpke said teachers should have more leeway at the instructional level to develop new programs.

Eugene E. Jacks of 540 Fawn Drive, Sleepy Hollow, has a bachelor of science degree from the University of California at Berkeley and is an actuary for the California Department of Insurance.

He said he favors a balanced school board including at least one person with a solid business background and initiating programs within the district and with neighboring districts to share some administrative and purchasing costs to save money.

He said that a countywide electronic data processing program, used by businesses to cut costs for 20 years, could save money in school administration also.

Jacks proposed formation of a parents' advisory council composed of representatives of parents' clubs and parent-teacher associations to provide improved communication between the school board and the public and suggested that the council could help supplement instruction in weak areas.

He cited as an example an advisory council in Southern California which arranged extracurricular language instruction in elementary grades with tuition and parents' clubs' funds.

Pieter Toal of 48 Hawthorne Avenue, San Anselmo, served on the school board from 1965 to 1969 as an appointee. He has a master's degree in civil engineering from Delft Technological University, Netherlands, and has been an assistant professor at the University of Indonesia in Bandung, Indonesia.

Toal said he favors increased use of computer programs and increased cooperation among districts to save money, and that he feels the school board should put pressure on Sacramento for more state aid to education.

Toal also advocated more individualized teaching, earlier entry into school and earlier access to elective courses, including sex education courses. He said that the two small junior high schools in the district should either be combined or be oriented differently, for example as one vocational and one academic junior high.

He expressed concern over a developing gap in understanding between teachers and parents and said that the board should develop programs to get them together — not just discussing individual children, but discussing broad educational programs and plans.

Another candidates' night will be conducted by the Sleepy Hollow Homes Association at 9 p.m. today at 1317 Butterfield Road, Sleepy Hollow.

September Days Set For Rohnert Park Celebration

The annual Rohnert Park Founder's Day celebration will be held Sept. 11 — 13, Chamber of Commerce directors decided yesterday.

Donald Jones was named chairman of the event and said that committees will begin working on plans immediately.

Tentative plans call for a beauty contest to select Miss Rohnert Park on Sept. 11, a Founder's Day ball on Sept. 12 and fireworks on Sept. 13.

Chamber President Sil Cincera said the possibility of bringing a carnival in for the weekend will also be explored.

The chamber also agreed to sponsor an October candidates' night for contestants in the Sonoma County November election.

Spain Asks Sausalito Schools Evaluation

The future of the Sausalito School District rests with district trustees' ability to evaluate past experiences and to open communications between fighting factions, Interim Supt. Robert E. Spain said today.

"The first task for the new board and myself is to evaluate where we are in light of meeting an education program," Spain said of radio KTIM's Marin Sounding Board.

With Spain on the program, moderated by Kitty Oppenheimer, were Trustee Delta Christ and two mothers whose children have attended or still attend school in the controversial district, Mrs. Royce McLemore of Marin City and Susanna Lowry of Mill Valley.

Spain, citing "chaotic conditions" within the district when the school year ended in June, said he has proposed an organization structure to open communications. He did not elaborate.

Mrs. McLemore, whose children attend Martin Luther King School, said she could not speak of the future of the district until she had spoken of its past.

A supporter of Sidney K. Walton, recently fired principal of Martin Luther King School, she said Walton had brought "a year of progress" to the school as shown in student evaluation reports.

She added, in response to a telephone question, that Walton had "opened the eyes" of Marin City residents to participating in the selection of a district administrator.

"Power is going to have to be shared if progress is to be made," she said, adding that both groups in the dispute over control of the district are going to have to listen to each other.

"The new board is going to have to quit throwing up . . . who they represent," Mrs. McLemore declared. She claimed the board represents Sausalito taxpayers.

Mrs. Christ, after outlining the new board's recent actions, responded that she represents the district as a whole and claimed election results from Marin City were proof.

She added she would avoid "ignorant change and ignorant opposition to change." She listed her goal as insuring the schools were open and providing the best education program possible.

Mrs. Lowry painted a darker picture of the district's future, claiming it may already be "doomed."

"All the education in the world won't save us if we don't start working together," she said.

Also a supporter of Walton, she said the principal had succeeded in bringing black and white students together.

Prior to Walton's arrival, she said, there was complete disruption of the school's program. Now, with Walton gone, she predicts, "it will be a traumatic year at Martin Luther King School."

The program will be rebroadcast Sunday at 10 a.m.

Suspect Pleads Guilty In Bar Triangle Killing

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Earl Preston Paige, 51, of San Francisco, accused of fatally shooting his estranged wife's companion, pleaded guilty yesterday in Sonoma County Superior Court to second degree murder.

Paige had previously pleaded innocent to first degree murder in the April 5 shooting death of John Robert Perry, 26, of Petaluma. With the change in plea, charges of kidnap and assault were dismissed by Judge Kenneth M. Eymann.

The shooting occurred in a Windsor bar when Paige found Perry sitting beside his estranged wife, Naomi, 49. Perry was shot in the back of the head.

Paige had been accused of kidnapping his wife after the shooting and assaulting her later in a Healdsburg motel where he accused her of romantic involvements with Perry.

Sentencing was set for Wednesday at 10 a.m.

Human Rights Panel To Eye Budget Issues

Revamping the county's human rights department staff to fit a slashed budget will be one of the main topics to be discussed tonight by the Marin Human Rights Commission.

The meeting is set for 8 o'clock in the supervisors' chambers at the Civic Center.

Chairman James Quiett said the problem of finding a successor to Executive Director Austin J. Thompson may also come up for discussion. Thompson resigned under fire on June 16, and the resignation will take effect Aug. 15. Thompson, who is in the hospital for a knee operation, is not expected to attend tonight's session.

Thompson asked for a budget of $77,500 this fiscal year, but this was cut to $35,000 last month by the supervisors. County Administrator Alan Bruce had recommended dissolving the entire department, leaving only $1,000 for incidental commission expenses.

48 Gonorrhea Cases In Marin In Week

Forty-eight cases of gonorrhea — 11 each from San Rafael and Mill Valley — were reported in Marin County last week, according to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer.

Also reported were 17 cases of streptococcus infection, and once case each of serum hepatitis, tuberculosis and infectious hepatitis.

ary would receive the backing of key party officials and committees.

"The purpose was to solicit—at least from me—the statement that if in January...I was not the strongest candidate that I would support the strongest candidate," the former mayor said.

"I asked if it had also been put to Ronald Reagan and was understanding that woever was the strongest candidate would receive the unanimous support of the people involved."

Christopher said he remained in the race because information ht received in January indicated he would be the strongest candidate against Brown.

Jack S. McDowell, who wrote the story revealing the agreement for the San Francisco Examiner in February 1966, testified briefly that he had authored the story.

Patrick's attorney said the testimony of McDowell, who is now managing Reagan's reelection campaign for Spencer, Roberts and Associates, was designed to show his client's "good faith" at the time he made the accusation about the Field poll.

Patrick, 40, testified Wednesday he "understood political polls could be bought" and thus was not surprised about reports Christopher's organization had paid $16,000 to influence one.

Oakes Recovering, Is Up And Around For First Time

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Indian leader Richard Oakes was up and around today for the first time since he was beaten severely June 11 in a tavern fight.

A spokesman at General Hospital said the tracheotomy tube had been removed from his throat and all intravenous feeding tubes removed.

"He's breathing through his mouth, eating everything in sight and riding around in a wheelchair," the spokesman said. Oakes' condition was listed as good.

The Mohawk Indian who led the invasion of Alcatraz Island last November underwent 6 1-2 hours of brain surgery following the beating with a pool cue in a Mission District bar.

Four Marinites Sign For Hitches In Navy

Four Marinites have enlisted in the Navy at the San Rafael recruiting station.

They are William Krutt of 314 Prospect Drive, San Rafael; John Metcalfe of 562 Tenaya Drive, Tiburon; Donald Harden Jr. of 160 San Jose Avenue, and Robert Hansen of 2360 Dominic Drive, both Novato.

Novato Exhibit Set For Sculptor Dallas

An exhibit by Novato sculptor David Dallas will be presented from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday at the Novato Community House, Herta Rothschild, publicity cochariman of North Bay Art Inc., announced.

The exhibit is part of North Bay Art's program to encourage participation in and appreciation of the arts.

Thurber is a member of Newspaper Mailers Union 18, an affiliate of the International Typographical Union, and an employee of San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co., which prints and distributes the San Francisco Chronicle and Examiner.

Daly's wife identified the two teen-agers in a police lineup as the youths who forced their way into the family's home at 407 Connecticut Street. The youths later said Thurber was the man who took them to the home, police said.

The gunmen knocked on the door and asked her about the owner of a car parked outside, Mrs. Daly told police, and then forced their way into the home with guns drawn, asking for money.

One of the pair demanded money and when Daly said he had none, the man hit him in the face with a foot-long steel pipe. The two men then ordered him up against the wall.

Mrs. Daly then offered to get money from the kitchen and one man accompanied her to look. While there, she reported hearing a shot and rushed into the living room.

Daly slumped to the floor and the two gunmen fled up Alabama Street near 19th Street, she said.

Violence, vandalism and threats have punctuated the typographical union strike. Fourteen separate death threats have been reported, advertisers have been harassed and their businesses vandalized.

There have been several firebombings reported by I-J employees and on June 20 a member of the union was arrested after a shot was fired through a window in the newspaper office.

Throughout the strike, the union has denied any connection with the violence. After Daly's house was firebombed, union president Leon Olsen appeared on television to disavow any union links to the attacks.

Daly had been employed at the Independent-Journal only a few months before the shooting.

Daly went to high school in Billings, Mont., and attended Eastern Montana College and Montana State College, graduating with an electrical engineering degree in 1964.

From 1957 to 1960 he was on active duty with the Navy, attaining the rank of communications technician second class.

From 1965 until he joined the I-J, Daly worked for Mergenthaler Linotype Co. as a field service engineer in San Francisco.

Child's Learning Disorders Panel At Jewish Center

A public panel discussion on current medical and educational trends on learning disorders in children will be held at 8 p.m. next Wednesday at the Marin Jewish Community Center, 200 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

The program is part of the center's preschool program which will integrate childhen with learning disorders, such as neurological (hearing and speech defects, with normal children in nursery school.

Panelists include Dr. Albert C. Goldberg of Terra Linda, medical director of Marin Head Start and pediatrician at Marin General Hospital and two San Francisco hospitals; Dr. Michael Taekman, staff neurosurgeon for hospitals in Richmond, Oakland, Pinole and Berkeley; Dr. Walter Rollin, associate professor of speech pathology and audiology at San Francisco State College, and Dr. Melvin B. Fox of Terra Linda, a behavioral optometrist.

Novato Boosters List Park Gifts

The Novato Civic Foundation has learned its fund-raising campaign has netted $2,083 for park development, Lorene Bunker, foundation publicity chairman, reported.

The foundation board voted to continue the drive through Nov. 10 at Tuesday night's board meeting.

Mrs. Bunker said the board also discussed the planned development of Novato Creek Park, an 11-acre strip of land adjacent to the creek, and agreed to recommend to the city council that park development be kept at a minimum. She added the foundation agreed to sell tickets for the opening nnght of "Stlag 17" at 8:30 p.m., Sept. 11, presented by the Novato Community Players.

teams, retired to the negotiating room, Denise told reporters, "company negotiators are going to the bargaining table prepared to get down immediately to the basic job—that of reaching a sound settlement before Sept. 14 when the current Ford-UAW collective bargaining agreement expires, without disruption of our operations nationally or at any of the 101 local bargaining locations."

Denise's comments were virtually a carbon copy of the comments made by Earl Bramblett, GM vice president in charge of personnel, when he opened negotiations with the UAW, which represents 700,000 workers at GM, Ford and Chrysler plants in the United States.

Like Bramblett, Denise said the current triennial negotiations come "at a critical point in our history." He said one out of every seven cars sold in the United States was built by workers abroad who earn only one quarter to one-half the wages of American auto workers.

"To the extent that this gap becomes even wider as a result of upcoming negotiations, it will be even more difficult for the domestic manufacturers to compete with foreign producers," Denise said.

But Ford "will do its best to negotiate an agreement that will be responsive to the needs of its employees and consistent with their interest (and) the national interest," Denise said.

It was Woodcock's first appearance at Ford as head of the UAW. Until this year, he had restricted himself to GM as head of the union's GM department.

Since he became head of the UAW, Woodcock has assumed the task of leading the union into negotiations, as he did Wednesday when he presented the demands to Bramblett.

"With a background of experience against which to make their judgments, with adolescent identity problems out of the way, students over 22, over 32, over 52 are almost always our best students," he said.

"Perhaps higher education at the college and university is too precious to be wasted on the immature," Hayakawa added.

Joseph Rhodes Jr., 22, a Harvard student who Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said should resign from the commission, asked the noted semanticist if he really meant what he said about bright students.

"I think I meant it," Hayakawa replied. "Much of the cause of student unrest is more psychological than rooted in events themselves."

Alto-Richardson Firemen Receive Fringe Benefits

Alto-Richardson Bay firemen have been granted a packade of new fringe benefits by the district board, Chief Carl O. Heynen Jr. reported.

Directors, meeting Tuesday, approved a rental sudsidy of 6.6 per cent of their salaries, which will amount to about $50 monthly for each of the district's 10 firemen, Heynen said.

Other benefits include a clothing allowance to permit employees to buy two work uniforms per year; an increase in vacation time to three weeks for firemen who have been with the district for five years; and pay for seven holidays in lieu of compensatory time.

Firemen were given a salary increase ranging from 6 to 7.5 per cent when the board adopted a $155,000 budget in June, Heynen said.

Two Plead Guilty

Alan and Lila Farr Maxey have pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to a reduced misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana at their Fairfax home on April 23. They were originally charged with a felony count of the same offense.

Cambodians Rebuffed In Hill Attack

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Cambodian troops ran out of ammunition and retreated from Kirirom today after six days of costly counterattacks against guerrilla soldiers who seized the mountaintop resort village Saturday.

A military spokesman who announced the retreat disclosed too that Viet Cong and North Vietnamese units attacked a government ammunition depot at Long Vek, 30 miles north of Phnom Penh, this morning and fighting was continuing at last report.

The level of Cambodian combat appeared to be increasing as South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon announced its 18,000-man task force in Cambodia killed 33 guerrillas Wednesday in two sharp clashes near the Vietnam border.

The U.S. Command in Saigon sent four waves of B52 bombers against an important Communist supply bivouac in the A Shau Valley in South Vietnam's northwest corner today in an attempt to forestall an expected guerrilla offensive in the northern war zone.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. Army chief of staff, told newsmen in Saigon the Allied thrust into Cambodia has ruined the Communist command's capability of launching a major offensive in the southern half of South Vietnam but not in the northern half.

The U.S. Command in Saigon said 72 Americans were killed and 729 wounded last week, an increase over the 61 dead of the week before. The South Vietnamese reported 423 dead, 1,275 wounded and 35 missing, also an increase. Allied commanders said Communist casualties were 1,831 killed, another sharp increase.

Cambodian troops at Kirirom, 56 miles west-southwest of Phnom Penh, suffered "fairly heavy" losses in counterattacking the village before they were forced to withdraw to its periphery for want of ammunition, the Phnom Penh government spokesman said.

"We are short of ammunition," he explained. "Our soldiers resisted to the last bullet. Because Kirirom is a hill, it is very difficult to climb, and each of our soldiers can only bring a limited quanity of ammunition."

American sources have said the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese drive at Kirirom is aimed at cutting Highway 4, the only thoroughfare between Phnom Penh and the port of Kompong Som, site of Cambodia's oil refinery.

Fighting elsewhere in Cambodia in the past 24 hours was characterized by what the spokesman termed "isolated and feeble enemy attacks," including harassment against the province capital at Siem Reap near the Communist-held Angkor Wat ruins.

Small skirmishes were reported 50 miles northwest and 37 miles east-southeast of the capital. A belated field dispatch said Cambodian troops killed 32 guerrillas while losing four dead in a series of encounters earlier this week 32 miles south of Phnom Penh.

Organic Gardens Course Offered

A five-session course in organic gardening will be offered by the Marin Jewish Community Center beginning Tuesday.

The course will meet on Tuesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the center, 200 North San Pedro Road, Santa Venetia.

Courses in modern art and painting are also being offered.

of a state of emergency since a six weeks' seamen's strike in May, 1966. It was only the fourth time the powers had been invoked since 1920.

The state of emergency gave the government authority to take special measures to control food and fuel supplies, transportation and other vital activities. It also gave it the right to use troops, if necessary, to move vital food supplies.

The proclamation was valid for a month. Any measures taken by the government under it must be approved by Parliament within a week.

William Whitelaw, leader of the House of Commons, said the Queen's message will be debated by the House Monday.

The state of emergency was decided on at a two-hour cabinet meeting this morning. Prime Minister Edward Heath and five other Privy Council members were waiting at Buckingham Palace when the Queen returned from a visit to Canada early this afternoon.

Ports throughout the country were silent and deserted. More than 200 ships were idle, with no longshoremen to load or unload them. Others had left before the walkout deadline.

Britain's 47,000 longshoremen Wednesday struck all the country's 40 seaports for the first time since the 1962 general strike to back an 80 per cent pay hike demand. The employers had offered seven per cent.

Officials said troops were alerted in camps near major seaports to be ready to unload vital cargoes of perishable foodstuffs.

Militant longshoremen's leaders said use of troops would make the crisis "much more serious."

"If the army comes in, we will not try to stop them," Ernie Rice, a union official, told London dockers. "But if they come in, matters will not be improved. In fact, the whole thing will be made much more serious."

The stock market, which dropped 11 points in the Financial Times index Wednesday after the walkout decision, slid further downhill at this morning's opening. Industrial shares were particularly weak.

Petaluman Found Dead In House

Harry Marvin Hosmer, 59, was found dead at his home, 523 Sixth Street, Petaluma, by police at 7 p.m. yesterday.

Sonoma County Coroner Andrew Johansen said Hosmer was found in a living room chair with a plastic bag tied around his head.

Police had been asked to check the house by Hosmer's stepson, Michael Kitchens of Sausalito. Johansen said no notes were found.

Hosmer is also survived by a daughter, Jill McDonald of Corte Madera; and a brother, William Hosmer of North Hollywood.

Slide-Lecture To Show Better San Anselmo

San Anselmo Councilman Lewis W. Stewart will give a slide-lecture next Thursday showing how downtown San Anselmo could have its face lifted for improved appearance.

The slide show, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, will start at 7:30 p.m. at Wade Thomas School. Stewart is a community consultant for Pacific Gas and Electric Co., preparing such demonstrations to show how communities can improve themselves.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM LUNSFORD

Funeral for William E. Lunsford, owner of a bar and restaurant at the Sausalito ferry slip at the outbreak of World War II, has been held in Reno, Nev.

The 88-year-old ex-Army officer died July 4 in Reno.

Lunsford was born in Alabama and traveled as a youth with Annie Oakley and the Buffalo Bill Cody Wild West show before joining the Army in 1901.

A cavalryman, he fought against Pancho Villa prior to commanding a company in England and France during World War I.

Before retiring in 1938 as a second lieutenant, he was stationed for many years in the Philippines.

After moving from Sausalito about 1942 to Santa Rosa, Lunsford worked as a bartender until his retirement in 1952.

He moved to Reno 10 years ago.

Military burial was at Mother of Sorrows Mausoleum, Reno.

STEPHEN YUHAS

Stephen Yuhas, an engineer in Sausalito for 20 years and a Tiburon resident, died yesterday in the intensive care unit at Marin General Hospital after undergoing surgery for a perforated duodenal ulcer. He was 50.

A native of New Salem, Pa., Yuhas was a resident of Marin County and California 15 years. He worked for E. G. Schoonmaker Inc. of Sausalito and lived at 6 Juno Road, Tiburon.

He is survived by his wife, Anna Mae; two children, Stephen J. and Barbara A. Yuhas, of the home address; four brothers, Michal, of Tiburon; George, of Cleveland, and Andre and Frank, both of New Salem, Pa., and four sisters, Kathryn Walsh of Cleveland, Alice Vargulich of New Salem, and Helen Campoli and Dorothy Briggs of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Funeral will be tomorrow at 11 a.m. at Russell and Gooch mortuary, Mill Valley, with burial at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

ZELMA F. ELKINS

Zelma Florence Elkins, 73, of 4 Cottage Avenue, Mill Valley, collapsed and died at her home yesterday, apparently of natural causes, according to the Marin County Coroner's office.

She was discovered by her husband, John W. Elkins, when he returned home at 10 a.m.

A native of California, she had lived in Marin County 12 years. Funeral arrangements are pending at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley.

GEORGE LINDAHL

Private funeral has been held in San Rafael for George Lindahl of San Anselmo.

A native of Odense, Denmark, he died Wednesday in a local hospital following a short illness.

Lindahl, 89, was a retired accountant and had lived in Marin County for 10 years.

He is survived by a son, George L. Lindahl of Ross and two grandchildren, George M. and John F. Lindahl of Ross.

DR. ERIC BERNE
Textbook a bestseller

Death Stills Pen: 'Games People Play'

CARMEL, Calif. (UPI)—Dr. Eric Berne, author of "Games People Play," the psychiatric textbook that became a bestseller, died Wednesday.

Berne, 60, had suffered a heart attack two weeks ago.

"Games People Play" explained the maneuvers people use among themselves in everyday life because they are unable to make direct contact. The "games" were the situations that everyone goes through every day in getting along with other people.

Originally written for other psychotherapists as a training manual in Berne's evolved version of Freudian analysis, the book became a bestseller throughout the country from 1964-67. Total sales were more than 2.5 million copies. It was one of the most popular books ever on psychiatry.

Avoiding textbook language, the book described a number of provocative-sounding "games," including "Look How Hard I've Tried," "Kick Me" and "They'll Be Glad They Knew Me."

It was easy to identify with the principal characters. Berne encouraged "role-playing to understand the nature and meaning of the situations.

He said behavior was a product of three universal states of mind: "parent," made up of things learned from one's parents and saved for use on one's children; "adult," the ability to deal with the world as it really is; and "child," the legacy of one's early years and the source of creativity and intuition.

Berne's matter-of-fact description of conversation patterns was popularly regarded as acid humor because it attempted to puncture the decorum of many social situations. Some professionals in the field criticized it as "insulting" to modern man, but many others welcomed the broad application of psychiatric insights made possible through the book's popularity.

Born and trained as a doctor in Canada, Berne came to the United States to take up psychiatry. He was drafted into the Army in World War II and got his first opportunity for experience in group therapy.

Berne is survived by a daughter, three sons and two stepchildren. He had been divorced twice. His last wife, Torre, died.

Residents Near 747 Runway Win Partial Victory

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Homeowners living near the nearly completed north runway at Los Angeles International Airport have won at least a partial victory in their fight against City Hall over noise pollution.

The city's Department of Airports Wednesday announced approval of emergency measures to purchase homes within 700 feet of the runway, the only one capable of handling the Boeing 747 jumbo jets.

Residents, some of whom live only 300 feet from the runway, complained that the noise of jets using the runway made life "unbearable."

An estimated 680 homes are involved.

Vandalism Case Decision Awaited

A Marin Municipal Court judge took under submission yesterday the question of whether the stop by two sheriff's deputies of the car of three men accused of conspiring to damage property of I-J advertisers was legal.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. said he will announce his decision at 9: 30 a.m. next Wednesday.

If he rules that the stop was illegal, the case against the three, all members of the International Typographical Union, will be dismissed. Otherwise, they will be held for trial on the felony charges in superior court.

The defendants are Dennis Joseph Crowley, 41, of San Jose; James Robert Brocato, 31, of Santa Rosa, and Grant William Anders, 30, of Pleasant Hill. They are charged with conspiring to break windows of six San Rafael and three Novato businesses before they were arrested in the early morning of June 3.

The judge yesterday heard arguments from defense attorneys Robert Y. Bell and Robert D. Carrow, who maintain that arresting officers Larry Stanfield and Richard Borba "had nothing on this car. . .but a hunch," in Bell's words.

The deputies stopped the car at about 1: 40 a.m. after seeing it drive slowly along a frontage road at the Strawberry Shopping Center in the direction of Stan's for Sports, where windows had been broken in the past.

The officers have testified they stopped the car both because it looked suspicious and because they couldn't read the license plate. They also said they observed a man in the back seat of the car make a movement as if he were shoving something down into the seat.

A search later produced two more slingshots and more chunks of metal, which a state laboratory expert has testified matched chunks found near the broken windows of stores.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Jerry R. Herman argued yesterday that the officers had a right to stop the car in light of high court cases which have held that police have the responsibility of trying to prevent crimes.

He said that the slow movement of the car at that time of the morning, the unclear license plate and the furtive movement of the man in the back seat gave the deputies the right to stop the car for further investigation.

The men were the first persons arrested in connection with window smashings of merchants who refused to discontinue advertising in the I-J. Since San Francisco Typographical Union 21 went on strike against the newspaper in January, about 40 businesses have been vandalized.

Lutherans Hear High Catholic Praise Luther

EVIAN, France (UPI)—A Roman Catholic Cardinal, attending the Lutheran World Federation's Fifth Assembly as an observer, gave unprecedented praise Wednesday night to Martin Luther, who began the Protestant Reformation in the 16th century.

Cardinal Jan Willebrands, president of the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity, told the assembly the dialogue between Lutherans and Catholics began six years ago and that observers at respective assemblies has become a matter of course.

He said the federation "gave an even more significant sign of its ecumenical spirit by inviting the president of the Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity, as the representative of the ecumenical endeavors of the Roman Catholic Church, to address your assembly."

"This invitation shows how far our dialogue has progressed in the few years that have passed since the Second Vatican Council," the cardinal said.

Eighty-three per cent of Finland's population belonds to the Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Stutsman Ends Last Working Day

Donald O. Stutsman, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority and Redevelopment Agency for more than 6 and one-half years, ended his last working day on the job last night by saying he will miss Marin City.

Stutsman, who has resigned, said he would be "leaving a piece of me" in Marin City, and although there have been "thorns in the roses," he will miss it.

"I hope Marin City can become the kind of community you people want to live in," he said.

James O. Quiett, chairman of the Marin County Redevelopment Agency, said: "I feel the community will experience a loss in losing Don."

Agency directors named Wallace K. Shepherd, administrative assistant, as interim executive director until a successor is selected.

Stutsman reported a screening committee had narrowed a field of 76 applicants for the job to five for interviewing.

Budget Session Set

The Mill Valley City Council will hold its next budget session at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at city hall, Councilman Jean Barnard has reported. The session originally was scheduled for July 23.

Hopeful Marin City Developer Wins Round

Marin Urban Development Association (MUAD), a nonprofit corporation of Marin City residents, last night moved half of the way toward a chance to become developer of Marin City.

The Marin County Redevelopment Agency gave preliminary approval for the corporation to become successor to Marin Development Association, an out-of-state firm long under fire for lack of action.

The second step necessary is preliminary approval of the Marin County Housing Authority, joint session, but that group did not muster a quorum.

Leland H. Jordan, attorney for the redevelopment agency, explained the agency's preliminary approval would be effective only if the authority adopted a similar resolution within 10 days.

Preliminary approval by both bodies will give the development association exclusive negotiating rights for development for nine months, and during that time it will have to come up with a feasible project.

Before MUDA was finally approved as developer, it would have to have contracts with the agency, authority and Marin Development Association, formerly California Development Corp., reported Donald O. Stutsman, executive director.

Before the vote, Thelma McKinney, an MUDA director, said: "Give us a chance. We've been stalemated all these years. Why not let us try?"

She said there had been two community meetings on the matter and the majority of people there were for having MUDA become the developer. "It's the consensus of the community to go along."

Ulysses J. Montgomery, a San Francisco urban consultant working for MUDA, said preliminary approval would put the corporation in a position where it would have to "put up or shut up."

Norman B. Campbell, a housing authority director, described the action as giving a "nine-month option of time to MUDA to come up with an acceptable project."

Mill Valley Sets Sailing Class Repeat

The third session of sailing lessons sponsored by the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department will begin Monday and run through July 31. Classes will be held at 10 a.m. for beginners and noon for intermediates.

Registration for the lessons will be taken at the community recreation center, Camino Alto and East Blithedale Avenue.

Stutsman recommended approval, noting there was little chance for successful development without substantial participation by Marin City residents.

He acknowledged there has been concern whether MUDA adequately represents Marin City, but said the firm has nine months to convince the "people of Marin City they represent them or they will fail."

Frank Phillips Sr., an MUDA director, said the firm will solicit membership from all sectors of the community. "We're trying to get the community involved," he said. "We're asking for nine months. Give us a chance."

Director Collie B. Gaines said that all MUDA meetings should be announced in advance, open to the public and held in a public place. C. J. Williams, another director of the nonprofit group, said the intent is to have meetings once a month with advance notice to the public.

MUDA has seven directors, appointed by the Marin City Council last October, and Montgomery said an election will be held, probably before October, to broaden membership.

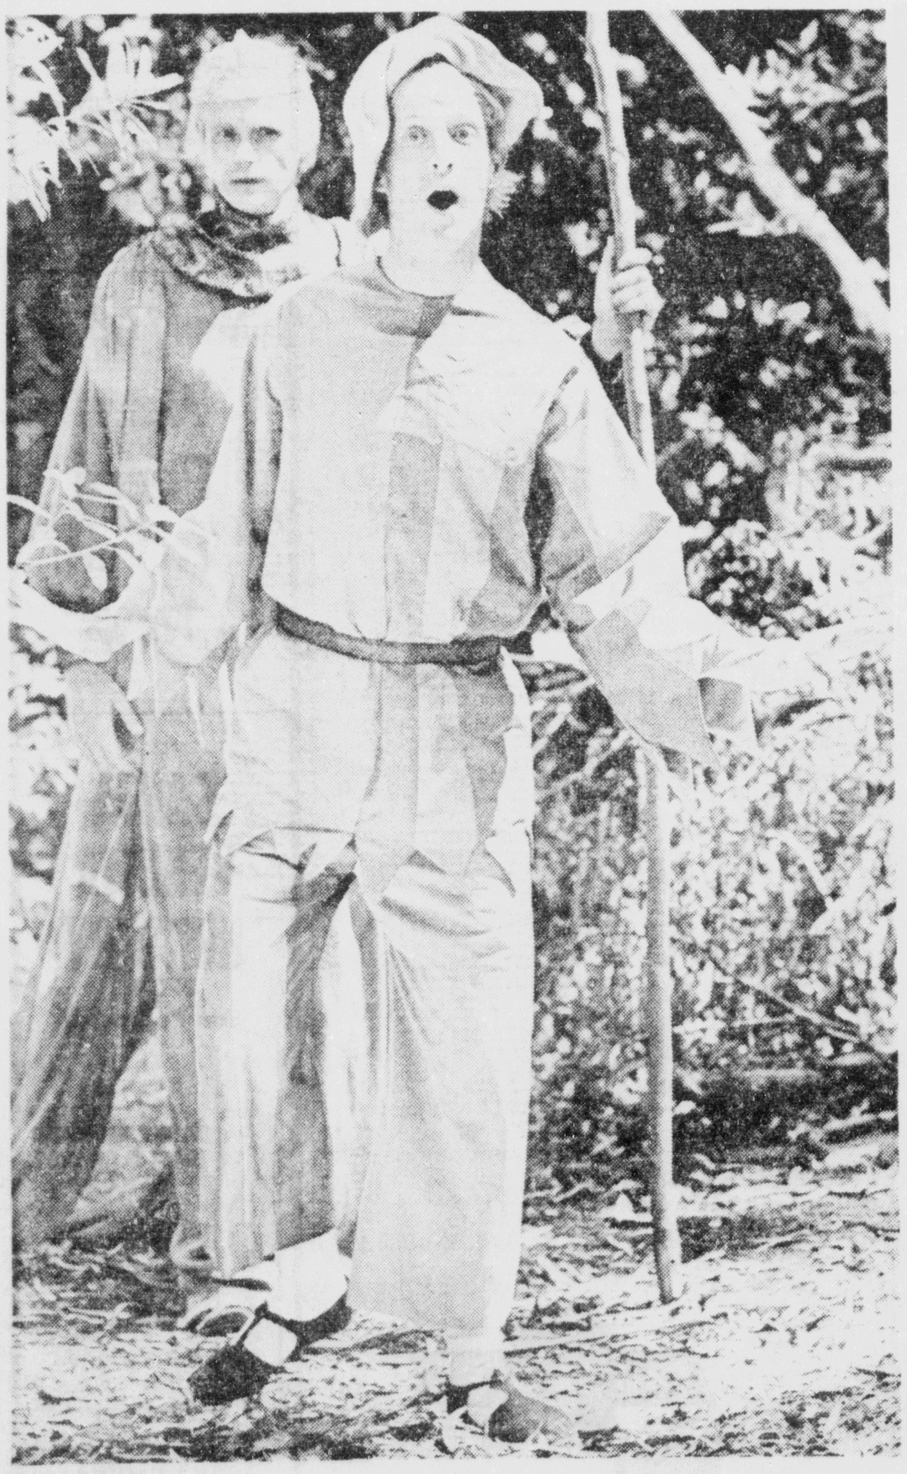
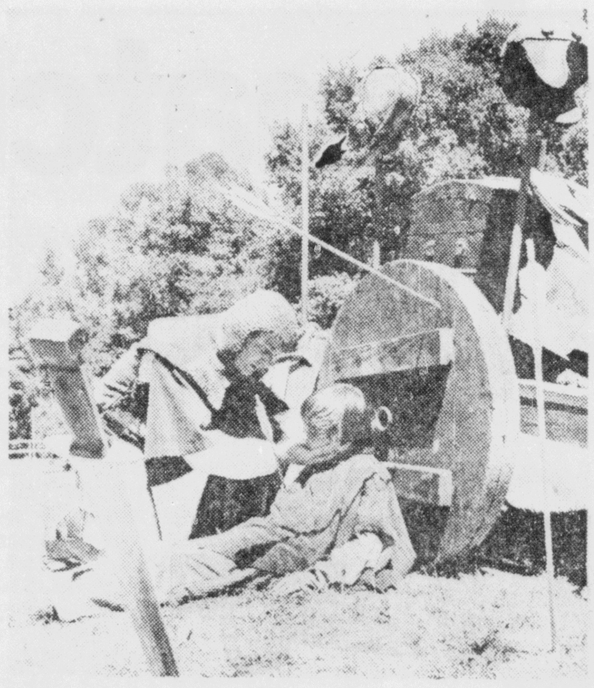
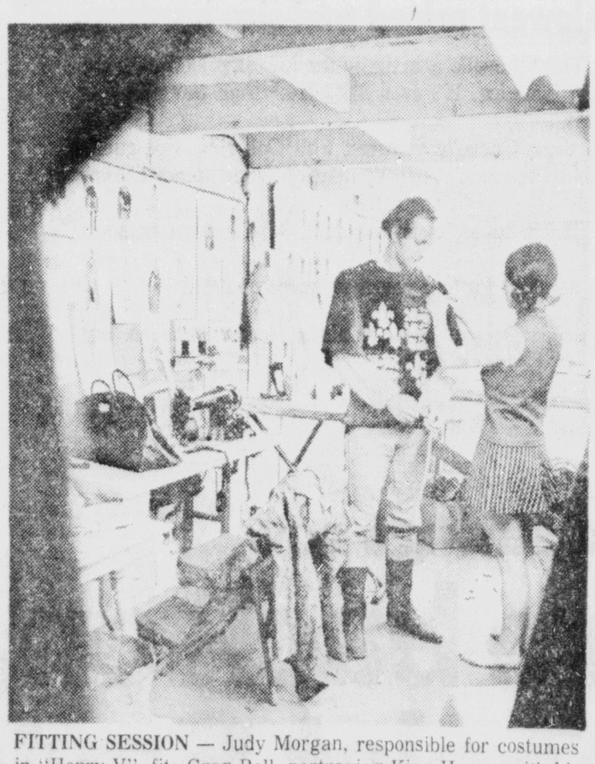
LEADING PLAYERS — Dudley Knight as Prospero in "The Tempest" tells Janie Atkins, portraying Miranda, his daughter, of the storm he has created.



SURPRISE MEETING — Terrence Cahalan, portraying Tinculo, a shipwrecked and bewildered clown, is startled by the appearance of Prospero, portrayed by Dudley Knight.



SLAIN BOY — In rehearsal for "Henry V", Sandy Brebner plays a slain baggage boy being examined by Greg Bell, protraying King Henry, after the battle of Agincourt.



FITTING SESSION — Judy Morgan, responsible for costumes in "Henry V", fits Greg Bell, portraying King Henry, with his heraldic suncoat which will identify him for his soldiers at the battle of Agincourt.

SEA NYMPHS — Gonzalo, portrayed by James Haran, is shown with Ariel's sea nymphs after the shipwreck in "The Tempest."

FIRST CRACK IN IMPASSE?

Underground Freeway Idea To Link West Bay Spans

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN LEANDRO — The first possible break in San Francisco's long war against new freeways appeared last night with a proposal by its planning director for a "basically underground" freeway between the Golden Gate and Bay bridges.

Allan B. Jacobs proposed a tunnel from the Presidio under the Marina Green, Fort Mason, Russian and Telegraph hills and the Embarcadero, surfacing at the foot of Howard Street to connect with the Southern Embarcadero Freeway.

The existing elevated Embarcadero Freeway would have to be torn down before construction could begin on the new link, Jacobs said in his presentation to the Association of Bay Area Governments regional transportation planning committee.

The committee, at the request of the state, has been attempting to mediate the freeway impasse. San Francisco and state officials have not even been able to talk with one another about the "freeway revolt" for several years.

Some idea of the cost, however, was given in a letter in April to the committee from Alan S. Hart, head of the state Division of Highways' district office in San Francisco — perhaps $350 million.

Hart said that the total cost of an underground freeway linking the two bridges, according to state estimates in the mid-1960s, approached $300 million "using the least costly combination of alternatives."

The precise figure was $284 million for the 3.5-mile freeway, or some $81 million a mile. Hart noted that costs have inflated at least 12 per cent since the estimates were made.

In addition, he noted, the old estimate for demolishing the Embarcadero Freeway was $5 million, plus $39 million to replace it with an underground freeway.

The state's proposal for a conventional freeway at the time was figured to cost $110 million, according to Hart.

Jacobs stressed that his proposal was not yet endorsed officially by the city, but he predicted the approach would win endorsement by the planning commission. Many residents would favor it, too, he said, "though I could be wrong — I have been before."

The chairman of the ABAG committee, Marin County Supervisor John F. McInnis, urged Jacobs to get the endorsement by the planning commision so the committee can ask the state to update its cost estimates.

McInnis pointed out that the extra cost of undergrounding the freeway would be borne by all nine counties in the Bay Area "because there is only so much highway money in the region."

Quickly praising Jacobs' proposal was the head of the state Office of Transportation Planning and Research, Charles G. Beer. "We're really happy to see San Francisco willing to reexamine the situation," Beer said.

Jacobs stressed that he saw the freeway not as a link between the bridges, but as a distributor to San Francisco's downtown. Through traffic is not a significant amount of the total traffic entering San Francisco, he said.

The capacity of the new freeway should be tied to "existing capacity constraints" on the Golden Gate Bridge, Jacobs said. "We do not desire a second deck for automobiles to be constructed on the Golden Gate Bridge," he declared.

Rail rapid transit from Marin should be in operation by the time the new freeway opens, Jacobs said.

"I am sure that a constructive agreement to this problem can evolve," Jacobs told the committee.

Day Center Plans Win Novato Nod

The Novato Plan Review Committee last night approved architectural and site plans for the Dolphin Club Child Day Care Center at 1900 Novato Boulevard, according to Secretary Juanita Gibson.

The Committee followed Tuesday night's council action and asked for plans for fencing and landscaping of the grounds — desiged to minimize noise.

The Novato Plan Review Committee also:

APARTMENT — Approved plans for a 20-unit apartment to be constructed on Diablo Avenue north of Hill Road by Ferndale Investment Co.

LANDSCAPING — Approved landscaping plans and sign for the Novato Center Building at Grant Avenue and Fifth Street for Sanco Investment Co.

SIGN — Approved a sign for David Young for Young Brothers Mobile Home Sales on Highway 101 north of Olive Avenue, if its size is reduced 20 per cent.

Supervisorial Staff Selects Bargain Agent

Marin County's mid-management employees, those directly under department heads and assistants, voted by a 3-1 margin yesterday to have the Marin County Employees Association speak for them in future contract negotiations.

The vote came in the wake of a decision by the board of supervisors last month to grant only token raises — and in some cases no raises at all — to employees in supervisorial position.

Of the 76 mid-management employees eligible to vote, 58 cast ballots. Forty-two voted to have the Marin County Employees Association speak for them. Only 14 voted for the Marin Managerial Employees Association, and two wanted no representation.

The managerial employees association was formed about a year ago, with S. W. Eason of the assessor's office as president. Eason said today his group will meet at noon Monday to decide whether the organization should dissolve as a result of yesterday's vote.

Of the county's 1,250 employees, only 70 or 75 now remain unrepresented by any bargaining unit. These are department heads, their assistants, and those having confidential relationships with the board of supervisors, such as secretaries of the board and the county administrator's staff.

Randall M. Prevo, manager of the Marin County Employees Association, said his organization now speaks for about 1,050 of the total county work force of 1,250.

Novato District Gives Contract For Fire Hose

The Novato fire district board last night awarded a $9,248 contract to American Rubber Co. of Oakland, lowest of three bidders, for new fire hose, according to Fire Chief Jack Kidder.

The board also approved the annual agreement to purchase gasoline through Marin County at 21.20 cents per gallon for ethyl gasoline and 14.8 cents per gallon for diesel fuel. Last year the district used 5,528 gallons of gasoline and 438 gallons of diesel fuel, Kidder said.

The board adjourned to 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the main fire station.

Sonoma Fair Gives Ribbons For 4-H Nature Exhibits

Winners in the Sonoma County Fair 4-H Club forestry and wildlife divisions have been announced and include several entrants from Marin and Southern Sonoma.

Forestry projects were judged for educational value, appearance, workmanship and quality. Alan Thomas of Novato received one first and one second place award, as did Paul Frederick of Lagunitas and Debra Geils of Petaluma.

First place awards were won by Todd Horick of Point Reyes and James Pruett, Brad Simpkins and Pamela Allen of Petaluma. Sam Wenger of Petaluma won two second place awards, and Roger Horick of Point Reyes won one.

Wildlife exhibits demonstrating food habits, habitat, life cycles, physical structure and other attributes of wildlife were judged on the criteria of educational and scientific value, appearance, workmanship, interest and objectives.

Richard Eldon Brecker of Point Reyes won two first place awards, and Pamela Allen of Petaluma won one first and one second. Mark Geils, Byron C. Geils, Robert Matteri and George Geils of Petaluma and Terri Levstik and Mary Beth Levstik of Novato won first place awards.

Arrests In San Rafael Tied To Forgery Ring

Three Oakland men arrested Tuesday in San Rafael have been identified by Oakland police as part of a check-forging ring that in three years bilked banks and credit card firms in the Bay Area of several hundred thousand dollars.

The three were held in Marin County Jail for a time then transferred to Oakland City Jail yesterday to be booked on suspicion of attempted forgery and possession of a forged check.

The San Rafael arrests were followed by seven arrests in Oakland, and Oakland police Sgt. Terrence Green said that up to 15 arrests over the past few days in Yuba City, Los Angeles and Portland, Ore., may have been connected with the ring.

Green said the group is believed to have organized similar rings in Seattle, Miami, Houston and Birmingham.

He identified the ring leaders as Ernest L. Knox, 24, and Carl Sampson, 25, both of Oakland. Knox was arrested Tuesday evening at his Oakland home and booked on suspicion of forgery, possession of forged checks and identification cards and possesion of marijuana and stolen property.

Sampson was booked on suspicion of forgery and conspiracy to pass forged checks.

Lt. Jess Spillner, who heads the Oakland Police Department's forgery-fraud detail, said the ring used identification cards stolen in burglaries and mail thefts to open checking accounts in banks.

Once an account was established, he continued, it could be increased with forged checks before withdrawals were made. Purchases would be made and paid for with credit cards for a month and then large purchases would be made just before the card holder vanished, police added.

Action Urged For Use Of Cascade Dam

Six measures designed to permit continued use of Mill Valley's Cascade Reservoir were proposed last night by the city's youth commission, vice chairman Carol Prichard reported.

The list will be sent to the city council, which will consider an emergency ordinance establishing a no-trespassing zone at the controversial mountain reservoir when it meets Monday.

The commission asked the council to:

1. Extend the tow-away zone on Cascade Drive to Cascade Park and along Lovell Avenue.
2. Ask Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., to install a public telephone near the dam.
3. Place a sign prohibiting autos beyond Cascade Park.
4. Provide sanitary facilities.
5. Place signs warning of the critical fire danger and asking users to respect the area.
6. Build a restraining fence on the creek side of the dam to prevent persons from falling off.

A motion to approve the measures was made by chairman George Kewin and carried with only Miss Prichard dissenting. She said they would not solve the health hazard posed by swimming in the reservoir.

The commission also heard a report that no work has been done on a shed for a proposed bicycle repair shop at the Mill Valley Drop-In House. Kewin said he would look for another site.

Commissioners elected Kewin as chairman, Miss Prichard, vice chairman, and David Abrahams, secretary.

San Rafael Teen Arrested On Drug Suspicion

A San Rafael youth, allegedly wielding a knife, was arrested last night in Petaluma after residents said he tried to force his way into three houses and a car.

Neal Kenneth Rhoades, 18, of 241 Union Street, Apt. 8, was arrested on suspicion of being under the influence of drugs and was admitted to Community Hospital of Sonoma County for psychiatric examination.

Police said he attempted to cut a screen door at the home of Donald R. Kuyat, 414 Galland Street, at 9:19 p.m. and attempted to break into the home of Malcolm H. Burnett, 803 West Street at 9:29 p.m. and of Carl Burgland, 817 West Street, at 9:34 p.m.

Police said that earlier he had approached a car being driven by Donald Shields, 5 Cader Court, Petaluma, in the 800 block of West Street and slashed at the vehicle with a knife.

Budget Meet Tonight

The Gallinas Village Community Services District board has scheduled an adjourned meeting for 8 p.m. today at the recreation center at the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church for final consideration of its $27,500 budget and for discussion of the summer recreation program, according to secretary Marguerite F. Clark.

WINNING BRIDGE

Too Much Of A Good Thing Can Be A Tragedy In Bridge

There are two basic tragedies in life: not getting what you want, and getting it. I refer, of course, to life at the bridge table, where what you want is oodles and oodles of high cards. In today's hand, East's tragedy is that he got what he wanted.

OUTCOME SURPRISING

West led the six of spades, and East won the first trick with the jack. East continued with the ace and queen of spades, forcing out the king. East thought he was going to defeat the contract, but the outcome surprised him, as Jeremy Flint points out in his excellent new book "Tiger Bridge."

South led a club to the jack and returned a low diamond to try a finesse with the queen. East had been delighted to find the king of diamonds in his hand when he first picked up his cards, but he would have been even more delighted to give the king to his partner in exchange for any low card.

Swapping cards in the middle of the play is frowned upon, so South won the finesse with the queen of diamonds. Now he was sure of five clubs, two diamonds and a spade. The ninth trick was not far behind.

RUNS CLUBS

South ran the rest of the clubs, reducing all hands to four cards. East would have been delighted to give his partner the king of hearts, for then East could have reduced to A-x of hearts and K-x of diamonds. West could win the first heart trick and lead the ten of diamonds to set up a diamond trick.

TRAGEDY HITS

East's tragedy was that he held both the ace and king of hearts. His last four cards had to be both top hearts and the K-7 of diamonds. South thereupon led a heart, giving East two heart tricks but forcing him to lead diamonds away from the king.

As long as either way is tragic, I'd rather get the high cards. Pick your own poison.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - K 10 2
♥ - J 10 9
♦ - A Q 8 2
♣ - K 8 3.
What do you say!

ANSWER: Bid one diamond. You have 13 points in high cards, enough for an optional opening bid. You choose to bid rather than pass because the high-card structure is fairly good and because you have two tenspots, a nine and two eights to give the hand a little body.

Catholic Group Asks Juvenile Help Grant

The Marin Catholic Social Service has applied for a $101,000 federal grant to finance a three-year juvenile delinquency prevention program in the county.

The five-man team that would be formed would focus on the social and personal needs and problems of youth and try to set up concrete programs to meet the needs, according to the agency.

ALMANAC

Today is Thursday, July 16, the 197th day of 1970 with 168 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

On this date in history:

In 1790 Congress set up the District of Columbia as the permanent seat of the United States government.

In 1969 Apollo 11 blasted off from Cape Kennedy with three astronauts aboard headed for the moon.

A thought for the day: Christian Science founder Mary Baker Eddy said, "Divine love always has met and always will meet every human need."

Planners Seek Larkspur Report

After a long discussion what constitutes an enclosed structure, the Larkspur Planning Commission has directed planning staff to prepore a report redefining the term for the July 28 meeting.

The definition is required, secretary Barbara Bruton reported, because certain uses in various zones of the city can only be conducted in enclosed structures.

The commission, meeting Tuesday, postponed to July 28 an application by the Tamalpais, 501 Via Casitas, for a fence, and discussions on architectural and parking policies and a drainage ordinance.

Independent Learning Systems Grows At Professional Center

A new organization that has established headquarters in Marin County and in the three months since its incorporation has taken over almost the entire Professional Center at 18 Professional Parkway, San Rafael with a staff of 60 persons is Independent Learning Systems, Inc.

Headed by Sidney R. Wilson of San Anselmo, a former senior vice president of Massey-Ferguson Corp. of Toronto, Canada, Independent Learning Systems is engaged in developing methods of instructional technology — or individualized instruction — at all school levels. Initially it has four courses ready for validation at the freshman level in about 30 colleges and universities. Its announced goal is to systematize some 350 courses in upwards of 100 institutions, assuring graduation of any student over a four-year period of learning.

In September, Independent Learning will move into the elementary field by opening a private school in Terra Linda. Later it plans to enter the high school level.

According to Wilson, there are about 50 organizations in the country specializing in instructional technology. He says some 14 of these are similar to Independent Learning Systems and have been successful in other parts of the country.

Associated with Wilson as vice presidents are John Loehr and Donald Tosti, who are trained specialists in experimental psychology and behavioral science respectively.

One of the principal reasons for establishing headquarters in Marin County was simply that Wilson, Loehr and Tosti wanted to live here.

STARTING THIS SUNDAY (July 19), the Emporium at the Northgate Mall will join six other Emporium suburban stores in Northern California to open every Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. The Emporium store in downtown San Francisco will remain closed on Sundays.

CABINETMAKER OTTO SCHRIER has finally moved his shop and business from San Francisco to 469 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley, after buying the building here well over a year ago. He is already a Mill Valley resident — and this saves him further commuting.

Much of the building has been remodeled and Schrier has leased out part of the space. Some additional space at street level (both front and rear) is still up for lease.

U.S. Steel Loses Tax Refund Bid

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge has rejected a bid by U.S. Steel Corp. for a record tax refund of $35 million.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Richard Levet Tuesday climaxed a suit in progress for five years.

Levet ruled that U.S. Steel was entitled only to recover some $950,000 in tax refunds for the year 1949. It had sought an additional $34 million for the two preceding years.

At the same time, Levet's decision set the stage for the government to require U.S. Steel to pay an additional $200-million in taxes and interest for the years 1951 and 1953 when an excess profits tax was in effect.

Taxpayers' Protest Brings A Promising Development

When Marin's hastily formed Citizens Committee To Lower the Cost of Government called late last month for a mass turnout to urge county supervisors to hold the line on expenses, one sentence in its call said: "Maybe this will be the beginning of a county-wide, state-wide, even a nation-wide trend to 'hold the line' on government expenditures."

That may have been wishful thinking. But the idea did catch hold immediately in neighboring Sonoma County.

There, the Irate Taxpayers Committee and Sonoma County Taxpayers Association called for a similar turnout, for the same purpose. Last Friday, some 1,000 "straight citizens" showed up at the courthouse in Santa Rosa to confront the supervisors with the same hold-the-line plea voiced in Marin.

NEITHER TURNOUT accomplished its immediate purpose, but both may have started something.

The best the Marin protesters could achieve was decision by the supervisors to cancel planned pay increases for department heads — a decision, incidentally, which might be changed later on if the protesters become less watchful.

The Sonoma protest did a little better. Sonoma County supervisors agreed to review next year's budget in detail with a citizen committee, before taking up its adoption. Organizations represented in the protest throng were promised memberships on the committee.

THERE ARE PLENTY of pitfalls in this kind of approach to budgeting. To begin with, naming a representative citizen committee is a difficult task. All sorts of special interest groups demand representation. Each then brings along its private axe, for grinding at the expense of everyone else. As a result, the committee is likely to get bogged down in wrangling.

It's worth that chance, though. If the appointing body (in this case, the Sonoma County supervisors) bears in mind where the demand came from and makes sure the committee represents that demand, it may accomplish a good deal.

THE EXPLANATIONS (we won't call them alibis) given the protesters in Sonoma and Marin counties were much alike. For the most part, they consisted of the well-worn "I didn't do it; he did" — he, in this case, being the state or federal government. Higher echelons traditionally get the blame.

A really conscientious citizen committee, however, might find that some of the costs "mandated" by state and federal governments are not mandated at all. Some of them are programs into which the county (or the city or the school district) has been drawn by alluring promises of state and/or federal aid — only to find itself later bearing most of the cost.

A really conscientious citizen committee also might take a little different — and a little more practical — look at the productivity of work forces in various departments than the governing body is likely to get from the hired administrators on whom it tends to depend too heavily.

IT'S WORTH a try. The way taxes are going, anything with any chance of curbing them is worth a try.

We commend the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors on its decision to share budgeting with a citizen committee. The Marin County supervisors, and the boards of the cities and districts within Marin and Sonoma, might do well to follow that lead.

Second Batch

Most robins are migratory. But some know a good place when they see it. This latter minority has given up its migratory habits and has become a small group of resident robins, nesting here and living in Marin the year round.

One such robin couple is raising its second brood this summer in a nest in a pear tree where we can keep close watch on it from our house. We thought we were seeing things when the robins started nesting again. Less than six weeks ago they were anxiously feeding a stubby-tailed fledging, that was trying its unsteady wings in the garden.

However, an ornithologist friend tells us that two broods a year are not at all uncommon. Perhaps not having to migrate gives our robins a head start.

Court, Voiding Two-Thirds Rule, Digs Up Disquieting History

By JACK COOPER

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Everybody knows about the little boy who refused the big book the librarian offered, on the suspicion it probably contained a lot more about frogs than he really wanted to know.

This department recently touched on the California Supreme Court's decision that local bond issues could be enacted on a simple, rather than a two-thirds majority.

Then, not being as practical as the little boy, it continued to leaf through the text of the decision, finding some rather coincidental items in a pretty thorough research job by the court.

AT THE RISK of telling its readers more than they may want to know, it is going to go ahead and disgorge what it learned.

California's original constitution in 1849 did not have any two-thirds rule, but it did authorize the legislature to regulate cities' powers "of borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit, so as to prevent abuses."

Apparently this did not keep municipalities from taking on more debt than they could handle, with casual authorization from the legislature, and ballooning municipal debt was a large factor in the panic of the 1870s.

Usually the state (and not only California) took over and folded up the municipal enterprises at great cost.

"THE BUBBLE burst in the 1870s as California followed the rest of the nation into a severe financial depression," the court decision says. "Banks collapsed, the securities market declined, municipalities defaulted on their bonds, businesses closed and trade stagnated.

"As foreclosures and unemployment mounted, thousands drifted from the farms to the cities, vainly seeking work. The general mood was one of disillusionment and anger and the state was swept by radical political movements.

"It was thus in an atmosphere of economic and political crisis that the delegates to the Constitutional Convention set to work in 1878."

One of the results was the two-thirds rule.

ELSEWHERE in a foot note, the court said, "One commentator has noted that 'much of the overextended municipal debt of the mid-nineteenth century stemmed from the excessive zeal of local communities for transportation links, particularly for rail development.'"

The court mentions an act passed by the Legislature in 1866, authorizing the City of Petaluma, without any popular vote at all, to issue $500,000 in bonds to build "locks, dams, and canals on the Petaluma Creek and to collect tolls from the vessels which it was anticipated would use the network."

The Petaluma merchant marine never developed, but the episode ought to be celebrated as an example of the ordinary politicians' aptitude for economics. The laws of economics are beyond their capacity to repeal, but they keep trying.

TRY AND STOP ME

Dangers In Home Delivery Of Baby

The Public Health Department is perceiving a rather startling increase in babies being delivered in their home. The young mother should be aware that there are certain risks involved for herself and her child. It is a state law at the present time that all children at birth have a blood test which would indicate whether or not they have Phenylketonuria (PKU). This is a defect present at birth which if not discovered and treated early causes retardation. . .

In an age when venereal disease has increased to such proportions, if a mother should have gonorrhea the child passing through the infected birth canal is in danger of developing a severe eye infection which may lead to blindness. This is the reason that preventative "drops" are placed in every child's eyes at birth. Syphillis of course passes through the placenta to the child and early recognition and treatment are vital, moreover the mother should have a blood test.

If a mother is RH positive and the father RH negative the mother will build antibodies against subsequent children following the birth of a first child. This will result in destruction of the red blood cells of the child with resultant jaundice. The child may die, have motor difficulty or be mentally retarded. . .

In addition to PKU there are other inborn errors of metabolism detected only by the experienced eye of a physician together with certain specific laboratory procedures.

I think that we will see even a greater rise in home deliveries and I feel that the above facts should be brought before all young parents-to-be.

Better Places To Spend $30,000

A few days ago my letter expressing dismay at the action of the board of supervisors in granting a subsidy of $15,000 to the Marin Chamber of Commerce was published. My letter was written and mailed on the day the supervisors took this action. My dismay was doubled when I read the I-J the next day and learned that the subsidy was to be returned to the full $30,000 requested.

The chamber of commerce probably does a good job for the private profit of those whom it serves. Why do these not pay the upkeep? In this year of tight budgets, why was there a proposal to "save" $18,000 by eliminating the mini-film unit for chest x-rays when these x-rays are required by law or ordinance for many occupations? This move was defeated, but there will now be a charge for these required films, and we will all recall that this minifilm equipment was a gift to the people of Marin County from the Marin Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association.

This $30,000 subsidy to a private group could well apply to a transportation system. That is a desperate need for all the citizens of Marin. There are so many places for $30,000. Another place is right in the pockets of the 50 to 60 homeowners whose taxes make up that sum.

Reagan Vs. Bureaucracy In Welfare Showdown

(Reprinted from Oakland Tribune)

It would not be accurate to suggest hat Gov. Ronald Reagan has taken on the entire United States government, or even the Nixon administration portion thereof.

He has, however, attacked with harsh and vigorous words a sizeable segment of that vast bureaucracy that exists in self-perpetuating obliviousness along the banks of the Potomac.

Specifically, the governor's target is that tunnel-visioned band of paper-shufflers in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that he says wants a strangle-hold control on all manner of state welfare activity.

A HIGH LEVEL HEW official has threatened to cut off some $1 billion in welfare aid that the Federal Government annually sends to California.

It is alleged that somehow or other this state is short-changing certain of its welfare recipients by not keeping aid to dependent children payments (ADFC) up to a certain federally prescribed standard.

If the state fails to comply with the federal rules, the withdrawal of most federal funds is threatened.

YET, AS THE governor has pointed out, "California already leads the nation in the size and scope of its total social service health care and welfare programs."

Nearly 20 years ago, the Legislature established a set of sound procedures for making welfare payments, but evidently these are no longer acceptable to a bureaucracy 3,000 miles distant that anoints itself the sole judge of how welfare should be disbursed.

The federal orders-givers reflect obvious disdain for any state's efforts to control welfare give-away abuses or to keep payments within range of the taxpayers' ability to supply the funds.

The federal claim that California is unfairly depriving welfare recipients becomes patently ridiculous when comparisons are made between the state's welfare payments and national averages.

IN CALIFORNIA, welfare recipients under the ADFC program receive an average of $53 monthly while nationally the average is $45. Although the state ranks 11th among all states in the average amount paid under ADFC, this still is not enough to satisfy Washington.

In other important welfare efforts, California ranks first or second among all states in payments to the blind, aged and disabled welfare recipients.

As the governor has suggested, the "threat" to cut off the bulk of federal welfare aid to California is obviously empty and impractical.

HIS PLAN to follow all appeal procedures, and even to take the matter to the courts if necessary, hopefully will convince the power-grabbing bureaucrats of the soundness of the California position long before any critical impasse is reached.

The alternative is abject submission to the unreasonable federal order — at an annual cost to the state's taxpayers estimated to be no less than $100 million.

Canada Breaking With Past Behind Leadership Of Trudeau

OTTAWA, Canada — The interim report of a special commission on the use of drugs recommended recently a drastic liberalization of present laws. Specifically, the report of the Ledain Commission set up by the government proposed that possession and use of mind-altering drugs — marijuana, hashish, amphetamines, LSD — no longer be a crime subject to imprisonment.

The parliament may not in the end adopt the commission's recommendations, which stirred the inevitable controversy. But study of the uses and abuses of drugs is part of the Canadian effort to come to terms with the realities of today's world.

PRIME MINISTER Pierre Elliott Trudeau has given the lead. He believes the young should be heard with understanding and concern. What they are saying about the values — or the lack of values — must be heeded. Trudeau is at his best in the give-and-take of a session with college students, whether in Manitoba or Malaysia.

Because young Americans evading the draft have taken refuge in Canada, there has been sharp criticism in the United States of certain Canadian policies. Exaggerated reports have pictured Canada as a haven welcoming thousands of young Americans escaping military service each year. The total fleeing across the border has been put at 20,000 annually.

Allan J. Maceachen, minister of manpower and immigration, said in parliament not long ago that the number of American draft evaders is unquestionably much smaller than the figures currently used. He was replying to a question put by former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, who called for the number of Americans between the ages of 19 and 20 who had entered Canada beginning in January, 1969.

The only figure Maceachen could supply was for Americans in that age bracket applying for landed immigrant status. The total for 1969 was 2,046, of whom more than half were women. No attempt is made to check the military status of Americans crossing the border. This would be virtually impossible since there are estimated to be 35 million crossing each year.

The longest undefended border in the world has been the proud boast of the two nations that have lived at peace, side by side, for nearly two centuries. It is not only undefended but, given its length, only thinly policed.

Maceachen notes that during the 16 months while Canada was at war, beginning in 1939, and the United States was still at peace prior to Pearl Harbor, an undetermined number of Canadian deserters from the armed forces crossed into the United States. Nothing was done to prevent this movement or to arrest the deserters and return them to Canada. When three American deserters were apprehended by the Canadian Mounted Police and escorted across the border, a loud outcry came from many quarters. The Mounties had no business doing that.

TRUDEAU TALKS about the young with an informed familiarity growing out of innumerable encounters. He believes the outward manifestations, the long hair, the often freakish dress are not mere eccentricities but a form of protest against the rigidity, the compulsive conventionality, of much of contemporary life.

The prime minister is under no illusions about the pitfalls of too much permissiveness. Smoking pot is an indulgence that can be as self-destructive as the indulgence in alcohol or any other form of escapism. As the Ledain Commission report emphasized, far more research into the effect of mind-altering drugs is vital.

In many ways on the broad political front the Trudeau government is breaking with the past, long under the domination of U. S. policy. On Red China, Canada has been actively negotiating for an exchange of diplomatic missions with Peking. Minister of External Affairs Mitchell Sharp believes that when talks resume in Stockholm in the fall, agreement will be close. There are no illusions about what this will mean, since the limits put on other western embassies in Red China's capital are well known. But it is a step toward throwing off the dead hand of the past. That is the resolve behind much of what the Trudeau government is up to.

Italian Economy Breaking Down With Government

By PHIL NEWSOM UPI Foreign News Analyst

In Italy, the city of Rome teeters on the edge of bankruptcy, unable to meet its payroll except through fiscal sleight of hand.

In Naples, the city fathers withhold subsidies from the famous San Carlo Opera House and then place seals upon seats, sets and curtains because the opera owes $1,600 in back taxes.

Genoa's largest hospital postpones operations because the state-controlled health insurance system failed to provide funds for operating room supplies. Italians are warned of an economic recession and a tight money crisis, and then flock to the mountains and the beaches in record numbers.

Fiat locks its doors on 20,000 workers because it has no engines to put in its cars.

The country's 31st government since World War II falls.

PARTLY IT IS an Italian state of mind.

Partly it is the result of weak, left-of-center governments which, since 1962, have been promising much in the way of reforms and delivering little.

Partly it is the result of Italy's economic "miracle" of the last decade in which everyone wants a piece of the action.

When Premier Mariano Rumor surrendered his third government within the course of a year and seven months, it came as no great surprise.

WITHIN the government there were sharp differences between the Socialists and the Christian Democrats over a long list of reforms, and a question of cooperation with the communists. Factions divided the parties themselves — nine divisions within the Christian Democratic party alone.

Within the two rival Socalist parties there was bickering over a leftwing desire to ally with the Communists in two of the 15 new regional governments. Opposed were the Unitarian Socialists.

Hundreds of flash strikes had plagued the country during the 102 days of the Rumor government. A general strike called by the nation's three labor confederations for July 7 was canceled because the government's fall left the unions with nothing to strike against.

It had been scheduled as a demand for "social benefits," better housing, transport, hospital facilities and such, despite warnings the country could not afford the loss in man hours such a strike would entail.

In principle, the government has accepted all of these demands but has been hampered by empty coffers. Parliament now is discussing a bill that would raise exemptions for taxpayers with low incomes, another of the demands put forward by labor.

THERE IS NO doubt Italy is heading for economic trouble unless something is done.

The state's indebtedness went up $5 billion in 1969 and is expected to go up another $7 billion in 1970. Production, which was to go up 10 per cent to cover last fall's wage increases, is going up at an actual rate of 2.5 per cent.

And another weak and bickering government is not the answer.

ART BUCHWALD

Sex And Government: Not Very Much Of Either One

WASHINGTON — Mr. John Corry has written a piece in the July Harper's Magazine titled "Washington, Sex and Power." Corry's conclusions are that there is not so much sex in Washington as one might think, and while power acts as an aphrodisiac, more men in high positions get their kicks from politics than they do from bedfellows.

Corry says that Democrats are better Don Juans than Republicans, though some of the biggest lechers in Washington are middle-aged Republican conservatives, who were described by one hostess as "knee grabbers."

Corry says southerners are better at horsing around than northerners, and people who live in Georgetown are more interested in "what the kids are thinking" than having an affair with someone who lives in Bethesda, Md.

IT IS INTERESTING to note that at the very time Corry was doing research on his piece for Harper's a more in-depth study was being done by Prof. Heinrich Applebaum for the National Institute of Domestic Affairs, otherwise known as NIDA (pronounced either needa or neghda depending on how you feel at the time).

Professor Applebaum's study titled "Sex and the Washington Monument," has come up with some startling revelations.

For one thing, there hasn't been one illicit affair in Washington since the Nixon administration took over. This compares favorably with the Johnson administration when there were three and the Kennedy administration when there were four. (There were no statistics kept during the Eisenhower years.)

APPLEBAUM indicates that there are several reasons for the lack of hanky-panky during the present regime.

One is that Atty. Gen. John Mitchell's penchant for wiretapping has frightened off thousands of officials who had been thinking about it.

Another reason is the night sessions that the Senate has been forced to hold because of the debate on the Church-Cooper Amendment. Ironically, this would have been a perfect excuse for senators to engage in some extracurricular activity, except for the fact that they never knew when they would be called for a roll-call vote. It would be very hard to explain to their wives where they had been when the Washington Post reported the next morning that they were marked "absent."

Since this is an election year, House members have been so busy running for office they haven't had time to think about sex, Applebaum says. He also makes the point that most congressmen are so strapped for cash they would rather put money in their campaign fund than spend it on some young secretary or passionate constituent.

As for the executive branch, Applebaum's study revealed that Nixon appointees prefer watching spectator sports on TV rather than getting involved themselves.

ALSO, APPLEBAUM points out, Nixon administration officials have been so drained trying to get through to someone in the White House each day that they're not good for much except to head home and go right to sleep.

The press and TV corps in Washington might have gotten into trouble, Applebaum notes, except for Spiro Agnew. The only thing the vice president hasn't accused the press of, so far, is adultery. To keep Agnew from making such a charge, the entire membership of the National Press Club has taken a vow of chastity, which will remain in effect as long as the vice president is in office.

If there has been any talk of sex in Washington, it's come from the Pentagon. Every time someone in Congress tries to cut the military budget, everyone in the defense establishment starts screaming "rape."

Ex-Treasury Head's Oil Deals Disclosed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert B. Anderson made an agreement designed to pay him $900,000 from oil operations, just before becoming secretary of the Treasury in 1957, the Washington Post said today.

A copyrighted article, by Post staff writer Bernard D. Nossiter, said Anderson "completed a deal with some oil men" on June 14, 1957, less than three weeks before being confirmed as head of the Treasury during President Dwight D. Eisenhower's second term.

Nossiter described Anderson as "a central figure in policy-making to protect oil prices." He became a member of a Cabinet committee that recommended mandatory quotas on crude oil imports, imposed by Eisenhower in 1959, to keep foreign oil from flooding the U.S. market and driving down domestic prices.

The quota system has remained in effect and as recently as Wednesday, the House Ways and Means Committee voted to prevent the White House from switching to a tariff system without express congressional approval.

Nossiter said the alleged Anderson arrangement called for two payments of $450,000 each.

Nossiter said Anderson told him — and "the records confirm this" — he never received anywhere near the full $900,000. Nossiter said records indicated Anderson received, through 1963, a total of about $290,000.

Nossiter said that "one account of the transaction says the deal was initiated to enable Anderson to replace Vice President Richard M. Nixon on the 1956 Republican ticket." Anderson refused to discuss whether he was considered by Eisenhower as his 1956 running mate.

Anderson was quoted by Nossiter as saying the arrangement was an "ordinary, normal" affair, in which he sold an interest in some leases.

As for a direct interest in oil prices while secretary, Anderson was quoted: "Frankly, it never crossed my mind. I always regarded it (the money he received) as a fixed amount."

House Panel Charts A New Trade Route

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee has charted a new trade route for the United States which would cut back imports of products ranging from aprons to Russian mink stoles. It would be a significant departure from the nation's open door trade policy of nearly 40 years.

The committee reached approval of the first trade bill in eight years Wednesday, subject only to formal approval when technicians return after drafting the legal language July 28.

In its deliberations Wednesday, the committee voted to block President Nixon from replacing the system of oil import quotas with a tariff system as recommended by a presidential task force. The task force said tariffs could reduce the price of oil and gasoline.

The panel also agreed to extend the embargo on fur skins from Russia and China to include finished fur coats.

This would mean a firm would have to buy mink, ermine, muskrat or other skins from countries other than the Soviet Union or Mainland China before shipping coats to the United States.

The United States has been on a reciprocal trade policy since 1934, and if the committee bill becomes law, it would be a major departure from that policy.

Generally, most ways and means bills emerge from Congress virtually intact, the way they were drafted during committee sessions.

The Senate is expected to treat the measure favorably, perhaps adding even more import quotas on such products as steel or trucks. Twice before, the Senate has approved textile import quotas.

The oil and mink decisions were reached after the committee earlier had decided to impose mandatory quotas on shoes and noncotton textiles. The panel also voted the President discretionary authority to impose quotas on any product when imports increase sharply and significantly penetrate U.S. markets.

Free trade advocates contend quotas will drive up consumer prices. This is disputed, particularly by friends of quotas, notably O. R. Strackbein, head of the Nationwide Committee of Import-Export Policy, who contends a recent study shows prices of goods with quota restrictions have not risen as sharply as unrestricted goods in the last 10 years.

The Nixon Administration has agreed reluctantly only to quotas on textiles in an effort to pressure Japan to come to a voluntary agreement to limit their sales.

Under the shoe textile provision, a voluntary agreement would supersede any mandatory quotas.

Under the quota bill, shoes and textiles would be cut back by one third or more to average what imports were in the three-year period between 1967 and 1969. Cotton textiles already are covered by an international agreement.

A number of administration spokesman recently have cautioned against imposition of import quotas which could lead to retaliation against U.S. products — notably farm goods — sold overseas.

Organized labor generally supports the quota legislation, contending U.S. jobs are threatened by foreign goods.

The most recent administration spokesman announcing his opposition was secretary of State William P. Rogers, who said he hoped the House and Senate would modify the bill during floor debate.

Other administration officials expressing concern or outright opposition to quotas include Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin, Assistant Attorney General Richard McLaren and Paul McCracken, chairman of the council of economic advisers.

Reed Board Lists Post's Applicants

A screening committee for a new Reed School District superintendent has prepared a list of applicants for the post and recommended that the district board hold interviews July 25.

Acting Supt. Stanley H. Friese said the committee's report will be considered by the board when it meets Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Del Mar School.

The committee met in closed session Tuesday to review the 35 applicants for the post. Friese declined to release the names of the applicants or discolse the number still being considered.

HAPPY OUTING ENDS IN GRIM TRAGEDY

Group Pushes Master Plan On Ridgelands

Directors of the Alto-Sutton Manor District association last night urged the Mill Valley planning commission to develop a master plan for the city's ridgelands.

Publicity chairman Sara S. Ruffner said the board made the request in answer to the commission's criticism of the city council's rejection of plans by Cal-Fong Investment Co. for a 120-unit cottage development in Alto Bowl.

"We felt we could avoid problems like this in the future with a master plan rather than relying on piecemeal planning," Mrs. Ruffner said.

The board also authorized chairman John A. Walters to ask the state division of highways to establish a no-stopping zone on East Blithedale Avenue at Tower Drive. Mrs. Ruffner said several residents have complained of near collisions at the corner as cars stop to pick up hitchhikers.

The board set its next meeting for Aug. 19 at 8 p.m. at Walter's Home, 26 Plaza Drive.

Tiburon Pay Hike Decision Not Yet Actually Reached

Across-the-board pay raises of 5 per cent for all city employees were not approved in principle by the Tiburon City Council Monday, as reported in Tuesday's Independent-Journal.

Consideration of the salary hike was postponed until July 27 and, although city staff was directed to prepare paperwork needed to grant the raise, discussion of the proposal is yet to take place.

The 5 per cent raise is the proposal of the finance and administration committee, made up of Mayor Denis T. Rice and Councilman Albert H. Sennett. The committee also recommended that City Mgr. Lawrence D. Rose be given an increase of $930 yearly in his car allowance.

Another councilman, Anne L. Ellinwood, said yesterday that "I feel an upward revision of all (salary) ranges by 5 per cent, together with the 5 per cent step increases which I anticipate will be included in the budget, should be subjected to the most careful of scrutiny."

"I object to the use of an increased car allowance to avoid increasing the city manager's salary," she said. "If this proposal comes to a vote, I shall not vote affirmatively."

Injuries Corrected

Florence L. Nestel, 50, of 25 Alvarado Avenue, Mill Valley, injured in an accident on Highway 101 in Corte Madera June 28, was treated at Marin General Hospital for facial cuts and back sprain. The Independent-Journal report of the accident did not mention her injuries.

WARNING BY PROFESSOR:

Americans Becoming Dehumanized

By LARRY MOWELL

Like Dr. Frankenstein, the United States is building "monsters" in the name of science for Vietnam that are turning on its people. A University of California professor told an audience at the Marin Community Mental Health Center last night.

Dr. Marc Pilisuk, of the university's department of social welfare, noted that tiger cages penning prisoners in Vietnam shocked a Senate fact-finding committee "and then a few days later Sen. Mondale (Walter F., D-Minn.) said there are tiger cages in this country being used in Texas on migrant workers."

"How much of the material being developed — always for a good purpose — will be turned back on ourselves?" asked Pilsuk, who is writing a book on involvement of the Central Intelligence Agency and large corporations abroad.

He spoke of his own experience with a product developed for Vietnam: CNS gas, which causes vomiting.

While participating in a People's Park vigil last year, he said, a policeman handed him a bullhorn and told him the vigil would be allowed in Sproul Plaza at the university, so he convinced people to go there.

However, police and national guardsmen cordoned off the plaza and would allow no one to leave, he said. Then a helicopter flying low sprayed the dangerous CNS gas on the captive audience, he added.

He focused blame for such a tactic on researchers and the large private foundations who finance such research.

He explained how Michigan State University professors developed the South Vietnamese secret police. "They did their good research on how you could win the hearts and minds of the people to this oppressive regime," he said.

Failing to win them, they then research on scaring them and finally exterminating them, he charged.

Extermination is being done by systematically bombing the countryside to force people to move into enclaves, Pilisuk said. Daily bombings in Laos are as great as any during World War II, he said, adding that long after American ground troops have been withdrawn, the air war will continue.

Of the protected hamlet system, he said, "It goes beyond anything that Stalin conceived."

He told of constant questioning, indoctrination and spying on those in the hamlets. The tactics used for oppression have been developed by the 325 nonprofit American organizations doing research in Vietnam, he charged.

"What is the reason humane people allow all this to happen? Where are the good people when this is happening? In Nazi Germany not everybody was an (Adolf) Eichman. Most of the people there were people like ourselves," said the professor.

He asked how a professor from Michigan State could stand calmly by with notebook in hand while a South Vietnamese policeman applied electrical shocks to battered and bound prisoners.

His answer was dehumanization — psychologically detaching oneself from the human aspect of what was occuring.

This process allows people to feel no pain over millions starving in India and leads to a diminished sense of personal responsibility for actions, he said.

In other words, the Michigan State professor could involve himself with the procedural details of the torture and forget a human being was in agony, Pilisuk said.

"You get closer and closer to the line that people are expendable and must be exterminated if they don't come over," he said.

The same process of reconciling values to what is happening goes on in everyone, Pilisuk said. He noted that the "good people" of Nazi Germany made slight accomodations to the Nazis that allowed the slaughter of millions and alleged the mass of Americans are dehumanized enough to do the same.

Nasser, Moscow Agree To Demand Israeli Evacuation

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union and Egypt have agreed to demand Israeli "withdrawal from all occupied territory" as an indispensable condition for a political settlement, middle eastern diplomatic sources said today.

The agreement was signed today in a final top level meeting between the ruling Soviet triumvirate and visiting President Gamal Abdel Nasser. It also contains a Soviet commitment to "continue all possible aid" to the United Arab Republic, the sources said. Tass reported the Kremlin meeting without giving details on the agreement.

The agreement specifies the territories Israel is to evacuate —the Sinai Peninsula, the Gaza Strip, West Jerusalem, the west bank of the Jordan and the Golan Heights.

Nasser is scheduled to return to Cairo Friday.

Pony Parties Support Kathy's Mare

By PAT PALMES

Silence.

The four-year-old guests at Brooks Gordon's party in Freeman Park in Mill Valley on Tuesday eye Flash suspiciously. No volunteers.

"The biggest boy here" is recruited by the hostess and bravely steps up to the pinto Shetland pony. Kathy lifts him to the Western saddle, adjusts the stirrups to the length of the boy's legs and leads the sleepy little steed on a stroll around the park. When the first rider returns smiling and unscathed, the other little guests are keen for their turn.

A helper, Mrs. Milan Sladky of Mill Valley, enthuses, "I'll have to train a goat for a buggy now like we had in the Alps where I grew up!" She remarks that Mill Valley is very much like Bavaria.

Horsewoman Kathy relates that some mothers are afraid of the pony. " 'Don't get too near to the pony, children!' they say," chuckles the seventh grader who considers her pony very tame. "The little girls love the pony and want to ride it again and again, but the boys aren't so interested. Lifting them is the hardest part of the job."

Kathy and her pony went into business last year after Flash entertained at a friend's birthday party. Those guests wanted their mothers to hire Flash when the time for their birthday parties arrived.

Kathy, who lives at 33 Shelly Drive in Mill Valley, brings her Shetland pony to backyard parties when they are close to Flash's pasture, or else meets the children at Mill Valley parks or the Southern Marin

Couple Married In San Francisco Rite

Leslie Gaddy of San Francisco became the bride of James H. Webb of San Rafael Friday evening in a ceremony at the Swedenborgen Church in San Francisco. A reception followed at the Alta Mira Hotel in Sausalito.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Gaddy of San Anselmo, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Warren E. Webb of Berkeley.

Matron of honor was Mrs. John C. Dalton of Gilroy, and the bridegroom's brother, Bruce Webb, was best man. Guests were ushered to their seats by Leslie's brothers, John L. and William Gaddy.

The bride was graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School and attended Chico State College and Grace Ball Secretarial School in San Francisco. She is employed by United States Steel Corporation in San Francisco.

James is also the brother of Marty Webb. He is a graduate of Berkeley High School and the Los Angeles Art Center College and is employed as the manager of Strawberry Town and Country Village.

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Females fighting the advent of the "midi" in fall fashions have a Women's Lib-style champion in the White House. She's 22-year-old Julie Eisenhower, who firmly declares the longer skirts are not for her and she won't wear them.

As Julie sees it, women have become "sheep" in having to follow fashion trends they neither like nor want. She is ready to lead a revolt and sees no reason to toss out her present wardrobe.

Julie's mother, the First Lady, has been the most adventuresome in trying new skirt lengths since last spring. But even she seems uncertain of where she wants her hemline.

Mrs. Nixon has been wearing her hemlines from knee length to two and three inches below.

As the summer goes on, both Julie and her sister, Tricia Nixon, 24, have remained holdouts with skirts well above the knees. But it's doubtful they can buck the tide.

Inevitably they are fashion leaders and inevitably they will find the New York and Washington stores showing only the longer lengths. Julie's complaint is echoed in the White House by most of the young staffers who prefer the miniskirt or at least hemlines slightly above the knee.

Slim, darkhaired Julie Robinson, who is on the First Lady's press staff, says of the longuette: "Are you kidding? I wouldn't be caught dead in them. I don't know anybody on the staff who plans to buy them.

"I don't have the money to buy a new wardrobe. Besides, I don't want to look like Ruby Keeler."

But Julie Eisenhower is becoming more daring and less ingenue with her hairdos. For the Women's National Press Club's golden anniversary dinner, she wore her hair in an updo evening coiffure of soft curls which was very much admired, especially by her husband.

"I've been trying to get her to wear it up for a long time," said Julie's husband, David.

The President's younger daughter also has found that women are not welcome at some exclusive country clubs and it comes as a bit of a shock.

Last summer Julie's parents gave her golf lessons for her birthday so she could keep her husband, an avid golfer, company on the links.

When the young Eisenhowers were visiting David's grandmother, Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, in Augusta, Ga., a few months ago, they decided to play a round of golf at the Augusta Country Club where former President Dwight D. Eisenhower had spent many vacations.

When Julie showed up with her clubs at the all-male golf club, the managers handled the situation deftly by telling Julie she could "tour" the course with her husband. She got the message, but confesses it did not occur to her that some clubs bar women.

A New Look Long For Stewardesses

A new $3.5 million stewardess ensemble, which features a generally longer look, will be introduced by United Air Lines late next month. Designed by Hollywood couturier Jean Louis the wardrobe will include as its basic garment a red jumper which will come to the top of the knee, and a matching red midi-length winter great-coat. The latter will cover the knees. There also will be shiny black boots. Length of the current ensemble, designed by Jean Louis and introduced in 1968: three inches above the knee.

Women Better With Finances, Say Bankers

By DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Another male myth about woman has been disproved through talks with bankers.

According to song, legend, night club comics and male locker room gossip, woman is a lovable but birdbrained household liability when it comes to handling money or a checkbook. To hear most men tell it she balances the checkbook by standing it on end or rounding off to the nearest dollar.

Not so, says bankers across the country. A sampling of full service bank officers indicates that today's woman has more money sense than her chief critic, man. The average female is more reliable when it comes to paying bank loans, writing checks that don't bounce and meeting bank charge card obligations.

"No matter what some people think about the female's sense of money, or lack of it, our women customers are generally quite responsible," Henry Fletcher, president of the Merchants Bank of Aurora, Ill. maintains.

"When we have trouble with a loan, we often go directly to the wife who straightens it out."

J. Grant Bickmore, president of the Idaho Bank and Trust Co. in Pocatello, recently said that housewives normally are more apt to keep their checkbooks balanced and write fewer bad checks. The same thing applies to meeting charge card payments, he said.

A bank officer at Boatmen's National Bank in St. Louis said men are more likely to be late in paying off personal installment loans than women. "And the ladies respond faster to a second notice," he noted.

A loan officer at the Chemical Bank New York Trust Co. said women are more compulsive about paying off debts and often settle a two or three year loan in one year. A young Manhattan career girl recently paid off a two-year loan in exactly eleven weeks, he said.

One large California bank which did not want to be named went so far as to say that men — not women — exceed the limits of their charge cards by eight to one.

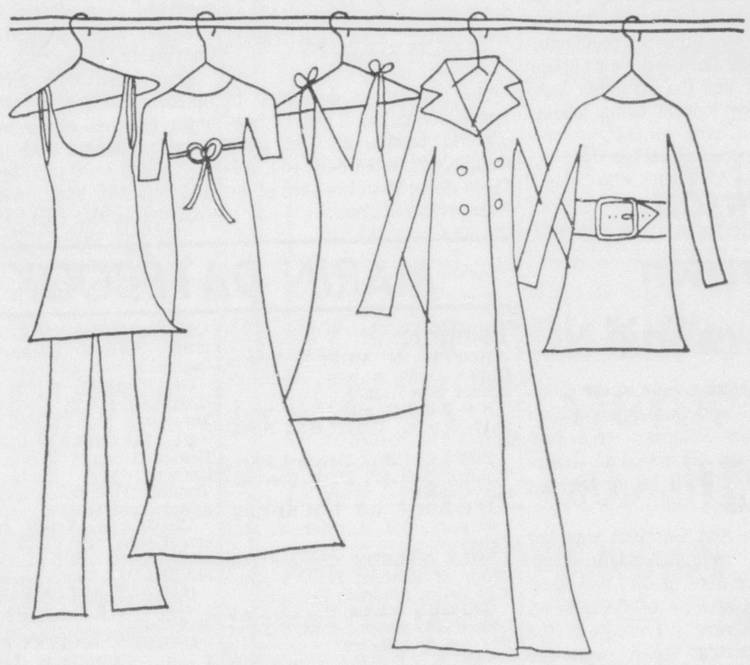
A recent banking survey shows that 40 per cent of the wives today decide where money is to be saved and 33 per cent where the checking account will be located. Since most banks are not open at night, and the husband works during the day, it has fallen to the woman to handle banking matters. This survey showed that 24 per cent of the wives handled auto loans.

"What's so strange about that?" asked Barbara Casey, 27, and a St. Louis housewife, an edge of anger in her voice.

"After all, we're the ones who buy the groceries, household furniture, clothes for the kids and settle most of the bills. Naturally, our banking habits are more dependable."

And the bankers tend to agree.



This is the new length.

In other words, take your choice. Because that's what fashion is all about these days. Choice. You can be maxi in the morning, midi at midday and mini by night. You can even be mini-dressed and maxi-coated. And of course, you don't have to skirt the issue at all. You can simply be girl-in-pants. Which can also be mini, midi, or maxi. Now, see what we mean? The new length is no length except the one (or two or three) that turns you on.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Every Summer Stubborn, Bossy Grandmother Comes To Visit

DEAR HELEN:

Every summer my grandmother comes to visit, and life becomes hell. She is stubborn, bossy, and won't mind her own business.

Here's an example: Some boys were here when my folks were going out for the evening. They told my girl friend and I that they should leave now, but the boys whispered they'd meet us outside 15 minutes later.

My grandmother didn't see us sneak out, but when I came back in to get an empty bottle so we could play "Spin the Bottle," she said it was time for young ladies to be inside. (She didn't know the boys were there.) So I told her I had to go out and look for the fountain pen I'd lost. Then the two boys and us two girls made out. (She didn't know we were making out.)

Grandma called and said she would tell my mother, but we wouldn't listen to her.

Well, when my parents came home, guess who got in big trouble because of Grandma's big mouth? — RED-EYED "14"

DEAR 14:

Guess who got in trouble because she was a sneaky kid who deserved it? Sorry, chum, I'm on your grandmother's side here. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Two of my best friends have become involved with drugs. They use LSD, speed, marijuana and pills. All they do is tell me how beautiful it is and try to coax me into it. They'd like to turn on the whole world, but I can see them changing and I don't want to be like that.

I've been friends with them for six years, but the other day I heard them talking about slipping something in my drink.

Please tell me how I can keep straight and still keep their friendship? — WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED:

Your letter points up one of the biggest problems in the drug fight. Users think it's their natural right to convert their friends, but the straights keep silent for fear of being labeled square.

If you really care about these two girls, you'll switch to honesty. Tell them how they've changed, show them where they may be headed, meet every argument for with an argument against and keep pushing them to visit the drug-help house in your town — where they'll meet kids who have been there and are making a comeback.

This will accomplish one of two things: They'll either turn off dope, or turn you off as a preachy dope they'd rather avoid. Let's hope it's the former. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

You've had many touching, humorous and honest "What Is A" letters. May I add another? It may not be as warm and praising, but it's just as honest.

What Is A Drug Addict?

A lonely youth seeking security, longing to belong.

A scared kid with a hypodermic — and then suddenly he's a ruthless kid stealing for the next fix, boosting meat in the local supermarket, mugging people, conning others, holding up a gas station, dealing drugs, all to support a habit he "couldn't get."

A fellow running after a bag of junk, too tired to go on running, but too addicted to stop; sick when the last fix wears off, thin from lack of sleep, poor diet and too many needles, glassy-eyed with pinned pupils.

A hopeless wreck, sitting in jail, scared, busted, and once more sick. Maybe he'll lick the habit, maybe not.

But most of all, who is the drug addict? Your brother? Your sister? Your best friend? — You?? — GERRI.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

Dickson-Garrison Vows Said

Exchanging vows at the Chapel of Grace Cathedral in San Francisco Saturday were Barbara Joan Garrison of Greenbrae and Jerald Lester Dickson of Los Altos.

Lynne Ann Garrison was her sister's honor attendant. They are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Garrison of Greenbrae. Judith Grace Dickson, the bridegroom's sister, was the bridesmaid.

Serving as best man was Keat Griggers of Los Angeles. The guests were seated by Larry Gardner of Cupertino and Gary Lester of Sunnyvale.

The reception was held at Treasure Island Officers Club.

On their return from a Southern California wedding trip the couple will live in Berkeley.

Barbara is a graduate of Ygnacio Valley High School in Concord and the University of California at Santa Barbara. She will begin her dietectic internship at the University of California Hospital in San Francisco in the fall.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerald Keith Dickson of Los Altos, was graduated from Homestead High School in Sunnyvale and California State Polytechnic College. He is employed with International Business Machines in San Jose for the summer and will take graduate work in engineering at the University of California in September.

China Is Recognized By Italy's Designers

Princess Irene Galitzine, whose showrooms always are crowded with Italian nobility, had a Manchurian line this season with prints inspired by Tang Dynasty paintings.

Mila Schon, who caters to the industrial royalty of Northern Italy, was all kimonos and coolies Tuesday night as she finally abandoned her ultrashort miniskirts in favor of a length just below the knee.

To keep warm and dry in winter she had huge capes in man-made Borg seal which reversed to a plastic fabric in red and black printed Chinese characters.

They went with high boots, unlike evening wear which had satin covered shoes with high wood platforms and a square toe which covered the vamp and left the back half of the foot out in the cold. The shoes caused the models to mince in the kind of walk imperial Chinese ladies had to use with their bound feet.

Kimonos came in doublefaced wool for day and crepes and satins for evening. Kimono jackets and coolie coats teamed both with long skirts and with trousers, long or coolie length. Many of the jackets were sleeveless and buttoned off to show that what looked like a suit really was a dress and jacket.

Her over-all look was slim, even her ponchos over pants cut like Chinese ponchos—pointed poncho bottoms but Chinese side-closing necks.

She used some of her opulent all-bungle beaded fabric in white for a decidedly cowboy outfit of white satin pants with beaded chaps and hat which her audience took as a dig at Valentino, reigning Rome fashion king.

The season's cleverest use of pleats and tucks gave a fresh look to Federico Forquet's collection. Midcalf coats were slim but pleated all around from collar to hem. There were box pleats in soft gray tweed, rib-stitched pleats in brown and unpleated tucks sewn so they stood out in narrow three dimensional folds.

Gucho-Zoave — coolie — call-them-what-you-will pants, the ones that just cover the knee and are stagged or tucked into high boots, were popular both at Schon and Forquet.

Horseman's Association riding ring.

"Once I rode Flash to a party at a home all the way up on Mount Tam, and I had another party the same day!" says the enterprising youngster. Kathy advertises her pony in Mill Valley and efficiently keeps an appointment book.

Flash's earnings support Kathy's full-size mare, Misty. The money helps pay for feed, veterinarian bills, horse show fees and equipment.

"Now I'm saving for a new saddle," says the young horsewoman.

PRESS GUIDE IS AVAILABLE

A new guide for press chairmen of organizations which are interested in getting news to the Marin Women's Section of the Independent-Journal is now available at the San Rafael main office and the Novato, Mill Valley and Southern Sonoma I-J offices.

The booklet, "Getting News Into Your Newspaper," is issued as a service of the Independent-Journal Women's Section to assist press chairmen for women's organizations.

The guide explains policies of coverage, how to prepare news stories and meeting notices, and the special stories and features emphasized by the section.

The booklets at the San Rafael office may be obtained from the switchboard on the main floor.

ART REVIEW

By MARY LOU STRIBLING

Webster defines romanticism as a tendency to be fanciful or imaginative, while realism relates to qualities which are true to life. As far as art is concerned, it is practically impossible to mark a clear division between the two attitudes, since what may seem very real to one person may register as pure fantasy to another.

It is always interesting, however, to observe how different viewpoints can influence the manner in which a subject is presented, and the current exhibit by the Marin Society of Artists provides the opportunity to do just that.

The Romance and Reality show, which will continue through Aug. 2 in the Frances Young Gallery at the Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross, is focused primarily, though not entirely, upon representational works.

Representational art is often misconstrued as photographic naturalism. Actually, it implies merely that the artist attempts to produce a likeness of, not an imitation of, some image he finds meaningful. The outcome of his efforts may be far removed from images objectively perceived by his eye alone, and include subjective elements from his own emotional involvement.

Such involvement characterizes the majority of the pieces in the society's new show. Both impressionistic and expressionistic influences are clearly evident, and it appears that some of the current art fads have been deliberately excluded, for there is not a single soup can, six-eyed nude, or funky ceramic assemblage in sight.

A few examples are technically inept and trite in concept, but there are a number of really fine works among both paintings and graphics. It is a bit weighted, perhaps, on the landscape side, but there is enough stylistic variety to make the imbalance forgivable.

Merit awards were given to Eleanor Elsocht's acrylic painting, "Mystique," and to "Waiting," a sensuous composition in rich browns and reds by Phyllis Taplitz. Ursula Johnson also received a merit award for her beautifully textured transfer drawing, "Life Signs." Honorable mentions went to works by John Harte, Patricia Meyer and Carol Sideman.

While labels have no bearing on the quality of art, it would have been provocative (and certainly courageous) if entries had been tagged either "realistic" or "romantic" to afford some perception of the artists' personal evaluations. An editorial note at the gallery door states: ". . . New materials, new perspectives, and new insights allow the contemporary artist more freedom in interpreting his world. Is it romance or reality? That depends on the point of view."

High-Wire Artist, 65, Plans Longest, Highest Walk Ever

TALLULAH FALL, Ga. (UPI) — High-wire artist Karl Wallenda planned short practice sessions today in final preparations for his death defying act Saturday over Tallulah Gorge — billed as the longest and highest tightwalk ever attempted.

Wallenda, 65, said there will be no dry-run walk on the two-inch cable stretched 997-feet across the 700-foot deep Gorge.

"If I walk it, I walk it once and that's it," Wallenda said.

Promoters hope to draw some 50,000 spectators who will pay $5 each to see the act. Part of the proceeds will be used to build an amphitheater and to promote tourism at this once-popular vacation spot in the northeast Georgia mountains.

A performer who called himself Professor Leon crossed the same Gorge 84 years ago but his walk was not as high nor as long as Wallenda's.

Wallenda plans to stand on his head during the walk in honor of U.S. fighting men in Vietnam.

"It makes me very proud to do that," said the German-born Wallenda.

"Wind is my biggest enemy," he said. To help balance him on the walk, Wallenda will carry a 45-pound pole used in the seven-man pyramid act once performed by himself and members of his family. Two members of the group, a son-in-law and nephew, were killed in a 1962 accident in Detroit while performing the team-rope-walking act. Wallenda and other team members were injured.

City Worker Bill Before Assembly

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A bill barring cities, counties and special districts from requiring employees to live within their jurisdiction has cleared the final committee hurdle and gone to the Assembly floor.

The bill, SB 1114 by Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, already had cleared the Senate, and Assembly approval would send it to the governor.

One possible hitch, however, is the prospect of a bid by some legislators to amend the bill on the floor to include charter cities. This could arouse opposition to the bill by the powerful League of California Cities, which so far has taken no position on the bill, a spokesman for the senator said.

No Charges Filed

No charge has been filed in Marin Municipal Court against Richard Sheldon Knowles, 18, former San Rafael resident now of Berkeley, who was arrested early Tuesday near the scene of a boat burglary in a San Rafael yacht harbor.

Silent Film Showing

"The Scarlet Letter," a 1926 silent film starring Lillian Gish, Lars Hanson and Henry B. Walthall, will be shown tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Sausalito Youth Center, 180 Harrison Street.

Auditions For Play Set In Mill Valley

Auditions for the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts production of "Moon for the Misbegotten" will be held at 8 p.m. July 27 and 29 at the Mill Valley Golf Clubhouse, 280 Buena Vista Avenue.

Persons interested in working on the production staff of the Eugene O'Neill play may also attend the auditions.

Two Stores In Novato List Burglary Losses

Someone entered two adjoining Novato stores Monday night or early Tuesday morning and took small amounts of money, police reported.

The stores are Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Parlor at 1769 Grant Avenue, which lost $50, and Amber Griffin Book Store at 1769A Grant, which lost $6, according to police. Entry was made through the building attics.

Personnel Group To Pick Leaders

A new chairman and a vice chairman will be picked by the Marin Personnel Commission tomorrow at the civic center.

The meeting is set for 3 p.m. in the supervisors' chambers on the third floor. Current chairman is Bella Aaron, and vice chairman, Robert B. McCreadie. The commission usually rotates the chairmanship each year.

Commissioners also will discuss proposed county policy to give the "culturally disadvantaged" (minorities and those lacking in formal education) a better chance at county employment.

Should Jets Pay For Using Quiet?

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI)— Airlines with supersonic jets "should be made to pay for using up our quiet," says professor William Baxter of Stanford University.

Baxter, a lawyer-economist, told a news conference Wednesday "sonic boom and excessive noise on takeoff is just another example of environmental deterioration," adding that "rules should be changed to refashion concepts of ownership."

"For example," he said, "airlines should be made to pay for using up our quiet."

Regents Meet Today On Grading Issue

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The University of California regents met today with an agenda including the question of whether professors, in this time of unrest, are giving students better grades than in the past.

The question was raised at the regents' April meeting by Regent Glenn Campbell, and university administrators were instructed to gather data from all nine campuses, a big job.

Campbell, a hawk on the problem of how to handle student dissenters, suggested professors were lowering their standards. This, it was implied, made it easier for students to spend time in disturbances.

When Campbell raised his question, administrators agreed students are being given considerably higher grades than in some years ago. However, the administrators denied this was because teachers were favoring student activism.

The reason, they said, was because students are better prepared than their predecessors.

This is partly because of the influence of television, and partly because admission standards are much higher than they were for the present generation's parents.

Another matter to be discussed during the regents' two-day meeting is the effect of the legislature's slashing of the university's proposed $74 million operating budget by 12 per cent. The construction budget was cut from $84 million to $900,000.

BEST SHOWS FOR TONIGHT

Unusual on television tonight:

KCRA (3), KRON (4), 7:30 p.m. — Chet Huntley's "NBC White Paper" analysis of the migrant worker's plight, filmed in Florida citrus-growing regions, is given a repeat showing.

KGO(7), 7:30 p.m. — The "San Francisco Magic Electronic Rock Festival" is a three-and-one-half hour program in color devoted to youth with music, news about summer happenings in the Bay Area and suggested help with drug problems.

KQED (9), 8:30 p.m. — Roman Polanski, director, is interviewed on "The Film Generation: Cinema of the Absurd," a segment on "NET Festival" that examines the satiric and allegorical qualities of the "absurd" style.

KPIX (5), 9 p.m. — Glenn Ford, Geraldine Page and Angela Lansbury star in the movie "Dear Heart," the comedy-drama tale of a small-town postmistress in New York for a convention who meets an attractive traveling salesman and falls in love.

TELEVISION IN REVIEW

'Courtship Of Eddie's Father' Underrated

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — I'm beginning to think that ABC-TV's "The Courtship of Eddie's Father" is one of television's most underrated series. In fact, I'm sure of it.

I've been watching some reruns of the show this summer, and I suggest you do also to see how a so-called "situation comedy" can be quietly civilized and gentle, particularly in its contemporary attitude toward the relationship of a father and his young son.

The fact is that, although "The Courtship of Eddie's Father" is technically classified as a situation comedy, it is a bit more than that—not heavy stuff certainly, but an entertainingly cool and intelligent piece of light, human fare.

The series is based originally on a movie of the same name, concerning a small boy who tries to find a wife for his father (Glenn Ford). In the television adaptation, the Glenn Ford part is taken over by Bill Bixby.

And although the boy in the series (Brandon Cruz) is also dedicated to seeking out a wife for his widowed father, this is merely the running thread—a sort of light underpinning—for a program that is essentially about a man and a boy. And this relationship is what makes it unique and often nicely touching.

The way Bixby and young Mr. Cruz get along on an acting basis is altogether charming. They are so real in their attitudes and affection toward each other that they frequently seem to be an actual father and son.

And, as their housekeeper, Miyoshi Umeki is a fine part of the regular cast—never too obvious, yet a mature, occasional mother substitute for Cruz. The notion that Miss Umeki could well be the wife that the young man is seeking for his father is always softly present, but is never pushed hard. It is just that Miss Umeki's understated presence is, as always, gently potent.

In "The Courtship of Eddie's Father," the main characters are not buffoons and cartoon equivalents. The father, unlike many on television, is no fool. The son, unlike many on video, is no brat. The situations are often ones that we can recognize.

Furthermore, what gives the series some added substance is that many episodes make quiet statements in the area of values. Unlike most television series, relatives such as grandmothers are not necessarily shown with affection. Friendship has high priority.

I liked one program in which the young boy frankly decides he doesn't care much for his grandmother — his father's mother. She is, in fact, pretty definitely a pain. And Bixby is nicely understanding about it, for his chief loyalty is to his son.

County Strike Hinted As Negotiations Stall

A strike by county firemen and sheriff's deputies is possible if deadlocked wage negotiations are not resolved soon, an employee spokesman said today.

"Yes, a strike has been discused," said Randall M. Prevo, manager of the Marin County Employee Association, which is bargaining in behalf of 200 public safety employees, including deputies, firemen and communication workers, on a new contract. But Prevo said he has advised the employees to seek mediation first.

Safety personnel are the lone employee group who have not reached agreement with the county on salaries and benefits for 1970-71.

Both Prevo and Asst. County Administrator John F. Barrows, representing the county, admitted today that talks are deadlocked.

Prevo said the safety employees met last night and formed an action committee to explore steps that can be taken. He said the possibility of a strike was discussed.

"However, I advised them to wait until after a mediator has been called in to try to settle the differences," Prevo added.

Prevo said he had been in touch with the state conciliation service in San Francisco and asked its supervising officer, James Marshall, to mediate. "I'm expecting a call from him today," Prevo said.

Barrows said the county will get together with the mediator as soon as Prevo arranges the meeting. Recommendations of the mediator are not binding on either side.

Sheriff's deputies, who originally asked for a 17.5 per cent pay raise, are now holding out for a 15 per cent raise, Barrows disclosed. Firemen and communications workers want a 10 per cent raise, and firemen also are seeking a reduced work week.

"The firemen are now working 95 hours a week, highest in the Bay Area, said Prevo. "They asked for a reduction to 72 hours but are willing to settle for 84, or any reduction that would show good faith."

Barrows said the county's last offer was a 7.5 per cent pay raise for deputies and 5 per cent for all other safety employees.

In addition to the pay and hour issues, the effective date of any pay raise is also at odds.

The 1969-70 contract expired on June 30, but a 60-day extension clause went into effect.

Prevo said the safety employees want any pay raise to take effect as of July 1, since other regular employees got theirs on that date. Barrows, on the other hand, contends that raises should take effect on the day a new contract is signed.

All other bargaining units representing regular county employees, probation workers, social workers, and nurses have settled for pay raises of 5 to 6 per cent. Management and mid-management categories, department heads and their immediate subordinates got no raises.

Sewage Plant Site Near Agate Beach

A permanent sewage traatment plan will be built near Agaet Beach on the Bolinas Mesa, the Bolinas publicity district board decided last night, according to clerk Jane Boyer.

Mrs. Boyer said the chosen site drew no protests from the 60 persons who attended last night's meeting. Two other sites under consideration, one at the west of the Bolinas lagoon and one near Bolinas School, were turned down by district directors after a number of residents spoke against the locations.

"The other sites would have been cheaper, but were esthetically unsuitable," Mrs. Boyer explained. "Cost of the plant, which will serve both Stinson Beach and Bolinas, has not yet been determined," she said, "and land cost has not yet been decided."

Mrs. Boyer said most of the residents on the large mesa have indicated they want to be included in the sewer system, being built by the utility district in conjunction with the Stinson Beach County Water District. The Bolinas district has been under fire from the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board for dumping raw sewage into the mouth of Bolinas lagoon.

Printers Press For Wage Boosts

RICHMOND (UPI)—The International Typographical Union will press for improved wage and benefits in contract negotiations because newspaper profits are increasing, an ITU vice president has said.

Tam District Approves Loan To Club

The Tamalpais Community Services District board has voted to loan $13,500 from its reserve funds to the Tamalpais Valley Improvement Club to pay off a mortgage on 11.5 acres of land the club owns, director Glenn Lambacher reported.

He said the improvement club plans to donate the land to the services district for a park as soon as the mortgage, which the club used to build its clubhouse, is paid.

The Tamalpais Community Services District also:

PUBLIC HEARING — Set a public hearing on a proposed $30 annual sewer service charge for Aug. 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the district office, 305 Bell Lane.

RATE INCREASE — Postponed consideration of a rate increase for garbage pickup in the district until July 21 at 7 p.m. Henry's Garbage Services is asking for the hike, which would raise one-can rates from $2.10 to $2.70 and two-can rates from $3.80 to $5.

GRADING — Accepted an offer from the Allan-Marin Co., of Mill Valley to grade for the district's proposed little league field, to be built later this year at Tamalpais Valley School.

Houston Brass Keeping Eyes On Dolinsek

By RALPH CHATOIAN

A first baseman for the Columbus, Ga., Astros of the Class AA Southern League, the 22-year-old left-hander has been leading the league in batting throughout the first half of the season.

His batting average, prior to last night's game, was at .317, after being in the .330's most of the season.

"I've been in a slump the last few days, not making good contact," he said yesterday via long distance telephone from Ashville, Tenn. where the Columbus team was playing. "But I'll break it."

About leading the league in hitting, Dolinsek said, "There's still a long time to go. We've played 90 games so far and there are still 51 to go. I just hope I keep having a good year."

In addition to his lofty batting average, Dolinsky has slugged six home runs, 10 triples, 12 doubles, and has knocked in 44 runs. His 96 hits and 19 triples also lead the league.

Dolinsek said he had set goals for himself before the season started, and they included 80 runs batted in, 10 home runs and 25 doubles. He has a good chance of reaching them.

Thisweek's edition of the St. Louis Sporting News has a three column feature story about Dolinsek, the player of the week in the Southern League. The story reports that Grady Hatton, a Houston vice president was in Columbus, and had high praise for the young slugger, as did Tal Smith, another Houston vice president. Also John Mullen, assistant to general manager Spec Richardson was praising Dolinsek's ability. The six-foot-two, 185-pound Dolinsek hopes to get a promotion to Oklahoma City, Okla., of the AAA American Association for next season, which would be just a step away from the big time in Houston's Astrodome.

He broke into professional baseball last year after winning honors at Arizona State University. He helped the Sun Devils win the NCAA tournament and was named the tourney's most valuable player. In 67 games for Arizona State he batted .346 and rapped nine home runs. He decided to forego his senior year of college and signed a professional contract.

He was assigned to Covington of the Appalachian Rookie League and in 60 games batted .301 with seven homers. Thus his promotion to the tougher AA division.

In addition to being a great hitter and outfielder, he pitched during his prep days at Novato High and was author of a no-hitter in one of his victories during his senior year. He was all-Marin Athletic League in football and basketball as well as baseball.

He said he found the pitching much better in the Southern League than was the case last year. "In the rookie league, the young pitchers have the physical ability, but they don't have the experience and know-how we see here."

"You have to be prepared both mentally and physically to play professional baseball."

Killebrew Doesn't Fit The Description

In Baseball, "being a competitor" means 1) smashing your bat on home plate when you pop up; 2) kicking your helmet when you strike out; 3) demolishing the water cooler when you hit into a double play; 4) cursing the umpire on a called third strike; 5) cursing the press when you lose; 6) starting fights when you're having a bad day.

Being a competitor means holding a big league job even though you can't field, hit or throw up to major league standards. "He hated to lose, he did so much of it," his epitaph should read. Being a competitor means, when you can't get round on the fast ball, you pretend you're hitting behind the runner. You bunt a lot. Some chronic, imaginary, ready-on-demand but undiagnosable injury is advisable for days when young, unhittable fireballers are throwing for the other team, but be ready to limp bravely out of the dugout in the late innings when he has been lifted for a pinchhitter and a sore-armed reliever.

There's Too Much Silence

The trouble with Harmon Clayton Killebrew is, he's not a competitor. You can tell that because 1) he's fourth in the league in batting; 2) he's first in the league in home runs, runs batted in, bases on balls — and silence. "Competitors" never lead the league in anything but whirlpool baths and cracked helmets.

You can tell he's not a competitor because he smiles a lot. "Competitors" never smile. They scowl a lot. You can tell he's not a competitor because he's never been kicked out of a game. "Competitors" get kicked out of lots of games — particularly, when Sam McDowell is pitching.

John McGraw probably would have taken to putting tacks in his bed, salt in his coffee, hiding his shoes or telephoning him anonymously late at night, anything to shake him up. Ty Cobb used to play this game in a cold rage. So did Jackie Robinson. Don Drysdale used to look at batters as if they were captured spies.

He Answers With A Smile

Killebrew goes through the game like a door-to-door salesman. A writer (never mind who) once predicted in a World Series that Harmon would have a cauliflowered chest at third base fielding doubleplay balls. In the locker room, the next day, Harmon smiled at the offender, bared his breast and said, "See, it isn't even bleeding." Another writer called him "Harmless" Killebrew. Harmon thought it was funny.

He has never had a salary squabble. ("Competitors" really earn their reputations when it comes to negotiations with the front office.) He once turned down a testimonial fee for a cigaret after he almost choked to death for weeks trying to learn how to smoke. ("Competitors" would endorse poison ivy.) He cheerfully slugs his way through the snows of Minnesota in winter to attend functions at the request of the publicity department. ("Competitors" usually start off demanding "how much?"). You would think, then, from the foregoing that Harmon Killebrew would be a marginal player, a platooner just happy to be hanging on, an "out" man to pitchers, trade bait for front offices.

All Managers Should Have One

But Killebrew has hit 472 home runs in his career. He is hitting them this year at the rate of one every 10 times at bat. His career rate is one every 12.5 at bats, second only to Babe Ruth. He has batted in 1,218 runs, has scored more than 1,000. He is smiling his way to the Hall of Fame. The important statistic is Minnesota has won two championships in five years with him. "Every manager," says his manager, Bill Rigney, "ought to have one Killebrew to manage before he dies."

$2 Million Difference In Football

NEW YORK (UPI)—A difference of $2 million a year in pension and insurance benefit contributions is the primary cause of the current dispute between the National Football League Players Association and the 26 NFL club owners.

The Players Association has proposed that benefit contributions on the part of the owners be increased by $3.6 million a year while the owners have offered an increase of $1.6 million, it was revealed today by Tom Vance, the public relations director for the Association.

REDUCTION

In addition to their lower figure, the owners' offer, according to Vance, "was conditioned on the players season game pay and permanently waiving all financial rights to their licensing revenues."

"If the players made these personal concessions," Vance added, "it would cost them at least $600,000 a year."

The Association contends that a projected $10 to $13 million increase in television revenues alone for the NFL make the player proposal reasonable.

COSTS LESS

"Furthermore, the players have volunteered that pension contributions would be reduced if actual television revenues fall short of the owners' forecast," Vance said. "Although the owners profess to find the player demand outrageous, the NFL Players Association's proposal would cost one-third less than the benefit plan of baseball."

While the dispute rages, college all star football players were back on the field today in Evanston, Ill., following a one day strike in support of the Players Association.

"We have decided that we have accomplished what we decided to accomplish by striking one day in backing up the player's association," All Star spokesman Steve Tannen said Wednesday night following a team meeting. "But we also felt duty to the All Star game and to the people who are helped by its charities so we felt it best to resume practice."

OTTO ATTENDS

Otto Graham, coach of the All Stars, attended the meeting and urged the players to show up for supervised preparation for the annual game with the Kansas City Chiefs July 31.

Graham told the squad meeting that the coaches would report for practice on schedule Thursday morning and that he hoped the players would also report.

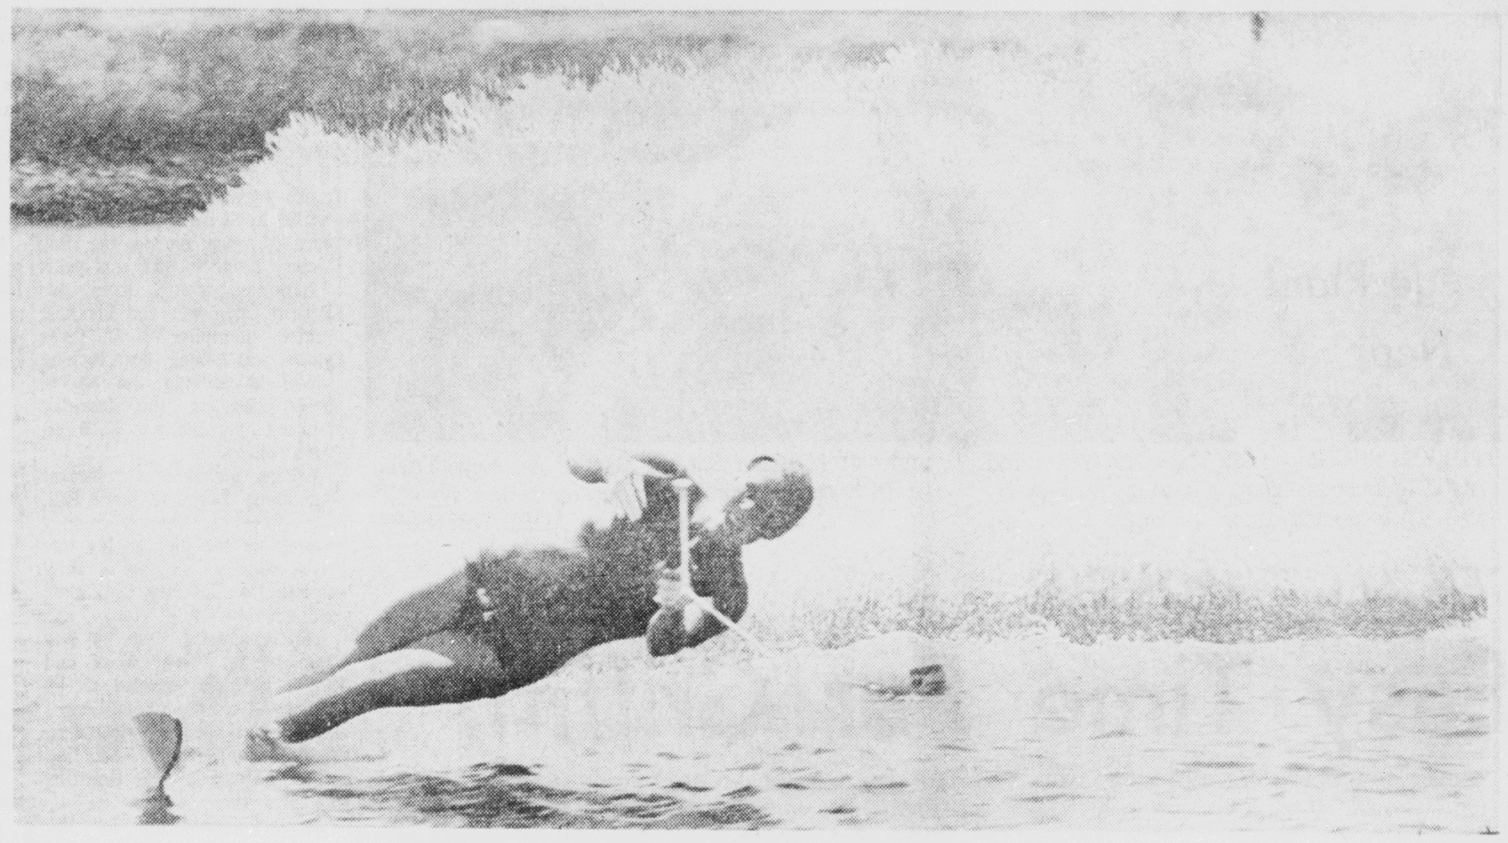
The players boycotted organized practice Wednesday. Some players, however, worked out individually.

Harold Hutchings, president of Chicago Tribune Charities sponsors of the annual game, said "we wish to emphasize that Chicago Tribune Charities is not in any way involved in the dispute. We are a third party with only one interest—to se that the game is played."

Ken Stabler Rides Again

SANTA ROSA (UPI)—Ken Stabler, still awaiting his initial appearance in a regular season game, is taking part in his third pre-season training camp of the Oakland Raiders.

The All-America southpaw quarterback from Alabama was injured throughout his rookie season and left camp to take care of "personal problems" last year. This time he figures he's ready to shoot for the No. 1 quarterback job behind Daryle Lamonica.



SKIMMING OVER THE WATER

Sharon Boivie, 19-year-old Novatan, will be among the 21 international water ski stars competing this weekend in the California World Cup tournament at Berkeley's Aquatic Park. Mike Suyderhoud, of San Anselmo, reigning world's champion, also will be among the U. S. entries competing against the best skiers from seven other nations. Cost for the tourney, which starts at 11 a.m. both Saturday and Sunday, is $2 each day for adults and $1 for children, and an additional $1 for island bleacher tickets. Men's and women's competition will be in slalom, tricks and jumping.

AT DRAKE HIGH

Summer Success In Basketball

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Even if it weren't the only one in existence, the Drake High School summer basketball program would probably be the best in the bay area.

Started 10 years ago by Bob Fitzhenry, then basketball coach and now the San Anselmo school's recreation director, (who, incidentally, will return as basketball coach next winter), the league has enjoyed continuous prosperity. Originally it included eight teams. Now there are 25 in two divisions, with more waiting in line.

Twelve adult teams from Marin County, and 13 high school squads from Marin and San Francisco combine to play five nights a week, three games a night at the Drake gym, where an estimated 150 people are always in the stands, (admission is free).

The high school division includes all eight Marin County Athletic League schools, plus St. Ignatius, Wilson, Lowell, Riordan and Balboa from San Francisco. Those, incidentally, are five of the city's best teams.

During its history the league has seen some pretty fair players and teams. Fitzhenry remembers some years ago when adult teams from San Francisco competed. "There was a team called St. Agnes that would have won the Pacific Coast Conference," he said. No doubt with players such as Fred LaCour and Tom Meschery, a one time San Francisco Warrior now with Seattle of the National Basketball Association.

Among the players in the league this year are All-Northern California star Kevin Restani of Riordan and Lowell's hotshot Mark Gilberg, who is averaging 31 points a game in league play.

The success of the league, while due largely, of course, to its monopoly of summer basketball in the bay area, can also be credited to Fitzhenry and the Drake recreation department, which runs things with clockwork efficiency.

Since three games must be played each night, certain time-saving innovations have been brought into use, among them a change in foul-shooting rules. Instead of shooting every foul which calls for a foul shot, the teams take the ball out of bounds through the fifth team foul. After that, two shots are awarded for a normal one shot soul, and three chances to make two are given for two shot fouls.

"We were concerned that maybe this would increase fouling, but it didn't at all," states Fitzhenry. "I think it really improves the game." As another time-saving gimick, teams scheduled to play immediately following a game in progress warm up in the girls' gym next door.

Also concerned with maintaining a high degree of sportsmanship, the league instituted a rule last year stating that a team on which two technical fouls is called forfeits the game. Additionally, any further trouble, on or off the court, results in suspension of the team from the league for the rest of the season.

Actually, that rule is seldom needed. It's been used only once. Its existence is to insure that the games will not be subject to the high tensions of the regular basketball season.

"We want to keep this a low pressure situation," says Fitzhenry.

End Of Road For Marin's Babe Ruth Baseball Teams

And then there were none.

Novato, Marin County's last surviving entry in the Babe Ruth District 7 tournaments, was eliminated last night at Sonoma, losing to Concord, 9-5 after eliminating the Mill Valley Americans earlier in the day, 7-2.

Ken Siler came on in relief to nail down the victory against Mill Valley, one of two teams from that city to enter District 7 double elimination competition. The Nationals were eliminated last week in Santa Rosa along with a team from Central Marin.

The other Marin team, Northgate, was knocked out of the Sonoma tourney last week.

FOUR-HITTER

John Klinger threw a four-hitter and struck out 11 as Terra Linda broke a first place tie with Annex Motors and ran its record to seven wins and five losses. Bill Sherbert and Jerry Seefeldt each had a pair of singles for the Trojans.

Drake got a triple from John Loane in the third inning that scored Steve Hale with what proved to be the winning run as the Pirates won their ninth game in 14 decisions. Vince Bormolini doubled and singled for Toby's.

The Italian Club stayed even with Drake in the loss column by beating Healdsburg 4-3 on the three-hit pitching of John Moresco, whose sacrifice fly accounted for the winning run. Healdsburg is 3-8.

TWO SINGLES

Greg Tong had two singles and a pair of RBI to lead Presidio past the slumping Mill Valley Chiefs, who have dropped to third place in the South with a 7-5 record. Score was 9-2.

Holiday Magic's Dirk Gansloser belted a two-run triple and a two-run homer in leading the San Rafael team to its fifth victory in 11 tries 8-3, good for third place in the North. Art Vollert slammed a solo home run for last place San Marin.

WILL LUCK CHANGE?

Wilson Is Sold To San Diego

DETROIT (UPI)—Maybe Earl Wilson's luck will be better in San Diego.

It certainly can't get any worse than it was when the right-handed pitcher was a member of the Detroit Tigers, which he was until sold in a waiver transaction to the Padres Wednesday.

Wilson, 34, pitched a no-hitter as a member of the Boston Red Sox against the California Angels on June 26, 1962 and won 22 games as a Tiger in 1967.

But Wilson compiled marks of 13-12 and 12-10 the past two seasons with a propensity for injuries to his pitching hand—because he stopped batted balls with it—and his legs—because he stopped hits with them, when he wasn't suffering pulled leg muscles.

He had only a 4-6 record thus far this season with a 4.45 earned run average after ERAs of 3.07, 3.27 and 2.85 the previous three seasons. He has a 120-103 career won-lost record.

"He had to know he was going, the way he's been pitching this year," one teammate commented.

Wilson was disgruntled over being demoted to the bullpen recently and a lackadaisical performance in the second game of last Sunday's doubleheader with Baltimore did not endear him to management.

TIGER ALL THROUGH?

Easy Time For Griffith

NEW YORK (UPI)—Emile Griffith grinned boyishly as he discussed his future and the sixth world championship it possibly holds, and across the hall, Dick Tiger sat with a towel wrapped around his waist and talked of the past.

Griffith, a five-time world champion ended, the 40-year-old Tiger's title hopes forever Wednesday night by jabbing out an easy 10-round decision at Madison Square Garden. No longer will Nino Benvenuti, the middleweight champion, be able to ignore the 32-year-old Grif-Griffith simply because he's eliminated every other contender.

"I don't want to talk about fighting Benvenuti because he keeps ducking me," Griffith said, "but I don't see how he can keep it up. He signed quick to fight Carlos Monzon a couple of weeks ago because he didn't want to wait around and see if I beat Tiger."

VICTORIES

This year, Griffith convincingly knocked off three top middleweight contenders — Doyle Baird, Carlos Mark and Tom Bogs—before ripping off a victory over Tiger, who was a top light heavyweight contender. Weighing against his chances of getting another title bout with Benvenuti, however, is the fact that Griffith lost two of their three previous middleweight title fights.

"By the sixth round I knew I had it won," the Virgin Islander, who has a 64-11 record said. "I was leading by so much that in a clinch I told Tiger that I still wanted to be his friend even though he lost."

It was a bitter defeat for Tiger, who came out of Nigeria to win the world middleweight and light heavyweight titles and run up a 61-17-3 record during his 18-year career. Baffled by the jitterbugging Griffith, Tiger tried to lure him within range with grotesque imitations of Griffith by dropping his hands to his side and bouncing up and down.

The closes thing to a knockdown came in the fifth round when Tiger missed a punch and fell to the canvas. He has always claimed that a similar slip, which was ruled a knockdown by the referee, cost him his middleweight title back in 1966 in their previous meeting when Griffith won by the narrowest of decisions.

Tiger, who at 167 pounds held a 10-pound advantage, sought to avenge that disputed loss, but his body no longer responded.

Sanders, Nicklaus In Field

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Doug Sanders has to be a glutton for punishment.

On Monday, he suffered a heartbreaking loss when Jack Nicklaus edged him by one stroke in a playoff for the British Open championship.

Today, he and 146 other players tee off in the opening of the $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic at the suburban Whitemarsh Valley Country Club.

Nicklaus, fresh from his British Open win and his first major championship in three years, was among those topping the field seeking the $30,000 first prize in the four-day tourney over the par 72, 6,708-yard course.

Others included a reluctant defending champion Dave Hill, Lee Trevino, leading money winner on the tour so far this year, Masters champion Billy Casper, Don January, Dan Sikes and Bob Murphy.

Hill explained that he has been feeling "very weak and tired" the past several weeks and would not have been here if he had not been the defending champion. He said he had played only about four times in the past three weeks.

January tuned up for the event by carding a seven-under par 65 to capture the $500 first prize in Wednesday's pro-am. His round included nine birdies, marred only by bogeys on the fourth and 18th holes.

Pond Paces Novato Win

Novato's American Legion baseball team stormed to its fourth consecutive victory yesterday, routing Vallejo, 13-5 at Vallejo.

First baseman Steve Pond went five for five to pace Novato, which leads the second half of the Northern California Junior league's double round robin season with a 4-1 record. Overall the team is 9-4.

Novato	010	116	013—	13	16 3

Jarcik, Travel Teams Triumph

Jarcik Insurance defeated the Sausalito Boat House, 62-60 behind Steve Bryant's 22 points, and Pat Shafer scored 20 to lead San Rafael Travel past Harvey Wallbanger last night in the Drake summer basketball league.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

HOLD BACK THE YAWNS

It's Tough To Get Excited About Season's 2nd Half

NEW YORK (UPI)—Baseball fans looking ahead to the second half of the season may find it hard to suppress a yawn. After all, what's to get excited about?

Fat cats are sitting contentedly on top of three of the four major league divisions, and it looks as if the other clubs in those divisions haven't the strength to play "king of the mountain." Who's going to knock off Cincinnati, for example? The Reds are 10 games in front in the National League West and scarcely breathing hard.

NOT LIKELY

With 21-year-old Wayne Simpson at 13-1 and Jim Merritt at 14-7 backed by a lineup that haunts the dreams of opposing pitchers, it isn't likely the Reds will be headed off.

Just run down the batting order and shudder: Tony Perez, .356 with 29 homers and 90 runs-batted-in (the last two figures lead the league) and Johnny Bench right behind Perez with 28 homers and 79 RBIs. "Trailing" are Pete Rose at .323 and Bobby Tolan, .316.

In the American League East, Baltimore seems to have exposed the New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers as pretenders by capturing series from both clubs just before the All-Star break. The Orioles are impressive with Frank Robinson, the league leader with .330 and Boog Powell, who is hitting .320 with 23 homers and 73 runs-batted-in. Add to their assets a Brooks Robinson — ever the wizard with the glove —who is enjoying one of his finest seasons at the plate with a .288 average and 54 RBIs, and three first-rate pitchers in Jim Palmer (12-6), Dave McNally, (12-6) and Mike Cuellar (11-5), It's easy to see why the Birds hold a six-game lead.

BY FIVE

Minnesota leads the second-place California Angels in the American League West by five games. The Twins have a powerful lineup which includes Harmon Killebrew, who is hitting .322 and leading the league with 26 homers and 73 RBIs, Tony Oliva at .328 with 63 RBIs and Cesar Tovar at .319. The ace of the Twins' pitching staff is Jim Perry with a 13-7 record.

The only division with exciting prospects for the coming weeks is the National League East. A hot pennant fight is shaping up there between the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Mets, with a possible contender in the revived Chicago Cubs.

The Pirates, now leading the Mets by 1 1-2 games, vaulted into first place before the All-Star game with a four-game sweep of the St. Louis Cardinals. At the same time, the Mets were dropping three of four games to their persistent bugaboos, the last-place Montreal Expos. The pesky Expos have won eight of 12 games from the Mets this year.

BACK WINNING

Chicago, which went into a tailspin earlier in the season when it lost 12 straight games, one short of the club record, surges into the second half of the season with six victories in its last eight starts. The Cubs are now five games back.

Pittsburgh boasts a strong lineup, headed by Roberto Clemente who is hitting .358. The Mets hold their strong suit in their pitching staff led by Tom Seaver, currently 14-5.

The Cubs have Jim Hickman, one of the heros of the All-Star game, at .335 and Bill Williams, also among the top 10 batting leaders, with .317. All-Stars Glenn Beckert and Don Kessinger also add strength at the plate and on the field.

Ruggers' First Loss

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI)—The University of California rugby team absorbed the first setback of its current global tour when beaten 25-15 Wednesday by Sydney University.

U.S. Track Stars Lead Germans

STUTTGART, Germany (UPI) —The lifetime best of a 30-year old veteran helped the youngest track and field team ever to represent the United States gain a comfortable lead over West Germany Wednesday after the first day of their two-day dual meet.

Bill Skinner of the University of Tennessee threw the javelin 291 feet 10 inches in his fourth try to win the event.

"It was the best performance of the day on our side," coach Leroy Walker said.

oGing into today's competition, the United States was leading 58-48, following victories in the 100 and 400 meters, sprint relay, 400 meter hurdles, pole vault and javelin.

Other American winners included Ben Vaughan, who clocked a wind-aided 10.0 seconds for 100 meters, John Smith with 45.1 seconds in the 400 meters, Ralph Mann in the 400 meter hurdles with a time of 49.3 seconds and Sam Carruthers in the pole vault with a leap of 17 feet, 3-4 inches.

Intrepid Remains Unbeaten

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The wind conditions were different in the America's Cup observation trials Wednesday but the results were the same — Intrepid won.

The wind, blowing about 15 miles per hour, was stronger than it has been in the 10 days of trials but it made little difference to Intrepid which beat Valiant by 2 minutes, 36 seconds to remain unbeaten.

Baseball

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox yesterday optioned pitcher Jose Santiago to Louisville of the International League in order to make room for the return of pitcher Jim Lonborg. Winner of the 1967 American League Cy Young Award, Lonborg was placed on the disabled list last month after injuring his shoulder.

Football

PHILADELPHIA — John Carlos, San Jose State track great turned professional football player, was to undergo surgery today to repair torn ligaments in his right knee suffered yesterday during a light workout while trying to learn the Philadelphia Eagles' pass patterns. He will be out of uniform for at least six weeks.

IRVINE, Calif. — Lamar Lundy, traded during the offseason to San Diego after 13 years with the Los Angeles Rams, has retired from pro football because of knee problems.

Charger general manager Sid Gilman made the announcement yesterday, saying that doctors said Lundy's knee is not strong enough to allow him to continue to play. "There was no finer player and there is no finer person than Lamar Lundy," Gillman said.

Track

SAN FRANCISCO — Gayle Hopkins, former All-American and Olympian, has been named to succeed Bob Lualhati as head track coach at San Francisco State College. Hopkins, a long jumper, who holds single season and career scoring records at Arizona State, will take over in the fall for Lualhati, who will become head track coach at Skyline Junior College in San Bruno.

Golf

OKLAHOMA CITY — Defending champion Allen Miller was matched against George Haines of Far Hills, N.J., in today's second round of the Trans- Mississippi Golf Tournament. Haines yesterday defeated former Walker Cupper Ed Updegraff, and Miller downed Steve Homsley of San Antonio, Tex.

Two rounds of match play were scheduled for today to cut the championship flight to eight men for the quarterfinals tomorrow.

Pirates To Open New Stadium

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—New stadiums and pennants don't necessarily go together, but the last time the Pittsburgh Pirates opened a stadium, they won a pennant.

That was in 1909, and it was at Forbes Field.

Tonight the Pirates, leading the National League's Eastern Division, open Three Rivers Stadium against the Cincinnati Reds, who lead the West, and who dedicated their own new stadium last month.

NINTH

It will be the ninth modern National League park opened since 1960 and, curiously, none of them have hosted a World Series in the first year of operation.

The St. Louis Cardinals won pennants in 1964, 1967 and 1968, but in 1966, when they moved into Busch Memorial Stadium, they finished sixth.

The Dodgers have won four pennants since moving to Los Angeles, but one of them was not in 1962—the year they opened Dodger Stadium—even though they won 102 games.

San Francisco won that year, in a playoff. In 1960, when Candlestick Park opened, the Giants finished fifth.

Nobody thought of a pennant when the Mets inhabited Shea Stadium for the first time in 1964, nor when Houston moved into the Astrodome or San Diego joined the league with its new park. The Braves won pennants in Milwaukee, but notta pennants in Milwaukee, but not in their new Atlanta Stadium.

This year, perhaps it will be different... Both division leaders play in new parks.

Most of the Pittsburgh players, especially the hitters, look forward to Three Rivers. They should hit more home runs than they did at Forbes Field.

In a recent Forbes Field game, Willie Stargell hit a ball that was caught behind the flagpole in centerfield, 457 feet from home plate. At Three Rivers Stadium, it would have cleared the fence by 47 feet.

NOT COMPLETED

Three Rivers Stadium will not be 100 per cent completed tonight—new stadiums rarely are—and so there will be plenty of grumblings from inconvenienced fans.

When they opened the Astrodome, they found out grass wouldn't grow under glass. Shea Stadium had some massive traffic jams.

Athletics In New York Doubleheader

NEW YORK (UPI)—Hoping for some sort of transformation during the All-Star break, the Oakland A's step into the second half of their season with visions of a charge toward first place.

Oakland trails Minnesota by 9 1-2 games in the American League West after a disappointing first half of the season in which starting pitchers were repeatedly rocked from the mound and potentially explosive hitters did not deliver in the clutch.

Today the A's challenge the New York Yankees in a twinbill introducing an eight-game road trip which goes through Boston and concludes in Washington.

Segui and Fingers were inserted as regulars in the starting rotation after Jim Nash was traded to Atlanta, John Odom was shelved with an elbow injury and Al Downing was traded following an unimpressive stay.

Each hurler has held his own as a starter, but the A's still are hurting for a consistent winner. Odom, who comes off the disabled list shortly, could be the answer if his elbow is healed.

Segui, 4-5 with a 2.78 earned run average, fired a complete game win over Milwaukee in his last outing. Fingers, 5-7 with a 3.34 ERA, has been the one starter to whom the A's batters have given very little offensive support.

Moorings Ruined: Pollution

Some of the mooring buoys in the Ayala Cove area of Angel Island are no longer usable and Kenneth Huddleston, manager of the island, lays the blame directly on pollution in San Francisco Bay.

Following design plans used at Catalina Island in Southern California, buoys were installed with tie lines around the area. The Catalina and Angel Island areas differed drastically.

"It was an engineering boo boo," admitted Huddleston. "There is too much pollution in San Francisco Bay," he said, "and it causes the ropes to become covered with mud and marine growth. No one wants to handle ropes which are covered with that."

For the present, Huddleston said boaters should only use the large white buoys and disregard the smaller orange styrofoam floats. He said additional stern tie-off buoys will be installed in the future, "but that could be anywhere between two months and a year from now."

Huddleston also cautioned boaters to use fenders when using the floating slips because of winter storm damage to the slips, although he said he hadn't received any complaints about them.

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG

An easy position to check, and certainly an important one, is the relation of the ball and your left foot at the moment of release. Both should arrive at the foul line at the same time. If the left foot arrives first, you'll force the swing and often drop the ball behind the foul line.

said Dolinsek, adding that he felt fortunate to play college ball at Arizona State under Bob Winkle, who taught him this mental approach. "He is a fantastic man. For any of the success I've had so far I give him all the credit."

Although under the situation he will have to change his mind, Dolinsek is not fond of the thought of playing baseball on Astroturf, which must be blasphemy in Houston Astrodome circles.

"I've played on real grass fields all my life but I guess I will just have to get used to the fact that artificial turf is here now," he said.

John and his wife, the former Sue Spencer (also a 1966 Novato High graduate) and their two-year-old daughter, Jana, now are making their off season home in Tempe, Ariz. Sue still has two more years of college to go, while John has less than a year with plans of going for a masters degree in science after getting his B.A.

"Baseball is too uncertain a thing," he said. "I want to make sure I get my college."

Smart man that Dolinsek; he's going places.

Lake Tahoe Golf Tourney Planned

RENO (UPI)—Harrah's Club has announced plans for a Reno invitational golf tournament Oct. 12-15 at Reno and Lake Tahoe.

The tournament will be played at the Hidden Valley Country Club course and the Washoe County Golf course at Reno, and the Incline Village course at Lake Tahoe.

Sports figures and celebrities will be invited to the amateur event.

Fosse Out Of Game Tonight

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Ray Fosse, the Cleveland Indians' young rookie catcher who was bowled over as the winning run scored in the All-Star baseball game, will miss tonight's game against Kansas City.

Fosse's shoulder was badly bruised in the collision Tuesday night with the Cincinnati Reds' Pete Rose.

"I won't be able to play with this pain," the 23-year-old Fosse said. "It's okay unless I raise my arm."

Indians trainer Wally Brock said Fosse will feel pain for at least three days.

"But there is no separation," said Brock, "and the shoulder should loosen up in the next 24 hours."

While the rest of the Indians worked out at the stadium Wednesday, Fosse underwent heat treatments. They start a three-game series tonight in Kansas City.

Fosse said he thought Rose was going around him at the plate, "but he started to dive and had no place to go."

Junior Action At Meadow

Twenty-four golfers, ages 12-17, were to battle at Meadow Club in Fairfax this afternoon for nine qualifying places in the Northern California Golf Association Junior Amateur Championships, to be held next month at Lake Merced Golf and Country Club in Daly City. Meadow Club is one of 10 qualifying courses for the event.

Meadow Club's own junior invitational will be held next Monday, with some 50 golfers competing in 17-and-under and 18-20 age groups. Play will be in twosomes, with golfers coming from throughout the bay area.

An estimated 70 persons are expected to play in Peacock Gap's Mixed Couples Tournament Sunday on the San Rafael course.

A five-week Sugar and Spice men's tournament at Sonoma National will begin this Sunday. More than 120 players have registered for the tourney.

50 Million See Game On TV

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Broadcasting Company said Wednesday that an estimated 50 million viewers watched Tuesday night's All-Star game.

The estimate was projected from rating figures gathered by the A.C. Nielsen Company, which showed record audiences in New York. According to the figures, the game received a record high 31.9 rating, eclipsing the previous high of 21.6 set in the 1968 All-Star game, a daylight affair.

NONALCOHOLIC ADULTS

18-Year-Old Vote Voted

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly, in a move to invite young people "inside the system," has approved legislation giving 18-year-old Californians the right to vote and share other responsibilities of adults.

Gov. Ronald Reagan told newsmen Wednesday he "leaned away" from giving the vote to 18-year-olds but added. "I think full citizenship has to go with it if you're going to have the right to vote."

The proposed constitutional amendment by Assemblyman John V. Briggs, R-Fullerton, was sent to the Senate on a 58-15 vote--in what was believed to be the first time in California history that such a measure cleared either house.

Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, said passage meant the Assembly was telling young people, "We trust you. We invite you inside the system."

The proposal lowers the age of legal adulthood from 21 to 18. If it clears the Senate and is approved by voters in November, 18-year-olds will be allowed to vote, serve on juries, run for public office, sign contracts, and be liable for debts.

But the measure does not allow 18-year-olds to drink.

Assemblyman William Ketchum, R-Paso Robles, declared he wouldn't vote for the measure unless it gave an 18-year-old boy or girl all the responsibilities of adulthood, including the right to drink.

"I have a couple of young people and I know they were kind of passing it around behind the barn before they were 21 and I know you did, too," Ketchum, the father of two grown children, told Briggs.

But Briggs said he did not want a lower drinking age included in his proposal because anti-liquor forces might rally to defeat the entire plan at the polls.

The constitutional change would take effect Jan. 1, 1972. The legislature would have the power to make exceptions, such as allowing 18-year-old defendants to be treated differently than persons over 23 in criminal cases.

The Youth Authority handles felony cases involving juveniles which now extends to persons up to 23 years of age. The authority has wide discretion in sentencing and releasing prisoners and the legislature could allow them to continue handling persons over 18 if the constitutional amendment is approved.

Briggs noted the U.S. Supreme Court is considering federal legislation which lowered the voting age nationally to 18. The federal law applies only to the voting age and does not lower the age of adulthood in other areas.

Briggs said California residents should have a chance at least to vote on whether they want 18-year-olds to be full adults.

Lawmakers Tell Secrets —Pentagon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Pentagon today accused a newly formed group of House and Senate members of publishing secret information concerning U.S. The cogressional group quickly denied it.

At issue was a 150-page report issued by 28 representatives and senators, calling themselves "Members of Congress for Peace Through Law." The report criticized high military spending and urged deemphasis of expensive land based nuclear missiles. The Defense Department said today the group published secret information without submitting it for clearance.

"While a great many of the figures were not accurate enough to affect national security, some of them were of an accuracy sufficient that we would have advised them to delete the figures in the interest of national security," Friedheim said.

He refused to identify the classified material, saying that "to pursue it in great detail here would be to further the damage that has been done."

A spokesman for the congressional group responded:

"I can say without qualification that the information in this report was drawn entirely from non-classified sources."

Ronald Tammen, staff consultant for the group, said, "I sat in on this from the very beginning and I can say without restriction that none of the material in this report was drawn from classified sources."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Doctor Has Collection Of Odd Noises Of Heart, Body Cavity

Doctor William Bennett Bean of Iowa City has many hobbies. One is collecting material referring to noises in the chest that can be heard by physicians without a stethoscope.

Many of these eerie sounds are loud heart murmurs. Plastic valves inserted into a defective heart may also give off a click that is audible to other persons in the room.

Dr. Bean was consulted by an elderly farmer who said his heart squeaked whenever he took a deep breath. But when he stripped for an examination, the medico was unable to detect the slightest noise. "No, no," the oldster insisted, "the squeak is there only when I'm dressed."

THE CURE — a little oil on his suspender pulley.

The chest and abdomen are separated by the diaphragm. Occasionally a loop of intestine that is distended with gas presses upward on the diaphragm in the vicinity of the heart. This provides the old ticker with a drum on which it beats merrily.

This happened to a 10-year-old boy who lived on the second floor. As the physician stood at the door of the house, he could hear the rhythmical thumping coming through the open window.

HAD THE BOY been older and married, his wife may have complained about the noise, especially at night when in bed. These individuals can be likened to the crocodile in "Peter Pan" who swallowed an alarm clock that ticked and ticked merrily as he walked about.

The chest may also act like a sounding board, especially when free air is present in the space between the chest wall and the lungs. The heart makes a racket as it flaps against the ribs. It may even swish or gurgle if there is fluid as well as air in the space.

THESE SENSATIONS are temporary and last from a few hours to two weeks.

CORRECTING DROPSY

REPLY

Yes, depending upon the origin of the swollen legs. When circulatory disorders, a dietary protein deficiency, or certain types of kidney or liver conditions are responsible, the swelling will disappear if the cause can be successfully treated. Dropsy of cardiac origin responds well to modern remedies that increase the elimination of tissue fluids. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on generalized edema.

NEEDN'T BULGE

H. S. writes: How long after a hysterectomy does it take for the stomach to return to its natural size?

REPLY

After the uterus is removed there is no reason why the stomach should become larger or smaller. If you refer to the size of the abdomen, much depends upon what you eat and how active you are after the operation. In some instances, loss of muscle tone following surgery leads to some abdominal sagging. Don't use the hysterectomy as an excuse for getting fat.

NO IMMUNITY

A. N. writes: If a person had a cancer and was cured, is he immune to further attacks?

REPLY

No. Some individuals have several cancers during their lifetime.

The Cost Of Cambodia: $55 Million?

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—The military and economic price tag for the United States in Cambodia this fiscal year could run to about $50 to $55 million, according to what well-informed U.S. sources here described today as a realistic view.

The total would include an approximately $30 million military aid program and a maximum of $20 million to $25 million in economic aid, the sources said.

These estimates are based on the needs of the war effort in Cambodia and the ability of the disrupted economy to pay for them balanced against opinion in the United States and the shrinking availability of funds because of the scaling down of U.S. involvement in the area, the sources said.

The estimates were made available as Finance Minister Kim Ang, a personal adviser to Premier Lon Nol, said Cambodia would have to depend on foreign aid if its economy is to survive the war with the Communists. He said the United States was the "No 1 hope" for economic assistance but that Cambodia also sought aid from Japan.

The U.S. expenses mentioned did not include costs of such expensive items as U.S. air interdiction of Communist supply route, U.S. air reconnaissance or air support of South Vietnamese or Khmer troops in Cambodia.

The United States is officially acknowledging only the interdiction of supply routes. As far as can be determined, all U.S. air activity is being regarded as an extension of the air war in South Vietnam and Laos and being paid for out of funds supplied for that purpose.

According to Cambodian Finance Minister Ang, the Lon Nol government has already asked the United States for cash grants totalling more than $127 million to cover increased military expenses and losses in government revenue.

Fetus Death Murder Bill Gains Nod

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The killer of an unborn baby could be prosecuted for murder under a bill which today reached the Assembly floor.

Approved Wednesday by the Criminal Procedure Committee, the measure by Assemblyman Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, would include unborn fetuses in the definition of human being used in murder and manslaughter laws.

He told the committee the bill would bring "the intentional unlawful killing of a fetus" under the laws.

The lawmaker introduced the bill last month after the state Supreme Court ruled that a fetus could not be considered a human being under the legal definition of murder. Biddle said he was "shocked and disappointed" at the ruling and introduced his bill "in direct response."

Originally the bill covered the killing of a fetus past the 20th week of pregnancy, but Biddle amended it to include fetuses at any stage of development.

Abortions legal under present law would remain legal, he said. And any abortion, legal or illegal, performed with the consent of the mother would not be murder. It would be prosecuted under abortion laws.

An illegal abortion performed against the will of the mother would be murder.

The Supreme Court's ruling came in the case of an Amador County man charged with murder of an unborn child carried by his ex-wife. The man admitted kicking the woman in the abdomen and she delivered a stillborn fetus with a fractured skull.

Reagan Drives For Tax Reform Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan appealed to California voters today to put pressure on Democratic state senators to approve the administration's $1 billion tax revision plan.

And, Reagan said he was "reasonably optimistic" no new taxes would be required next year despite insistence of Democratic gubernatorial nominee Jess Unruh that a minimum increase of $400 million will be necessary.

"Our goal is to come forth with a balanced budget with no tax increase," the governor told a news conference Wednesday. He declined to rule out new taxes completely.

He repeated his belief that federally mandated welfare programs and increased costs of education could dictate new taxes in 1971.

The governor issued a personal appeal to voters to intercede on his behalf in a battle with Democrats in the Senate where his tax program has one more hurdle to clear.

Reagan accused the Democrats of devising "hurriedly dreamed-up alternatives which are political expediencies designed to obstruct true tax reform."

"Their ill-conceived program would offer a limited measure of property tax relief and finance it by increases in income taxes for the lower and middle income earner," he added.

Reagan said his Assembly-passed package would provide "meaningful and lasting property tax relief" and noted the Senate is the last obstacle in achieving it.

"I am therefore urging all Californians to let their senators know that property tax relief can be accomplished now," he said.

The Senate Finance Committee Wednesday approved the tax reshuffle program after rejecting attempts by Democrats to amend their own program into it.

There are 20 Republicans, 19 Democrats and one vacancy in the upper house. It takes 21 votes to pass one of the governor's bills and 27 votes for the other. Democrats say they have enough support to stymie one of them.

The governor's program would grant between 20 per cent and 40 per cent property tax relief to homeowners and a $50 state income tax credit to renters.

It would raise the money to finance the tax relief primarily through imposition of a payroll withholding system of the income tax and a 1-cent increase in the statewide sales tax.

Democrats assail the sales tax hike as regressive because they say it hits the poor person hardest. Their plan would offer similar property tax relief and a $70 check to all renters. They would also impose withholding and narrow the first income tax bracket to raise the needed revenue.

The governor also denounced officials who have criticized his tax shift, which sets a ceiling on school district expenditures. An increase in spending would have to be approved by voters.

Fire Guts Unit In Housing Project

According to firemen, the blaze began about 1:16 p.m. in a closet of the Connie Barrow home, Apartment T107. Within minutes, the apartment's four rooms were engulfed in flames. Firemen, who are still investigating the cause, say it may have been caused by faulty wiring.

The flames caused smoke damage to two other units in the building, which is owned by the Marin County Housing Authority.

Truck Rolls, Two Soldiers Hospitalized

Two soldiers, said to be absent without leave from Fort Ord, were hospitalized, today when their pickup truck rolled down a hill in Novato, police said.

They were given emergency treatment at Novato General Hospital and Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital before being transferred to Letterman General Hospital in San Francisco.

Hospitalized with facial cuts and other injuries was Pfc. Kenneth Wayne Ball, 19. Pfc. Lonnie Wayne Price, 20, suffered a broken right leg and body bruises, according to the hospital.

Police reported that at 1:27 a.m., the two drove up a fire road on a steep hill behind the 900 block of Sunset Parkway. The truck rolled down the hill, overturning at least three times and possibly running over Ball, the driver, police said.

Again Heads Board

Hugh Dougherty has been re-elected president of the Stinson Beach County Water District board and James V. Stevens was chosen vice president. Stevens was also named to represent the district on a committee to review progress on a joint sewage disposal system being planned with the Bolinas Public Utility District.

Legal Notice

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
SCOWN LANE IMPROVEMENT
PROJECT 69-019
CITY OF NOVATO
MARIN COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Finance Director, City of Novato, California, until 4:00 o'clock p.m., on Monday, July 27, 1970, for the furnishing of all plant, labor, materials, tools, equipment and machinery necessary for the construction of Scown Lane Improvement Project 69-019.

The proposals will be publicly opened and read in the office of the Finance Director on the date and at the time mentioned above. Plans and specifications and proposal forms, may be obtained at the office of the City Engineer upon payment of a non-refundable printing and service charge in the amount of Three Dollars ($3.00). Other fee documents available from the City which may be applicable to this project are as follows: Novato Standard Specifications - $3.00, Uniform Standard Drawings of all Cities and County of Marin - $1.00. All checks shall be made payable to the City of Novato, and should be mailed to the Public Works Department, City of Novato.

The work to be done includes, but is not necessarily limited to: installing redwood header, roadway grading and construction, drainage facilities, PCC driveway approach and valley gutter and all appurtenances necessary for the successful completion of the project as shown on the plans and specifications.

Notice is hereby given that on June 9, 1970, the City Council adopted a resolution determining the general prevailing rate of wages applicable to the work to be done, which shall be the minimum rates paid on this project, a copy of which wage scale is attached hereto.

The City reserves the right to reject any or all bids, to waive any informality in a bid, and to make award as the interests of the City may require. This notice is given by order of the Council of the City of Novato, California.

No bid will be received unless it is made on proposal form furnished by the City Engineer. Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified or cashier's check or bid bond in the amount of ten percent (10%) of the estimated aggregate amount of the bid as a guarantee that the bidder, if the award is made to him in accordance with the terms of his proposal, will promptly execute a contract in the required form, secure payment of workmen's compensation insurance, and furnish a satisfactory faithful performance bond and a labor and material bond. Each of said bonds shall be in the sum of not less than one hundred percent (100%) of the estimated aggregate amount of the payments to be made under the contract, computed on the basis of the price stated in the proposal. In addition to the above, and if requested by the City, the bidder shall furnish a financial statement of recent date. Failure to comply with this requirement will render a bid informal and shall be sufficient cause for rejection.

The contractor shall complete the construction of the total project within thirty (30) working days, the first day of which shall be the date of the City Engineer's notice to proceed.

Sonoma Rejects Sales Office For Jenner Plan

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Plans for a sales office at the Jenner Bay Development on the Russian River have been rejected by the Sonoma County oBard of Supervisors.

The board, in denying an appeal from a planning commission decision Tuesday objected to the proposed location because it would block ocean views from Shoreline Highway.

The denial was made without prejudice so that the developers may rearrange the plans and reapply at any time.

The developers plan a combination of single-family homes, condominium apartments and commercial parcels on 1,100 acres west of Shoreline Highway and south of the Russian River.

Open Meeting Bill Bagley Proposed Signed By Reagan

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation prohibiting state and local agencies from conducting meetings, conferences or other functions in places that discriminate has been signed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The bill is AB 1319 by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.

Meetings will be barred in places that discriminate on the basis of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry or sex.

Bagley introduced the measure after a woman reporter for a wire service was denied admission to a public conference the governor held in a Sacramento club that does not admit women.

Arraignment Set In Assault Case

Stephen Orlando Marez, 30, of San Francisco, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court, charged with felonious assault of his estranged wife last year in Novato.

He is to be arraigned next Wednesday.

Marez was arrested last month on a year-old warrant. He is charged with giving his wife such a severe beating and kicking at a party in Novato on May 25, 1969, that she was hospitalized for two weeks.

FOUR-LETTER WORDS

Student Feels Love, Fear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — James P. Clark, 22, makes free use of a couple of four-letter words when he tries to explain his generation to his elders.

One is "love." The other is "fear."

When the first atomic bombs were exploded 25 years ago this month, Clark was not yet born.

Clark, a native of Warren, Pa., was graduated last month from Georgetown University. He had majored in English. Next year, thanks to a scholarship, he will start studying law at New York University.

Clark was chosen by his classmates to be the student speaker at the Georgetown commencement exercises. He addressed himself to his parents and to the other parents present.

He said plainly that he was opposed to "the system" under which he had grown up. He pledged himself to do what he could to change it.

He said it without hate or rancor. He said it with "love."

The generation to whom he spoke had made it possible for the generation to which he belonged to live and go to school without worries about food or clothing or the manifold other necessities which some of those present had found wanting when they were young.

"We are proud of you," Clark told his elders, "and love you for your sacrifices."

Nevertheless, he said, in addition to the material plenty, his generation had inherited a legacy it could not stomach. Again he resorted to a four-letter word—"fear."

"We are more than spoiled and overprivileged," he said. "We are afraid—for ourselves, for our peoples, for our world.

"Most of the students who graduate today have never been cognizant of a time in their lives when a man they had never seen in a distant city might not destroy them and everything they had ever known, merely by pushing a button.

"No other generation has faced the imminent possibility of seeing in its lifetime a murdered earth become the end product of man's very existence."

Clark said in his speech and in a later conversation with United Press International that he did not, by any means, consider himself a spokesman for all students. He has participated in student protests, but he does not think of himself as an "activist." He is opposed to violence, by his or any other generation.

Clark's generation, which grew up in the 1950s and 1960s, had no clear understanding of the travails of the Great Depression of the 1930s which wounded many members of the preceding generation.

But it grew up in a period when the intercontinental ballistic missile, the U-2 spy planes, the Cuban Missile Crisis, were the big news of the moment.

"We saw developing," Clark said, "a national paranoia that turned into a non-morality which insisted that a protective 'first strike,' or shooting your neighbor if he were to try to get into your fallout shelter, were somehow justified.

"As a grade-schooler, I remember waking in the middle of the night to hear distant thunder and trembling to wonder if the Russians were bombing our cities.

"Many of us came to identify nuclear war with the end of the world we heard so much about in Sunday School.

"We did not outgrow this childhood fear. During my first year in Georgetown, a small group of students through a cruel trick convinced an entire dormitory floor of sophomores that a nuclear attack had been launched by the Soviet Union.

Settlers, Tribesmen Battle For Philippine Tribal Lands

MANILA (UPI)—The Philippine government is faced with an explosive situation in its southern frontier provinces similar to the confrontation in the old American West between white settlers and the Indians.

This time the fight is between Christian Filipino settlers and primitive native tribesmen in remote areas on the big, southern Philippine island of Mindanao. The issue is the same—land.

The center of the conflict in Mindanao is mineral-rich Cotabato province where Manobo tribesmen are reported on the verge of an uprising.

The Manobos, who for generations had been living a simple nomadic life and hunting food with bows and arrows, have found themselves dispossessed of their tribal 13,000-acre reservation. They claim land-hungry settler have the backing of bribed government soldiers and corrupt politicians.

The breaking point came in June when the house of Manobo chieftain Ma Falen was set on fire.f His 16-year-old daughter was trapped and burned to death inside. Several days later, two constabulary soldiers were killed in apparent retaliation.

Ma Falen, 55, and his estimated 5,000 followers retreated into the forests when they realized settlers and soldiers were after them. After about two weeks in hiding, Ma Falen surrendered through a government intermediary for peace talks with officials in Manila.

But Ma Falen made it clear he would settle for nothing less than equal justice for his tribesmen and the return of their land.

The Cotabato land dispute has gained nationwide attention in the Philippines because of the alleged involvement of a prominent politician and a government agency.

Congressman James Chiongbian of Cotabato accused the presidential assistant on national minorities, Manuel Elizalde Jr., of stirring up unrest in the province by providing arms to the Manobo tribesmen.

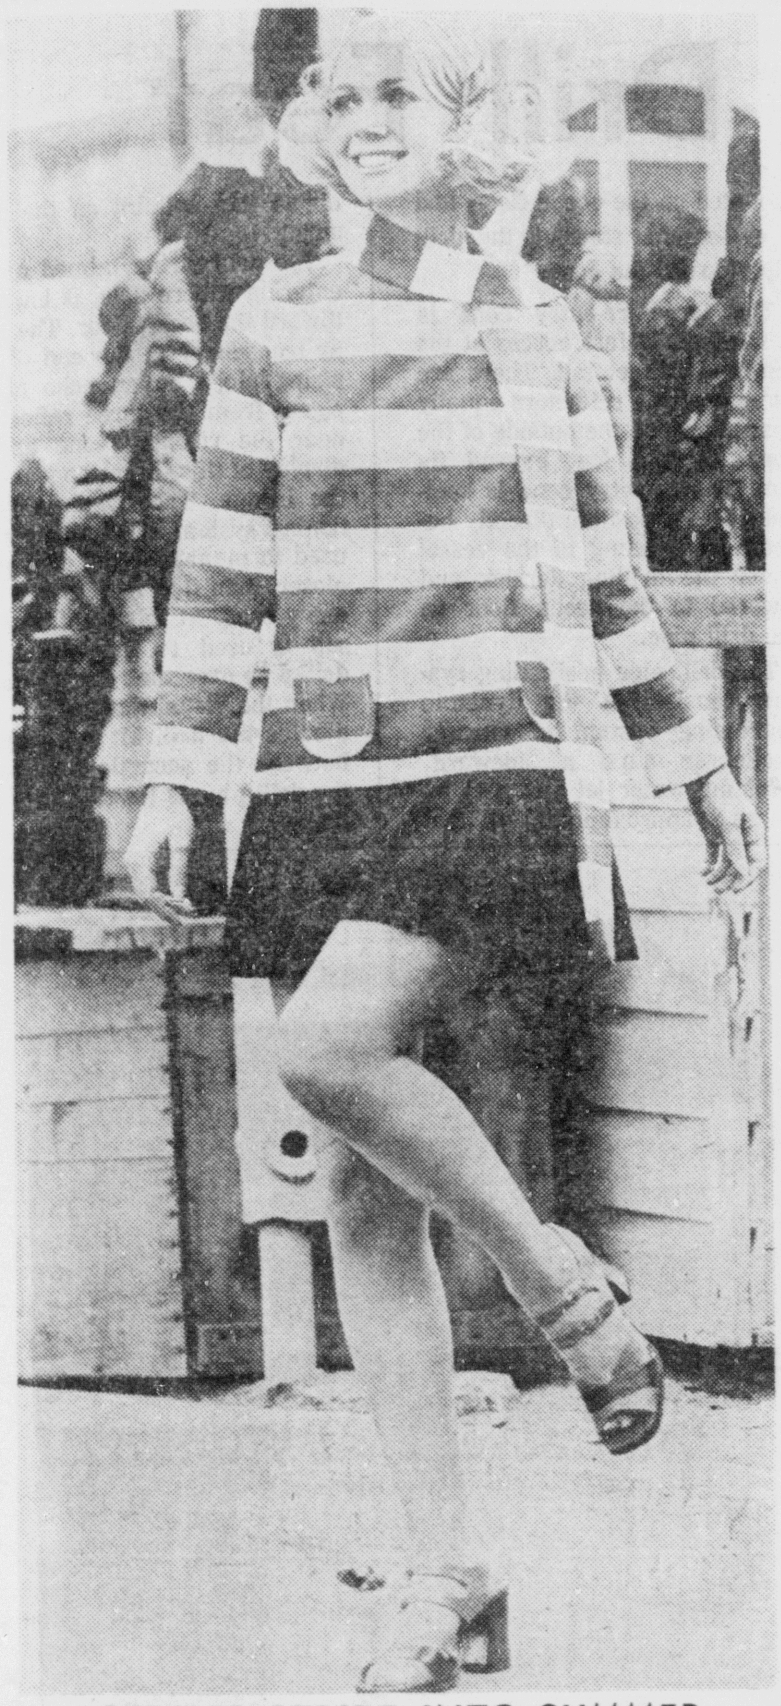
Elizalde, a millionaire philanthropist who has been helping resettle many tribal groups scattered in the Philippines, denied the allegation. In turn, he accused Chongbian of grabbing the Manobo lands in Cotabato because of his mining claims in the area.

The Philippine Congress has decided to send an investigating team to the area. Mamintal Tamano, the only Moslem member of the Philippine Senate, will lead it.

Tamano, a law graduate from Cornell University, in Ithaca, N.Y., said the land dispute in Cotabato is symptomatic of the unrest in the southern Philippines, his home region. He said the estimated 3 million Filipino minorities in the south have long been exploited by Christians, and their impatience is now erupting into open defiance against government authority.

"It is about time that the government really does something before the unrest reaches a magniture when it is helpless to contain the situation," Tamano said.

"It's all very, very sad," he said.



STRIPES STRIDE INTO SUMMER

Red and white stripes let loose unexpectedly at the hipline with a burst of blue pleats in this long-lined skimmer. The Encron polyester fabric assures a neat, no-wrinkle appearance all day — right down to the scarf and tiny patch pockets. The slinky knit is machine washable and dryable, as well.

Unique Program Will Teach Intensive Care Of Infants

I-J Special Report

SAN DIEGO — A unique program to train physician-nurse teams from community hospitals in San Diego and Imperial counties in the intensive care of newborn infants will be launched this fall at University Hospital.

Dr. Louis Gluck, Professor of Pediatrics, UCSD School of Medicine, and head of the training course, said it will be patterned after a program he initiated at Yale-New Haven Medical Center before joining the UCSD staff last year.

He said enrollees, representing six or eight community hospitals in each course, will include the physician in charge of newborn service at each hospital plus the nurse heading that hospital's infant Intensive Care Unit.

The purpose of the undertaking, Dr. Gluck said, is to improve premature and newborn care.

"Of every 1,000 babies born in the United States today, 22 won't live to blow out the candles on their first birthday cake," he noted.

University Hospital currently is running its own training course in newborn medical problems, and this will serve as the local prototype for the two to four eight-week courses to follow next year.

Dr. Gluck explained that University Hospital's Infant Special Care Center will serve as a center for taking in difficult neonatal medical problems.

The program will serve as a model, he said, and its facilities will be available to the San Diego community as a public service.

Many traditional hospital concepts in the care of newborn infants may fall by the wayside at the new center. For instance, the "stick-in-the-mud" arrangements of incubators around the wall of the special care unit will be altered by the installation of ceiling outlets for oxygen, compressed air, suction and electrical outlets.

Sonar Aids Ocean Drill Feat

I-J Special Report

Engineers and drillers aboard an American ship have lowered a drill string through water two miles deep and successfully steered the drill bit back into a 12-inch hole on the ocean floor through a 16-foot cone.

The technological feat, conducted from the ship Glomar Challenger in connection with the National Science Foundation's Deep Sea Drilling Project (DSDP), constitutes a major technological advance according to Dr. William D. McElroy, NSF Director.

"The establishment of the capability of re-entering a deep ocean-floor drill hole is a major and exciting technological achievement for which the contributing scientists, engineers, and technicians are to be congratulated. This achievement certainly broadens the scientific possibilities of the Drilling Project and opens the door to a new era in ocean exploration for scientific and industrial purposes."

The 10,000-foot-plus drill string was maneuvered by Captain Joe Clarke into the cone for the first time.

To steer the drill string into such a small target through sonar scanning and the vessel's dynamic positioning system will now enable engineers to replace worn drill bits and assure drilling through layers of chert, or flint-like rock. On previous expeditions, chert dulled the bits and forced premature termination of many holes before scientific objectives were achieved.

The Glomar Challenger tests in the Atlantic Ocean were conducted by engineers of EDO Western, which supplied the scanning sonar used in the re-entry system; Global Marine, Inc., which owns and operates the ship and performs the drilling; and Scripps Institution of Oceanography, which manages the Deep Sea Drilling Project under contract to the National Science Foundation.

The re-entry system consists of a high-resolution scanning sonar system that "looks downward through the drill bit on the lower end of the drill string, a funnel-shaped re-entry cone mounted on the ocean floor, and a system for steering the drill pipe toward the cone.

The large re-entry cone is hexagonal, 16 feet across at the top, and 14 feet tall. There are three acoustic reflectors equally spaced around the outside of the cone about 4 feet beyond its rim. The re-entry cone is keel-hauled to a position directly beneath an opening in the vessel under the drilling derrick and lowered to the ocean floor on the drill pipe.

The drill pipe positioning system consists of the dynamic positioning system of Glomar Challenger and a sideward-thrusting water jet (jet-sub) located approximately 60 feet above the drill bit on the drill string.

The drill string, aimed at re-entering a bore hole, is lowered toward the ocean floor. The sonar transducer at the end of the string picks up an echo of its signal from the three reflectors near the re-entry cone and a display of this target appears on the bridge. The dynamic positioning system of Challenger is used to maneuver the drill pipe closer than 100 feet to the re-entry cone. At this point, the jet sub is used to maneuver the drill pipe over the re-entry cone. When the visual display unit indicates the drill bit is centered between the acoustic reflectors, the drill pipe is lowered into the funnel.

Yellow Cars Popular With The Young Set

HOLLAND, Mich. (UPI)—It's been years since yellow cars were popular, but they are back now—in a big way.

Yellow's return, says Rene Willis, Chemetron color expert, reflects the impact of the youth market which sets the trends for auto colors by demanding bright, even shocking, colors.

If the past repeats itself, however, yellow will give way in a couple of years to some other color as youthful tastes shift, he adds.
